BRAIDED RUGS FOR FUN AND PROFIT
by Margaret Ickis

Because it is easy to do, and because the finished rug is not only useful, but a charming "home brightener," making a braided rug offers the maker the richest of rewards. Here is the book that takes you by the hand and leads you through the very beginning—the getting together of the simple equipment—the collecting and preparing of the material—the tearing, cutting and joining strips of material—the planning and laying out of a pattern—then, the actual process of braiding, with every move carefully explained—the joining of the ends of braids by interweaving, the joining of braids with sewing or without sewing—up to the actual finishing of the rug. Profuse, step-by-step picture instructions, diagrams, patterns, designs and samples show the beginner or practicing craftworker everything that has to be known to be able to make braided rugs of every shape, size and color combinations; round, oval, half circle, square, rectangular—made with regular braids or with cores. A Brand-New Book and only..... $1.00

Your decorator turns to GOODALL FABRICS to create more beautiful rooms for you!

...New texture contrast in Goodall's "Cordon" upholstery completes this room color scheme

WHETHER your home is traditional or modern, your decorator turns to Goodall Fabrics to express the newest in fashion. The room pictured shows the scope Goodall gives your decorator in traditional alone...from the hand-printed drapery fabrics to the casements of sun-swept, champagne "Fleeceweave"...from the nubby chair upholstery to the softly inviting sofa fabric. And as a beige base...there's Goodall's deep-pile Lido Sand *Seamloc carpeting! The finished room...like all Goodall Fabrics interiors...is a beautiful coordination of mood and color.

The beauty of Goodall Fabrics is Blended-for-Performance to give you lasting loveliness. Each fabric is woven of a combination of several fibers: a variable blend of Angora Mohair for resilience and texture, rayon for subdued lustre, wool for body, and cotton for durability. That's why they drape so perfectly, hold their shape indefinitely...resist dust and wrinkling...need fewer cleanings...are so soft and comfortable to your touch. Goodall Fabrics give you longer wear and richer colors, too!

Decorator's Diary

Notes and jottings on what's new in home furnishings from the "little black book" of a market-wise decorator

Set out on my annual hunt for fireplace tools last week. Glum as could be. Never have relished the prospect of being shown the same old Colonial reproductions and the same old modernistic frighteners. But doggedness always wins—if you're dogged long enough! The end of this particular trail was Morton & Smillow's where they introduce me to a whole new group of fireplace accessories designed by George Nelson. There are three or four different styles of andirons, a combination andiron-and-coal-grate, a log basket, and a couple of tool sets—all in black iron. Could be very modern or very early American, depending on how you look at things. My favorites were the log cradle and the tools sets with polished birch handles. Liked the cradle because it looked so natural. Made me wonder why we ever tried to build fires by perching logs precariously on flat, narrow irons. In this device the logs have to roll together which automatically gives you a prettier,

I might very well have passed up "April Willow" if it hadn't been for Mrs. Gilbert. Not that I didn't think it was a very beautiful fabric.

"April Willow"

But who would ever pick a p in black and coppery tans o cream linen for a very beauti very elegant lady's bedroom? N Gilbert, however, is totally un dictable, which is why I took with me to J. H. Thorpe's in first place. She has a straig forward, open-minded approach life and everything in it wh seems to come from years of kn ing that she could have anyth she wanted and that there was one in the world she had to impr As ignorant of "the rules" as three-year-old. Her taste, comple ly original, though it would ne occur to her to strive for origin ity. She likes what she likes, a that's it.

So we ordered "April Willo and after a brief half-hour's c ference the rest of the room w settled. Walls, a coppery bei nylon carpeting, the same co but deeper. Draperies of "Ap Willow" across the entire wind wall. Bedspread and covering one small chair of rich raw s in a shade that's half way betwe copper-brown and apricot. Cha and big chair covered in plain cream-colored linen. Her long double chest and tea table are in a warm, medium-toned walnut, and she has a couple of small black Chinese chair-side tables.

Somehow, just because she was in no hurry, everything arrived in record time and was installed without a hitch. And it all adds up to a quiet, mellow background for her creamy-skinned, brunette beauty. She thanked me sincerely, but I couldn't help but feel that the job's success was really due to her inspiration. One shopping trip with Mrs. Gilbert and I look at everything with fresh eyes for the next three months.

The Densons ran smack into budget troubles last year after they moved. Seems they hadn't the faintest suspicion of the current costs of carpeting and drapery and slip-cover making. So by the time their floors, windows, and upholstery were taken care of, they had reached a dead end. Tables were what they were short of—a coffee table and lamp tables. (They had rashly donated what they had to the cleaning woman.) And t had big ideas about waiting u they could afford "something re good." But after ten months trying to balance ash trays on c arms, they would have been q happy to settle for beer barr Couldn't I find them someth cheap that would do at least u the twins got out of Lawrencevil Not a very easy assignment w everything else in the room really good! But I remembe seeing some tables at Richa Morganthau that seemed rat nice and reasonable. When I w back to check, discovered t were even better than I had membered. Very unassuming—ural birch plywood tops with wrought-iron frames and legs—but graceful enough to fit in with far more costly companions. And the prices were really in the beer-barrel range: around $20 for 30-inch square coffee table, and less than that for an 18-inch square lamp table. Ben Seibel was the bright young man who designed them.

Picked up a night lamp for Mrs. Oliphant while I was at Richards-Morganthau. She wanted something she could put on the chest in the bedroom hall so that she wouldn't have to grope her way to the nursery when Billy has nightmares. This one is shaped like a bee-hive. Has gray enameled metal shade pierced with star-shaped holes which fits over a frosted glass globe. There's a long brass handle at the top by which you can raise the shade for more light, or lower it for less. Makes a trim-looking accessory during the daytime since, unlike most night lamps, it's neither quaint nor tricky.

Spent most of yesterday consulting with the lighting designers at Sylvania Electric Products re: the Knowlton job. After lunch they took me on a tour of some of their installations. Got lots of good ideas but was most impressed by an ingenious little arrangement that had nothing at all to do with Knowlton's. It was a dressing table built into about two-by-four feet of space in a tiny hallway outside of a bathroom. Consisted of no more than a shelf-counter with drawer below, bridging a wall and a linen closet. Overhead were more shelves screened by an ordinary wood-slat roll blind, and the wall space between these and the counter was faced with mirror. All

HOW TO LEAVE HOME and like it

Early cooks hung tools like trophies.

Right now is a choice time to visit Old Sturbridge Village, up there in Massachusetts just above the Connecticut line. The foliage is all gilt and scarlet in the valley of the Quinebaugh and a fit frame for the authentic 1790 community that's been re-created on the river's bank. And if you happen to be a camera fan, October 7 is the best day of all. This is one of the Village's two annual Camera Days during which a group of models in eighteenth-century costume appear on the scene to pose and to entertain the camera-clicking gentry with country dances.

But at any time the Old Sturbridge Museum and Crafts Center is one of New England's more inspiring living museums. It consists of 35 buildings, most of them original, thoughtfully moved and reassembled on a spot convenient to U. S. Route 20 between Springfield and Worcester. It's a nice project in self-education to visit the shops, mills, and houses, the church, school, tavern, and general store which give you the full flavor of life as it was lived in the old days. For the youngsters, it's a (Continued on page 260)

home the most wonderful place in the world

You have probably dreamed about making your house the most wonderful place in the world—so your children would rather be there than anywhere else. Yet, in today's diverse, complex world, this is hard. HOUSE BEAUTIFUL presents this story of how Mr. and Mrs. Cliff May make home wonderful for their four children—ages six months to sixteen years. Over the past five years we have published 39 pages showing the way the Mays organized hundreds of details about their house and their living—at the adult level. Now, on these eight pages, we show how that same house provides an ideal way of life for their three girls and one boy. To see how they carry out their belief that nothing is too much trouble for the children. turn the page.

They turned their garden into a ballroom

The portable dance floor comes in small, easy-to-handle sections that fit snugly together with a special locking device. It can be laid on any reasonably level surface and makes a sturdy resilient surface that will withstand any amount of youthful jitterbugging. The Mays set up their floor on the lawn next to the terrace. Rental cost varies with size. Average floor 15′ x 18′ costs $22.50. Right, Father prepares many long sticks for roasting hot dogs.

The Mays will go to any length to make their home so attractive and pleasant that their daughter, Marilyn, and her teen-age friends prefer to do their partying there instead of at some roadside tavern. So even a project that calls for turning the garden into a ballroom to accommodate 30 or 40 youngsters for dancing and a barbecue is worth the effort.

Many advantages of an outdoor party: plenty of elbow room for teen-agers; since dance floor, barbecue, punch bowl are in same area; party doesn't split up; house is spared incalculable wear and tear.

Between dances, hostess Marilyn mans the punch bowl.

"Gee, neat party"—"Yeah, some fun!"

Pile of hot dogs soon disappeared.

The simple, cook-it-yourself kind of barbecue is the easiest way to cope with a crowd like this. Youngsters prefer eating in a big group outdoors to formalized sit-down parties indoors.

terrace, munched popcorn and potato chips, quenched their thirst with fruit punch, and danced interminably. Was the party a success? Just look at the pictures.

But aside from parties, everyday living is great fun at the Mays. There are so many diversified activities for every age group that no one is ever at a loss for something to do—whether it is swinging, climbing, Ping-pong, horseback riding or playing and listening to music. The house is so flexible that the family can eat, play, or relax as a group together, or enjoy complete privacy from each other if they so desire.

The Mays were conscious of the changing needs of their growing children and their house readily adapts to suit them. By cleaning out a garage that had been used as a storeroom, they made space for (Continued on page 168) a fun room where Marilyn and her teen-age friends could be off by themselves and relax completely without disturbing the household. The play yard, below, for Hilary, 5½, Melanie, 4, and, eventually, Michael, aged 6 months, was another concession the Mays made for their children. Instead of squeezing the play area into some remote corner, they gave up a big chunk of their garden so the kids could have this space handy to their nursery.

You can't copy what the Mays have done. That's a solution for a specific family. But if you follow their principle that nothing is too much trouble for the children, your home can be the most wonderful place in the world.

BEFORE: The Mays discovered teen-agers were happier—and less underfoot—if they had their own living room. So they gave up storage space in their garage, refinished inexpensively, and furnished it largely with things borrowed from their beach cabaña.

The nursery opens onto a play yard

With a well-equipped playground right off their bedroom, Hilary and Melanie can wander in and out without trailing toys and tracking dirt through the rest of the house. The Mays sacrificed part of their garden to gain this strategic location for the yard.

AFTER: Fun room was a sound investment. It gives Marilyn a well-equipped gathering place for her friends. For the Mays it means peace of mind because teen-agers are away from house but still at home. Piano is by Melodigrand, Inc. Television, Zenith. Lamps, Brach-Allen Studios.

New patterns in family living call for a room where parents and children can work and play together and share informal fun. The Vernon Searses found the need for one so great they added this modern room to a conventional house.

Materials should be the hardy kind that can withstand rough treatment by grade-schoolers and be slicked up in short order. This counter top, for instance, is covered with Kalistron upholstery plastic, which is impervious to spilled drinks.

The changing living habits of our times have produced a brand new kind of room

THE FAMILY ROOM

By Mary Roche

You don't dress your young daughters in pinafores or your sons in Buster Brown collars. You don't expect them to lead a life apart —from which you summon them now and then to parade before company. Today you expect to share your children's lives, and expect them to share a large part of yours. But few houses are geared for this kind of family living. It takes a new kind of room which is neither living room, rumpus room, nursery-playroom, nor party room. On the other hand it is all of these things—but with something else added. Analyze this room which architect Vernon Sears added to his house in Pelham. N. Y., and you will appreciate the difference. (Continued on next page)

Modern joins traditional without a clash. The Searses proved you don't have to match the style of a new wing to that of an old house to maintain architectural harmony. Addition was made by knocking out front wall of dining room; replacing with counter-high cabinets (see foreground at left).

ALL PHOTOGRAPHS BY EZRA STOLLER

Three kinds of vertical blinds control light and privacy of glass-walled addition. North wall (far left) has movable blinds inside. Street-front wall has movable blinds outside. Stationary blinds outside south wall shade interior when sun is low enough in east or west to escape overhang.

This family room is an integral part of the main living area—not relegated to the basement or a remote wing. It is good-looking but definitely informal, and its looks belie its sturdy maintenance-free qualities. It's the kind of room that is always in use by children or parents or both. During the day, six-year old Missie plays there under the watchful eye of Mother as she goes about her chores. When the boys come home from junior high. (Continued on page 292)

Music counter replaces wall of dining room, separates it from family room without cutting off light. Television set on lazy susan swivels to face either room. Tone is enhanced by multiple speakers: six on family-room side of music counter, plus others on dining-room side, in living room and terrace. Openings are screened with monk's cloth stretched on embroidery hoops. Indoor garden (left) is collection of potted plants set on lead-coated copper tray with drain pipe to ground. Splash-proof counter top is [illegible] U. S. Plywood Kalistron.

Plenty of storage space for toys, games and hobby equipment makes all the difference between a family room to be used 16 hours a day and a rumpus room used now and then for parties. The corrugated metal doors of the cupboards below the long counter under the window slide back and forth in grooves cut in the frame. Stow-away table consists of Kalistron-covered top which slides into groove below counter top, plus one flat leg to support free end. Its size is just right for children's games or for mother and daughter luncheons.

For construction data on the family room turn to page 293

Grown-ups share this room on a 50-50 basis, as they would not be likely to share a nursery-playroom. Glass top of card table is good defense against wet glasses and cigarettes. Captain's chairs are equally comfortable for television viewing. "Light mobile" composed of sculptured metal sheet and BX cable behaves like mobile sculpture, also provides good lighting. Opaque, double-hung window opens for ventilation since glass walls are fixed.

How to keep children in their

PHOTOGRAPH BY C. G. ROSENBERG

Pre-school children like to climb in, over, and through things, but older children quickly tire of this activity. So invest in boxes, barrels, ladders, or saw up tree trunks as they do in the parks in Stockholm, Sweden. Note that even simple play equipment can be good art, as evidenced by this tree-trunk jungle above and sandbox at right. Children naturally love beauty: expose them to it.

GERALDINE SCOTT, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT

By Dr. Joseph E. Howland
House Beautiful's Garden Editor

Children are happiest when they are doing something. They like to run, jump, swing, slide, climb, balance, or hang. But they tire quickly of repeating the same action. This is why filling the yard with mechanical play equipment is no guarantee they'll be happy. Better to stimulate self-activity. So give them things their imagination can work on. Sand and water and stuff easy to move, such as boards, boxes, barrels, ladders, and saw-horses, are suggestive and easily adapted to any imaginary situation by any age. They make the back yard a wonderful land of make-believe and children never run out of "something new to do."

Every play yard needs some kind of playhouse. The simplest are best. Imagination converts them into just what the child wants most at the moment. This may be a house, store, robber's den, or fairyland. (Continued on next page)

YOU NEED TO PROVIDE:

1. A paved bike run.
2. Something to climb on, preferably trees.
3. Lawn space for tumbling and wrestling.
4. A place to dig.
5. Water to play in.
6. Convenient toilet and wash facilities.
7. Sturdy seating that doesn't have to be pampered or brought indoors when it rains.
8. Dining facilities, preferably including a portable barbecue for easy cooking outdoors.
9. Covered, weatherproofed rainy-day play space.
10. An outdoor dance floor.
11. Raised plant beds so plants are up out of the way.
12. Resilient plants that can withstand accidents.
13. Fences rather than hedges.
14. Scuff-proof paths.
15. An easy way to store play equipment.
16. Complete isolation of play area from automobiles.
17. Sun and shade, cooling breezes, and protection against insects and dust.

How to keep children in their own back yard

Boys also want pirate ships. A simple affair of old boards, bright paint, and a bedsheet sail will do. They would also be excited to get a discarded automobile or airplane. You can screen either off in a corner, and count on years of fun. Girls want a place—maybe just a secluded spot under a tree, as on page 161, where they can talk to fairies, stable imaginary horses, or just dream. They find something new to do here each day.

Both boys and girls like adult things. These let them imagine themselves doing grown-up work. Give them a bucket of water and a paint brush, for example, and they will "paint" for hours—the fence, garage, or a favorite toy. (More about back yards on page 234)

Play yards needn't look messy. You can't expect children to keep things tidied up, so install a strong ground pattern that keeps the eyes from noticing scattered toys. Outdoor blackboard is popular addition.

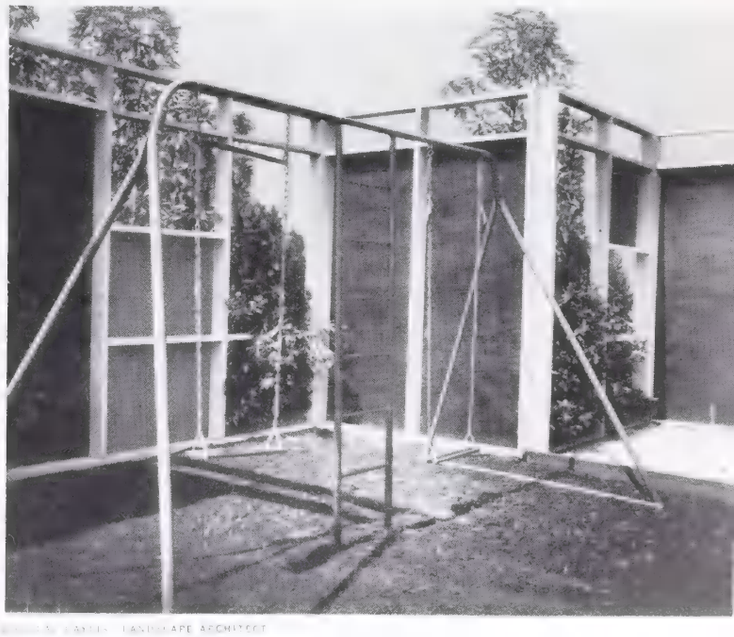
SCOTT & IMLAY, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS

MR. & MRS. ROBERT E. MARBLE, OWNERS

Mother should be able to keep the entire play yard in view without leaving her household activities. Note dual use of seat-wall—extra seating plus protection for flowers. Play area drains dry quickly after rainstorms. Small slide (about $100) is a good investment.

PHOTOGRAPH BY C. G. ROSENBERG



Children "lost" in the world of make believe forget the ABC rules, so fence the play yard from all automobile movement. Keep bike runs free of blind corners. Prune off dead and broken branches from all trees.

Space is used most effectively when various play activities are separated from each other. Housekeeping is easier, too. Fence may be simple barrier, or may double as shade-maker or window, as here.

FOUR PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER — SCOTT & IMLAY, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS

Play shouldn't disturb neighbors by its noise, dust, or looks. This combination of walls and plants creates interesting pattern and minimizes noise and dust before they get to next yard.

STORYBOOK WALLS

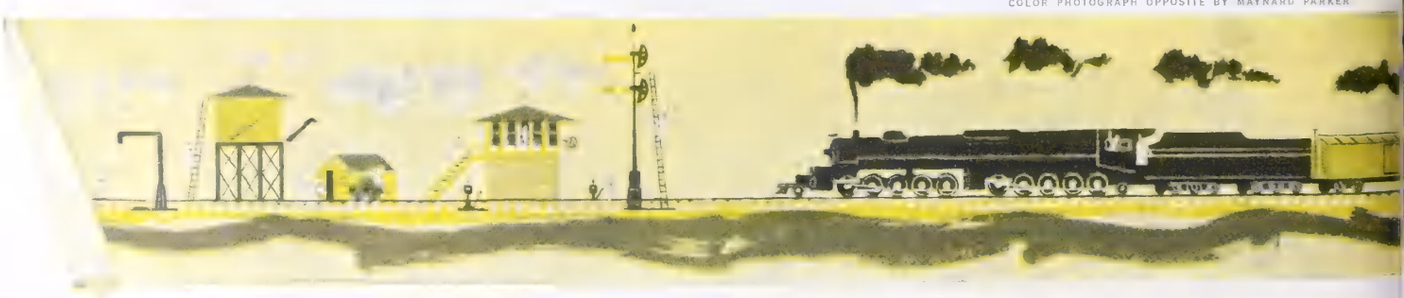
By Sara Little

"Humpty Dumpty" is one of a series of eight storybook murals on washable, canvas fabric. Made by Sanitas, they come cut out, ready to apply.

"Mommy, tell me a story."

It's bedtime and the sudden request catches you off balance. You look up at a blank wall and wonder what to say—where to begin. How wonderful it would be to have a ready-made prompter. That's where the storybook wall comes in.

Paper just one wall of your youngster's room with a light-hearted design, like the ones shown on these four pages and you really have something to conjure with. For now you have a point of departure and can take a character or an animal and lead it nightly through new adventures in never-never land. Aside from filling the twilight with fanciful characters, these papers provide an inexpensive way of making your child's room a more pleasing place in which to live.



This rollicking "Circus Day" paper (far left) by Nancy Warren comes in pink, blue, or white.

"Woodland Friends" is a new washable plastic paper by Trimz. They make it in blue or pink.

Renverne's "Long Train" (below) makes a wonderful border or eye level poster for youngsters. It comes in six panels that make a complete set. It is also made in white, dark blue, and dark green.

COLOR PHOTOGRAPH OPPOSITE BY MAYNARD PARKER

Don't think of wallpaper just in terms of walls. The Lloyd Shearers enlivened their twins' nursery by papering doors of wardrobe with Liebhold-Wallach's "Gingerbread" paper. Adjacent walls are wallboard predecorated with wood grain finish; dado is Weyerhaeuser's Knotty Pine; Nu Wood ceiling is by Wood Conversion Co. All-wool, reversible rug, Hollywood Loomcraft. Denim bedspread, Erwin Fabrics from Joshua L. Bailey.

In a small room paper one wall with a distinctive pattern like this "Chicken Wire with Chickens" from Katzenbach and Warren. This also comes in silver on gray.

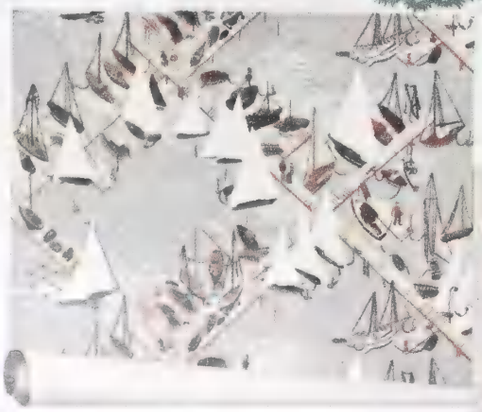
"Down on the Farm" by A. H. Jacobs also comes in green, blue, yellow.

Storybook wall in French—"Jou Jou" from Wall Trends. Also in white.



Schumacher's "Mother Goose," also in blue, white, pink.

Story of "Three Bears" told on this paper by Imperial.

Jacobs' "Carnival" has companion paper, all background, no animals.

For a girl's room, Katzenbach & Warren's "Calico Cat."

A good paper will last a long time if it's out of reach, as the Edmund Herrschers did in this nursery. Note how decorator Bob Brown disguised the closets by carrying Van Luit's "Circus" paper across the doors.

How to have a fine house with six Children

By Robert W. Carrick

Some people have the notion that they can't have a fine-looking home until after their children have grown up. But look at this house of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Waters. It always looks as if it had just been groomed for a party, yet they have six youngsters—three boys and three girls, all under ten. How do they do it? They planned intelligently to begin with. They zoned their house so that there is a separate living area for the children, one for adults, and a common living space (the barbecue room) which they share—see the plan on page 185.

Then they paid strict attention to the kind of materials which they selected to furnish each area. For example, the children's area and the barbecue room have asphalt tile and colored cement flooring. This not (Continued on next page) only takes the toughest kind of punishment, but it's easy to clean. The only carpeting is in the adult living area, and even that is tweedy and sturdy textured.

The children's area includes a big outdoor play yard well equipped with sand box, swings, and enough trikes and scooters to fill a used-car lot. This is carefully enclosed so that the youngest can be turned loose without danger of his wandering off. Also, the entire play area is visible through the big glass windows in the kitchen. Thus, Mrs. Waters can keep a watchful eye on the smaller children without interrupting her daily chores.

On rainy days, when most children would make a shambles of the living room, the Waters small fry use the long play hall that forms the corridor off their bedrooms. Here are four bins of toys and games and also ample room to use the wheel toys which can be brought in from outside, thanks to the asphalt tile flooring.

By giving children a carefully planned place of their own, the Waterses not only protected the more fragile furnishings in the adult part of the house, but also made it possible for parents and children to entertain simultaneously without friction.

So, by diverting the youngsters from the living room—except for quick takes on television—the Waterses can easily keep this part of the house looking its best. And because the part of the house that has to take a beating really can take it, it too is usually very presentable. (Continued on page 307)

Rainy-day play hall is really a wide corridor along bedrooms where children play in wet weather instead of cluttering up living room. Toy bins beneath windows have Masonite lids. Asphalt tile floor allows trikes indoors.

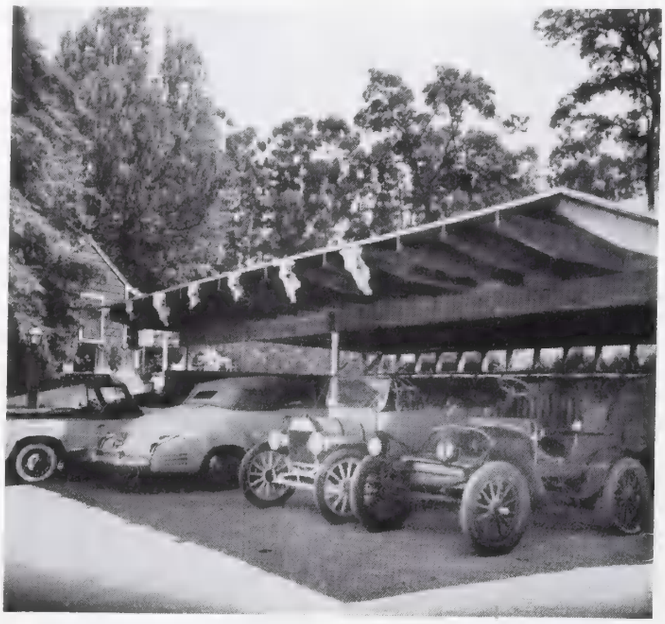
Can you Decorate for a teen-age boy?

The answer is an enigmatical yes and no. It all depends on how you define "decorate." If you want a formalized room scheme, something Mother thinks would be just right for her young man, the answer is emphatically no. There are a multitude of pretty rooms like that, but you can be sure the boys don't live in them. On the other hand, you can decorate for a teen-age boy just as Mrs. Hannes Schroll did in this under-the-eaves room for her son Laurence. But she was content to inject a few smart decorative touches and let it go at that.

She moved in the large wardrobe which had been handsomely decorated by her brother, Jerome Hill, and then copied this design herself on plywood panels on the opposite wall. Together these strong patterns dominate the room and make up for the lack of conventional decorating, which would be out of place in a boy's room anyway. Laury took over from there and the room reflects his interests and hobbies, especially his fondness for old cars. But, in spite of auto parts, cuspidors, and boyish clutter, the room manages to reflect the cosmopolitan taste of its owners.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Mrs. Schroll knew her son's room would be full of juvenile junk. To decorate it conventionally would only add to the confusion. So she let the vigorous, hand-painted design of the large wardrobe dominate room. This actually "decorates" it, tends to minimize clutter.



Mindful that a little decorating—of the right kind—goes a long way in a boy's room, Mrs. Schroll was careful not to compete with the handsomely decorated wardrobe. So on the opposite wall she cleverly repeated same designs on plywood panels.

Whenever it is possible, teen-agers like to have a private entrance to their own rooms. Here they devised this novel catwalk up to Laury's second-story room under the eaves.

Laury's hobby is old cars—real ones. So an entire wall is devoted to a tool bench where he takes motors apart and repairs them. Motors in this room were inevitable. So Mrs. Schroll faced up to the problem and provided well-organized work space.

Young Laury is more interested in the mechanics of keeping these antique automobiles running than in souping up hot rods.

The Schrolls discovered you can decorate for a teen-age boy as long as you don't carry it to such an extreme that it cramps his style. They confined decorating to a few simple touches. As a result, the room reflects good taste without being fussy or formal. Upholstered bed is typical of unconventional furnishings. It makes a comfortable sofa by day, can be easily converted for an overnight guest.

There is no doubt at all about Laury's hobby. On one wall is the collection of original drawings he has made of old cars that date back to the goggle-and-duster era. Along the opposite wall (page 186) is a long tool bench where he works on the actual motors of the two old cars (shown above) which he owns himself.

A case for better Pigsties

By Richard Williams

I've been working all summer on two important inventions. A few details may still have to be ironed out, but I think I can tell you now what the inventions are, and I'll bet you fill out an application blank for them later. The first is a quick-freezing method for children. A child, as you know, is wonderful to have around. He is the light of the home, the source of smiles, a fountain of surprises. He is most beguiling company. A child is all that—up to a certain moment. When that certain moment arrives, when that twittering voice rises to a whine, when those little hands become grimy paws, when those infant legs begin to kick with rage, when all conversation is monopolized and all attention usurped, then you conduct the child gently to the Williams Quick-Freezer, special icebox which will instantly immobilize the infant, keep him thus for as long as you wish, and then thaw him out and restore him to you without the slightest harm.

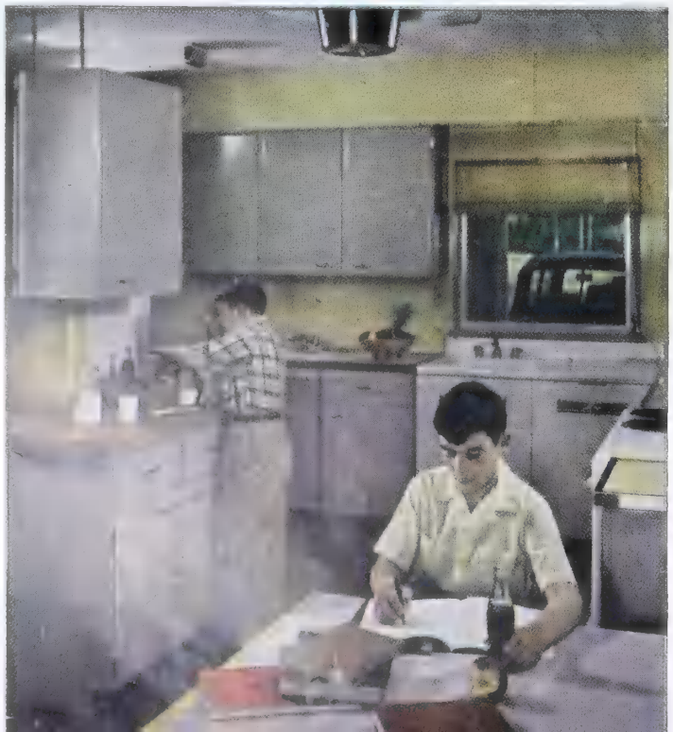
My second invention is even more useful. I purpose to construct in all children's rooms a whole series of garbage incinerators, sunk into the floor. These incinerators will be equipped with a special magnetic coil capable of attracting chicken bones, canteloupe rinds, empty Coca-Cola bottles, and the tinfoil wrappings of Hershey bars. I see in this invention the only hope of making a child's room look different from the butcher's shop after a busy day.

I don't know how it is in your house. In my house there lives a growing boy. After a most substantial dinner, he arises and retires to his room to do his homework or to look at the television set or to do both at the same time. After about a half hour, we hear him prowling in the kitchen, where he will help himself to (1) the steak bone; (2) a soft drink; (3) three or four slices of bread; (4) a piece of cake. The trip may be (Continued on page 253)

Children's furniture faces the facts of life

You may secretly believe that your three-year-old Johnny is the cutest, brightest, most lovable boy in nursery school. But you are well aware he's no winged bundle of fluff. You know he's getting heavier every day, that his hands are dirty about 99 per cent of the time, that his aim with a toy airplane, a drumstick, or a paint brush is not quite as accurate as he imagines. He needs furniture that faces these facts, that meets the challenge of his normal childhood vitality. It has to be small in scale, because the average child's room today is small and must accommodate many activities. But it must be "big scale" in usefulness. Like this new painted Masonite furniture, it must be made with materials, construction, and finish that don't have to be treated gingerly. (Continued on page 290)

PHOTOGRAPHS BY WESLEY BOWMAN STUDIOS



Youngsters' bulldozing tendencies are easily resisted by this furniture made of tough, tempered Masonite that shrugs off blows and scratches. Drawers and cupboards swing out on sturdy dowel hinges to bring total contents into easy reach. Rounded corners and cut-out finger grips eliminate hazards of sharp edges and hardware. To help juvenile owners remember what is kept where, each door and drawer-front is painted a different color. These pieces are low enough in price to keep your initial outlay moderate, but flexible enough to promise later usefulness in work room, game room or garage. Toy chest on bench (above left) is under $70.00; wardrobe (left), about $83.00; play table and stools (opposite page), about $35.00. Group also includes desk, youth bed, and bookcases. This kitchen is no ivory tower where one person works alone. Rather, it is part of the living area, without so much as a door as barrier between the two. (See sketch opposite.) In this way every member pursues his own activity, at same time is part of family group.

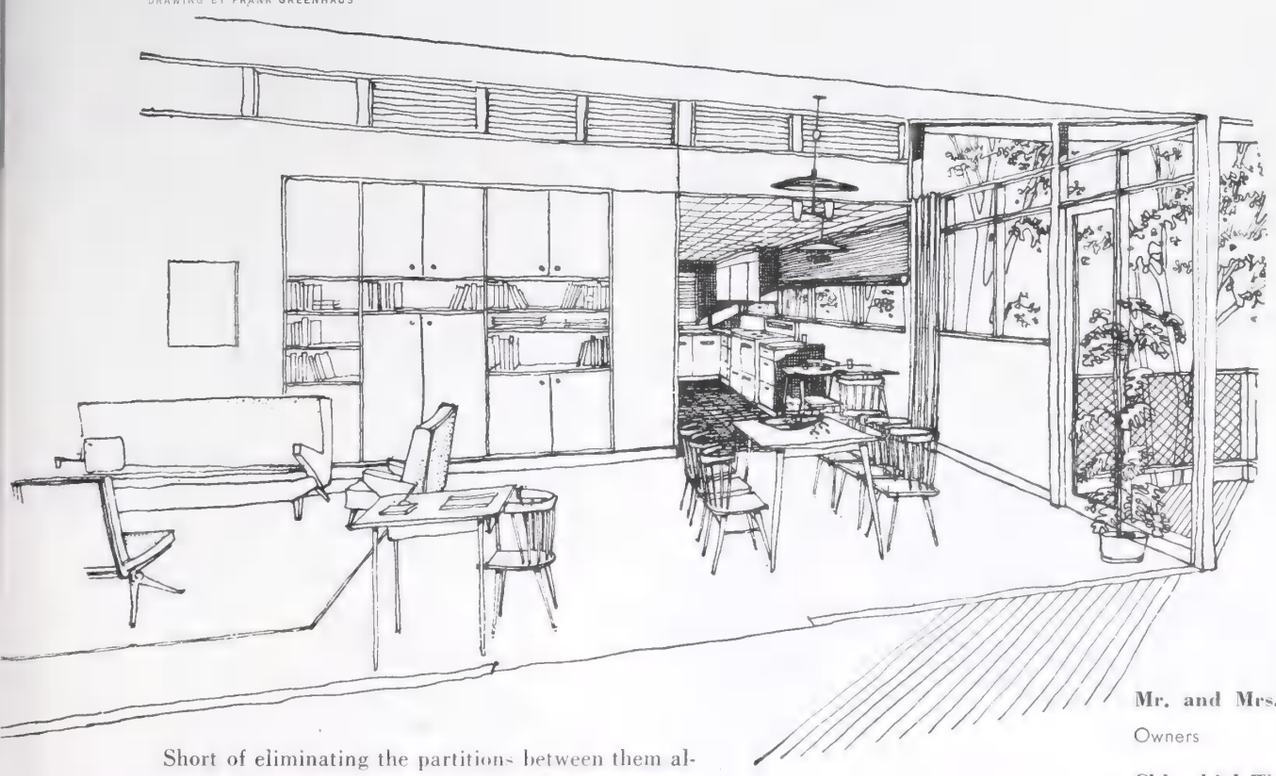
It takes a lot of doing to achieve a workroom where different activities can go on at the same time without interfering with each other. Keen analysis of needs by owners, knowledge of mechanical aids, technical know-how by architect are inseparable parts of the formula.



How family living is changing the kitchen

By Charlotte Conway

The kitchen has moved a step farther "into" the house. See how this one is closely related to the living area. It is the pivot around which family living revolves

Not so long ago the kitchen was at the back of the house, separated from the living area by halls, dining room, and pantry. Then it progressed "into" the house until it was adjacent to the dining ell off the living room. Now we find it connected directly to the living area without even a door to separate the two. It is not hard to find the reasons for this shift in location. Social changes, taking servants away from us, have turned the woman of the house into a jack-of-all-home-trades. She is housekeeper, cook, laundress, seamstress, shopper, and many other things. But she is still the lady of the house with the dignity and prestige that this implies in America. She does not want to be relegated to a remote part of the house. She wants to do her work while in the bosom of her family. And the family, especially the younger children, want to be with her, or near her, while she does it. (Continued on next page)

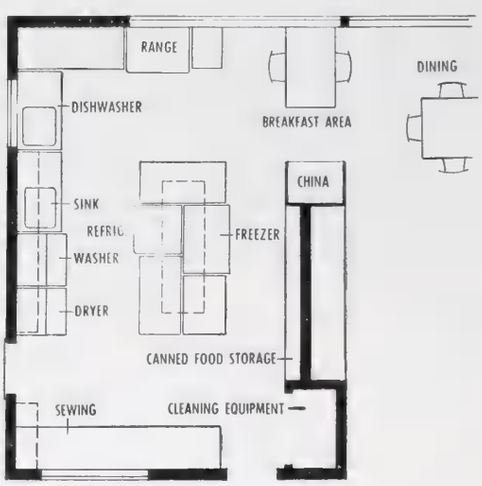
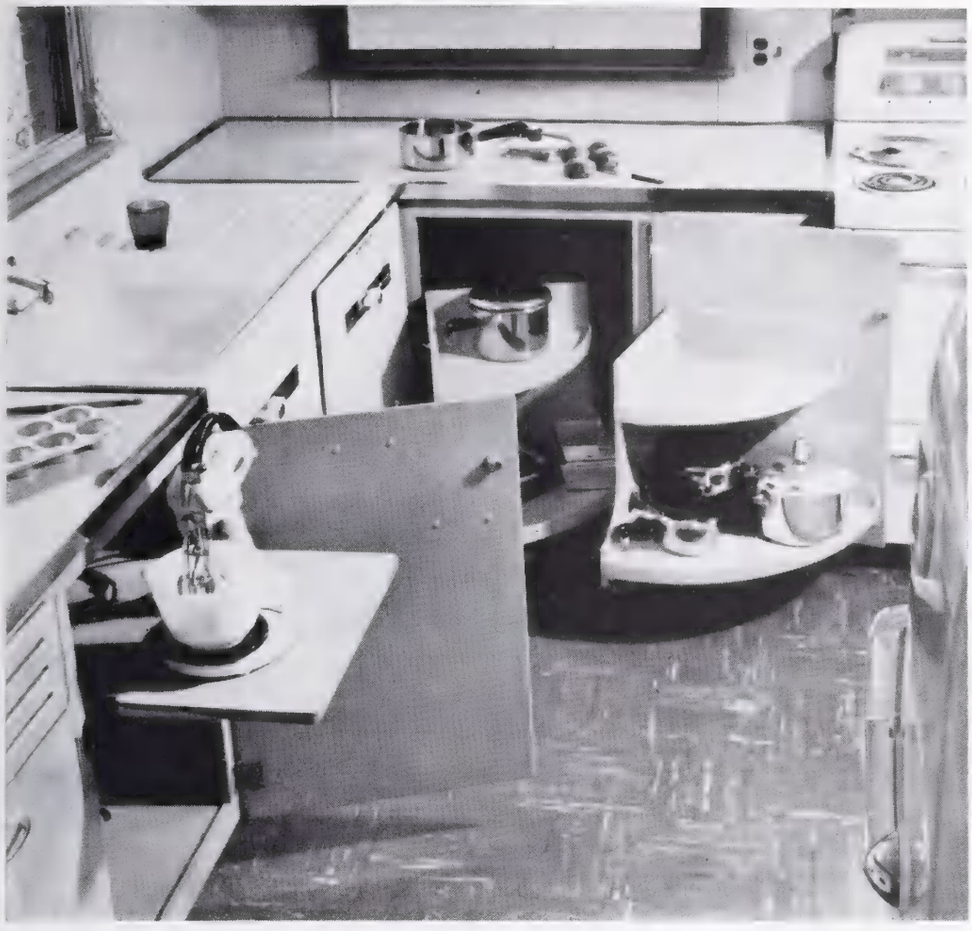
This new concept of the kitchen would not be possible without the new mechanical aids and materials available today. Unless modern ventilators took off cooking odors at the source, we could not have open planning. Unless laundry equipment, sinks, ranges, refrigerators, and freezers were as compact and handsome as they are, we would not want them in sight of the living room. Unless cabinets offered easy, orderly storage of many kinds, we would have unsightly confusion. Materials make their contribution, too. Acoustical ceilings lessen noise, colorful plastic sheet walls and counters minimize cleaning, take hard knocks. Floors are soil-resistant, resilient, good-looking. So the kitchen is a more livable place for the housewife to work in.



Next to the refrigerator and the ice cubes is a special section dedicated to mixing drinks, soft and hard. Laundry hamper on wheels lives under counter for rolling wherever it is wanted.



PHOTOGRAPHS BY EZRA STOLLER

The big counter is for laundry sorting. Ironer underneath is out of the way when not in use. Sewing machine is handy for mending as rips show up during ironing. Cabinet holds all sewing things.

The center island is the secret to traffic-free use of the kitchen by all the family at the same time, as the plan shows. Each activity has its own center, yet all are related logically to each other to simplify work for all.

The over-all workroom is a big one, roughly 22′ x 14′. Yet to get a meal you need hardly step out of one little corner. And it requires very few steps within the corner to go from refrigerator to sink to range. Front opening dishwasher and disposer are part of sink.

This area might be called the children's department. Here they can do their homework under Mother's watchful eye, or mess with paint and paste on the plastic-top table. Their own snack bar with maple cutting top and all the sandwich makings at hand keep them out of the cook's way.

The POST Postwar House

Has it fulfilled all the extravagant predictions of the easier life made during the war?

THE COMING OF TELEVISION One of the most far-reaching changes in the postwar house has been caused by television. 13,000,000 sets have come into use, altering our leisure habits, even the way we furnish our rooms. Here is a "pace-setting" installation beside fireplace. See it open at right.

THE MOVABLE GLASS WALL

Even before the war the scientific know-how, as well as the products, existed to permit the use of glass walls in really cold climates. But people couldn't believe it. Finally, though, the satisfaction of the people who did it ten or twelve years ago has demonstrated the soundness of the idea.

Changes and improvements that arrived as predicted

More efficient kitchens

- dishwashers
- garbage grinders
- automatic washers
- dryers
- ironers
- housekeeping desks
- engineered filing space for all utensils

The useful-all-day dining room

Intercommunicating systems

The glass wall and the resultant merger of indoors and outdoors

Television

The lavatory counter in the bathroom

The roofless room for outdoor living

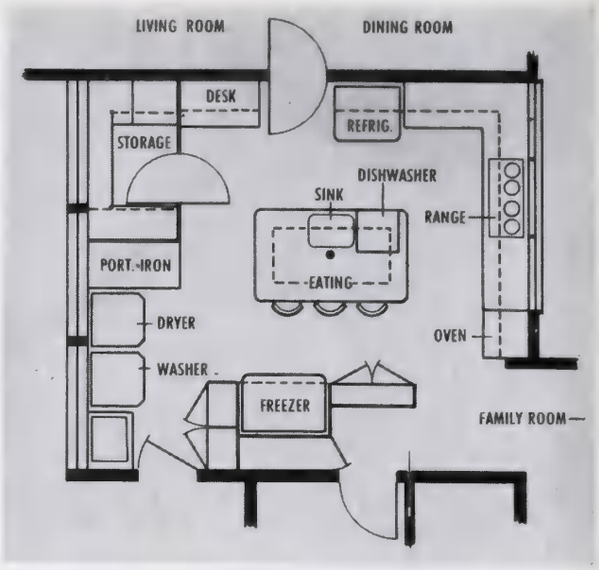
Postwar arrivals that were not predicted

The family room:

- an all-purpose room that threatens to turn the living room back into a parlor

The use of outdoor materials and garden-type furniture on the inside of the house

The garden wall becomes the visual wall of the room — a boon as houses get smaller



THE COMPLETE MUSIC SYSTEM

As our home entertainment devices become more numerous (radio, records, television, wire recorders), the trend is to engineer them into one built-in system.

The house shown on the two preceding pages and these six following pages is an exhibition model built by an operative builder, Fritz Burns, of Los Angeles. It stands on the site of his famous "Postwar House" which opened shortly after the end of hostilities. (See HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, May 1946) That house showed us all the things we had been promised. Now, six years later, Mr. Burns and his stable of designers have re-done the house to bring it abreast of the times, perhaps even ahead of the times. But this house is no hazy forecast of the future since every (Continued on page 200)

BETTER TRAFFIC FOR KITCHENS

The newest plan for step-saving has discarded the small efficiency kitchen for a larger layout arranged around an island unit, which makes for better circulation.

THE MORE EFFICIENT KITCHEN

In the larger, more open type of kitchen several things can go on at once without confusion. While small children eat at snack counter, Mother can prepare dinner elsewhere. Note full laundry and freezer.

HOUSEKEEPING DESKS

Postwar developments in processed and frozen foods have turned housekeeping into a job of desk planning rather than daily marketing.

BUILT-IN RANGES AND OVENS

The combination stove has been replaced by separate built-in range and oven-broiler units. Each is located in the most convenient spot and baking and broiling may be inspected without awkward stooping.

For details of construction and furnishings of this house, see page 312.

FREEZERS AND LAUNDRY

Marketing trips have been cut to a minimum by the home freezer constantly stocked with a wide variety of supplies. Also gone is weekly wash day, since washer, dryer, ironer may be used an hour or so every day while various other household jobs are in progress.

GARDEN-TYPE FURNITURE INDOORS

The guest room is furnished as a sitting room, using a wire-framed daybed with a foam rubber mattress instead of a conventional bed. Wire-framed tables and chairs are teamed with a mirrored chest. The shaggy cotton carpeting in mossy green, emphasizes the outdoor feeling.

product in it is actually available. Rather, it is a distillation of the best practices current in 1951. A house in which are distilled all the best and soundest ideas of its time is a house worth studying. What changes does it dramatize? What progress have we made? Where do we go from here? You will find a list of the changes and improvements incorporated in this house on page 197.

What is most amazing is the number of improvements on this list which have come to be taken for granted. No item on the whole roster of kitchen equipment from the dishwasher to the home freezer is currently considered an innovation. All have become commonplace. Television is almost as familiar as the telephone. And the glass wall, that merges indoors with outdoors and makes smaller houses more livable, is to be seen in all parts of the country.

THE FAMILY ROOM—A BRAND NEW SPECIES

This new room is a cross between a recreation room and a living room. Its purpose is to take the wear and tear off the real living room, which, in reality, becomes a company room like the old parlor. This one is just off the kitchen and terrace, and is furnished as a family dining room, home-study room, television room, rainy-day playroom, and general relaxing room. All furnishings can take a beating without revealing it too obviously.

THE LAVATORY COUNTER IN THE BATHROOM

A pronounced prewar trend was to "build in" the lavatory bowl into a surrounding counter. But such solutions had to be custom designed and were tricky. Now a new plumbing fixture has been designed for the purpose of building in. It stands flush with the counter, making a smooth, unbroken surface. Fixtures and bathrooms designed by Henry Dreyfuss.

THE ALL-DAY DINING ROOM

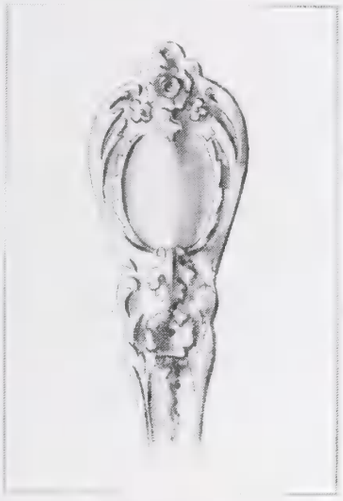
Everyone would prefer a dining room. But not at the price of a tiny living room. So dining equipment has become subtle, understated, living-roomish.

What to do about the high cost of eating well

By Jean Harris

If you are trying to live high on a low budget, you are probably feeling rather frustrated these days. For if your ideas about living well revolve around such things as steak and other forms of red meat you are doomed to failure.

But the red meat approach to good eating is not the only one. In fact, eating red, tender meat is a relatively new thing in the world, historically speaking, and it is strictly American. Several other nationalities have eaten very well (though not as nutritionally sound), without an industrialized meat-producing agriculture such as ours. In fact, two of the world's most sophisticated and gourmet cuisines—the French and Chinese—were developed in an economy of poverty and scarcity. Cooks, all through the ages, have seemed to rise to new heights of inventiveness when pressed by disadvantages.



Today we have a magnificent array of both foods and equipment such as the world has never known before. But each period has challenges of its own. High prices and the artificial scarcities they create are the challenges of today's cooks. Are we going to meet them successfully and continue to live well, or are we going to give up the struggle and become a nation of whiners instead of expert cooks.

House Beautiful takes a very rosy view of this situation. We feel that the pressure of high prices could bring the dawning of a truly golden era in American food. For these new problems can cause us to sharpen our wits, to really think about the basic truths of good eating and sophisticated contriving. The very plentitude we have always enjoyed has undoubtedly made us lazy mentally. Now we shall have to sharpen up.

There are really seven or eight basic principles you can use to eat well inexpensively.

1. Be crafty about your menu-planning, so that the sharp edge of appetite has been dulled by the time the eaters get to the expensive ingredients. Put a less expensive protein like fish ahead of a more expensive one like meat.

2. Keep on hand at all times a wide and quality selection of the "enhancers": spices, herbs, seasoning powders, olive oil, vinegars, juices, tiny cans of mushrooms, etc. Such supplies cost very little, for so little does the trick. But they are vital to glamorizing the most lowly ingredients. But they must always be on hand. (Continued on page 269)

Camouflage your inexpensive menus with a beautiful setting

The cost of a meal is no sure gauge of its excellence. But even if a meal simply looks costly, most people seem to enjoy it more. As a discerning cook and budget virtuoso, play up to this psychology. Present your most frugal fare in a setting to charm the eye, and with as much deference as you'd give a crown roast. For instance, combine white geraniums, pale grapes, and driftwood with Franciscan fine china in "Encanto" shape by Gladding, McBean. "Barsac" Lalique glass by Khouri and napkin-holding piqué mats by Fflorence, courtesy Lord & Taylor. Flatware is "Stanton Hall" sterling by Heirloom.

IS YOUR THINKING UP TO DATE ABOUT VEGETABLES?

It's funny how the most obvious truths are sometimes the hardest to grasp.

Having the right kind of ideas about vegetable cookery is very hard. We have inherited so many old-fashioned attitudes from our mothers, and these are veneered with new experiences of our own with modern products. On top of this, our progress comes so fast that what was a perfectly good prewar conclusion can be an out-of-date one in 1951. Even the words we use tend to confuse the situation.

When vegetables were in season only a few weeks in the summer, their presence was so brief—though so welcome—that no one had a chance to get tired of them. So our mothers could cook them à l'Anglais (quickly boiled, drenched in butter), summer after summer, without a worry about achieving variety.

But today, when you can buy virtually every vegetable in two or three forms every day of the year, we badly need versatility. And we need perspective about how the different forms of vegetables should be used. We get off on the wrong track, partly because of semantics and partly because of our inherited attitudes.

We think of "fresh" vegetables as being newly picked and unwilted. But since the vegetables in the market are a day or sometimes five or six days away from the field, the more correct way to think of market vegetables is as UNCOOKED.

Frozen vegetables are not only frozen, but are blanched by hot water or steam. Moreover the rupture of the cells by frost is akin to the breakdown of cells which is caused by heat—heat and cold, like love and hate, being strangely akin. Frozen vegetables should therefore be considered as vegetables which are SLIGHTLY COOKED.

Canned vegetables should be thought of as COOKED vegetables.

Canning is essentially the same kind of How you cook vegetables depends on what you start with. The recipe you choose to use depends, critically, on whether you are using:

1 COOKED

—which is what you get when you buy vegetables in cans. Some canned vegetables have exactly the same characteristics they would have if you had cooked them at home. Others develop new characteristics quite unlike fresh cooked ones.

THE DAILY ARTS OF GOOD LIVING

By Jean Harris

kitchen operation which you follow in cooking and preparing foods at home. The main difference is that the food in the canner's kitchen is to be preserved for later use, so it is cooked in airtight containers at a sufficiently high temperature and for the proper length of time to destroy spoilage organisms. Consequently, our vegetable supply should be considered as of quite different types, each of which has its own unique qualities and uses, and should be cooked in a different way. In some cases, the vegetable has the same flavor and color as if you had cooked it at home. In some cases, it does not. In using canned vegetables, it is important that you distinguish between these two types of products.

In the case of beets, peppers, carrots, baked beans, tomatoes, onions, sweet potatoes, yams, winter squash, etc., your problem is quite simple. It is merely to add the final gourmet touches to a food that is already cooked, the same touches that you would give if you had started from scratch.

However, in the case of mushrooms, peas, snap beans, limas, sweet corn, asparagus, etc., the high temperature necessary for sterilization results in changes in flavor and color. You can never use these products on a gourmet level until you accept the obvious fact that they do not taste like or look like fresh cooked ones. The minute you accept this truth and begin to treat them accordingly, the whole picture changes and a whole series of new possibilities comes into view—a series of taste experiences not given by vegetables in other forms.

The tricks for using these canned vegetables that cannot imitate fresh ones are obvious. Clearly you should not serve them à l' Anglais—that is, plain with butter. Rather, you should use them in compounded recipes where you blend several flavors to produce a new flavor. Combine vegetables with herbs, or cheese, or smoked meats and sausages, or sour cream, or curry, or vinegar, or onions. Or serve them with a rich or a sharp sauce. If you are using canned vegetables in a salad, marinate all vegetables that are to go into it in a well flavored French dressing. Learn the tricks of mixing canned vegetables just as you have learned to mix canned soups.

In many other countries which pride themselves on their cooking, plain boiled vegetables are not regarded as an end in themselves but as the start of a new dish. Canned vegetables provide this start, with the work of cleaning, sorting, paring, and slicing already done.

It is impossible to preserve a "highty-tighty" attitude toward canned asparagus in the face of Italian

Asparagus Fritto

2 cups canned asparagus tips. (Spears, either green or white may be substituted if cut into bite sizes.)
½ cup cream
4 tablespoons butter
Yolk of 1 egg
1 tablespoon sugar
Salt and pepper to taste

Mix cream, butter, egg yolk, sugar together in the frying pan and stir for five minutes. The sauce will curdle and the butter separate. When this is done, put in your asparagus, season and fry gently. Serve hot. This is good and very rich.

Cold Asparagus Hors D'oeuvres

(in the best French tradition)

1 can asparagus tips
Olive oil to cover
Salt, pepper and grated nutmeg to taste
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Drain asparagus, cover with oil, season with salt, pepper, nutmeg. Let stand until asparagus has absorbed oil all the way through. Chill, serve on a cold plate. Before serving sprinkle with lemon juice.

There are three types of listeners: the lovers . . .

the uninhibited performers who sing or conduct . . .

and the ponderers who listen with rapt attention.

"Good morning. Have you the new complete recording of 'Tristan and Isolde'?"

"Ah'm from the South. What do you all up heah think is the very. very best recordin' of Dixieland jazz?"

"Do you carry a recording of the Bach Partita No. 5 in G Major? No? Well, you ought to have it."

"Is it true that there is a record which reproduces the song sung by a canary? My canary refuses to sing, and maybe a record would get him started."

"I'm a secretary and I just got myself a good job. I want to improve my speed in taking dictation. There's a record which helps you practice, isn't there?"

"Do you recommend the Disney version of 'Alice in Wonderland' for a six-year-old?"

"When I was young I heard Claudia Muzio sing. I'll never forget her. Is she as thrilling on her records?"

These questions were asked in one of our shops in one single day. Eighteen of our shops have record departments. We have, therefore, eighteen vantage points. eighteen observation posts to study the wants and the wishes of the record-loving public.

Diverse are the record buyers' wishes, different their tastes. And yet, I think, they can be classified. their behavior and predilections foretold. At least to a certain extent. Like all mankind, record buyers fall into two categories: the uninhibited and the inhibited.

The uninhibited record buyer is not necessarily the man or woman who has considerable experience with and technical knowledge of music, not necessarily the one who can discuss the relative merits of Horowitz or Rubinstein. or who can name in chronological order all the operas Verdi wrote. Occasionally the uninhibited record buyer is a person who knows that you don't have to know anything about music to have fun with it. who therefore trots in gaily and says "Have you got a recording of a piece that I heard over the air last night? I can't remember the name of the composer and I can't remember the name of the piece, and I can't remember who played it, but it goes something like this." And then he will sing at the top of his voice the melody which has haunted him since the (Continued on page 276)

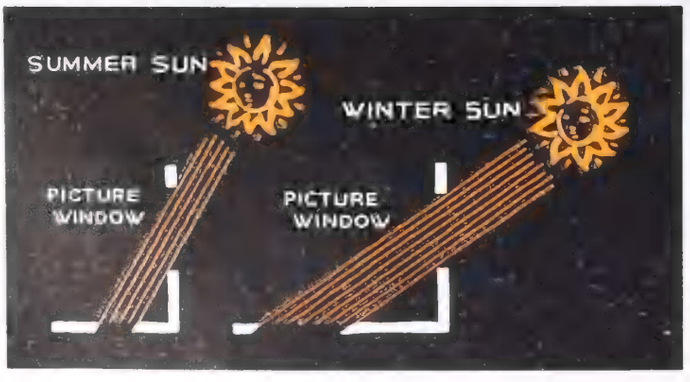
YOUR HOUSE IN THE FALL

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S CLIMATE CONTROL PROJECT

Fall is the time of year to watch the sun, and how it shines on your house. Especially the south front. Something interesting is going on there now—something worth knowing if you ever want to build a house, or buy one, or even rent one

By Wolfgang Langewiesche

"What do you mean 'watch how the sun shines on the house'? It shines, that's all. Sometimes it doesn't. What's so special to observe?"



Now look, the sun shines each day from a different angle; a little lower each day, now that summer's gone.

"Well, everybody knows that. So what?"

It's a Good Thing. Just watch the sun spot made inside a room by a south window. Each day it gets a little bigger and reaches a little deeper into the room. In July, it used to look like the drawing on the left. By the end of November, it is a big sunny area like the drawing on the right. As fall turns to winter, a bigger and bigger bundle of sun rays comes in. So as the season gets colder, the south window becomes warmer—more of a source of heat.

"Yeah—when the sun shines. But the sun doesn't shine much after Labor Day. The days get too short, and the weather gets too cloudy."

Wait a minute! In the U. S. we have an exceptionally sunny fall, with lots of sunshine. Our Indian Summer is something no other country has. In most parts of the country, the weather is really quite sunny till Christmas. And the winter, too, is quite sunny in most parts of the country—all through the West, all through the Mississippi Valley, on the Great Plains, and in the South. Even on the Atlantic Seaboard the sun shines in January more than half of all light hours. Our ideas of fall and winter are still influenced too much by poems, stories, and sayings of Europe—for example, that by Christmas the world is supposed to be deep in snow. But we have only two regions with winters of the European type—cloudy and gloomy—the region around Seattle, and the region of Toledo, Ohio, Cleveland, Ohio. Buffalo, N. Y., Pittsburgh, Penna. All the rest of the country has a high percentage of fall and winter sunshine.

"But the days are too short. You are just barking up some theoretical tree. Sunshine just has no practical importance. Once the summer is over, there is nothing to do but to hole in, sort of, and get the furnace going."

You want to make some easy money? Bet somebody that a south window gets more hours of sunshine on a sunny Christmas day than it gets on a sunny Fourth of July. Nobody will believe you, but it's true and you win. In summer, you see, the sun rises not in the East (as most people think), but more nearly in the Northeast. It shines at first into the east windows and, at the very first, into the north windows. It doesn't come around to where it can hit the south windows until about 10 in the morning. Soon after 2 P.M. it moves around again to where it stops shining on the south wall. From then on it shines on the west windows and, toward the last, also on the north windows.

But in winter, the sun rises more nearly in the Southeast and sets more nearly in the Southwest. A south window starts getting sun the moment there is any sun. And it keeps on getting sun until the sun sets. So you see, a south window gets more hours of sunshine in winter than in summer. And the sunshine it gets in winter is hotter than in summer, because of the lower angle. It all adds up to one thing: A south window turns into a source of heat in winter. We ought to use that effect.

"Use it? How?"

By having south windows—lots of them, big ones . . .

"No thanks. Don't feed me any big window propaganda. I don't want them. Big windows make a house too hard to heat. I speak from experience."

Yes. I know what you mean. Many people say that. And they do speak from experience. But if you check into it, the experience was always with big windows placed more or less evenly north, east, south, and west. Naturally, a north window never catches any winter sun. But it lets out a lot of furnace heat—even with storm sash fitted. It, therefore, makes the house harder to heat. And in winter, an east or west window is almost as bad as a north window.

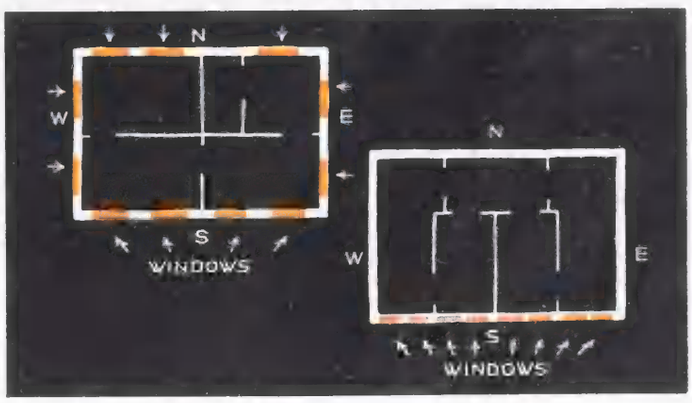
"I don't follow you there. What's wrong with east and west windows? North windows, I can see that. They get no sunshine in winter. But doesn't an east window get the morning sun, and a west window the evening sun?"

No. Not in winter they don't. At least not enough to count. In summer, yes: an east window gets several hours of strong morning sun, and a west window gets several hours of hot afternoon sun. But as the days get shorter, your east and west windows get less and less sun. By the time the sun is high enough to do any serious shining, it shines much better into the south windows than into east windows. And in the evening, by the time the sun comes around so it can shine into a west window, it is so low down it isn't very hot any more. That's exactly why I say: In the fall observe how the sun shines on the house. You will see for yourself how your east and west windows rapidly fade out as a source of useful sunshine. You will see that, as the season gets colder, the sunshine concentrates more and more on the south windows. The thing I want you to discover is this: Only a south window is a good window.

"Granted. Okay. Only a south window gets real sun in winter. But I will say the sun doesn't shine every day, and the sun doesn't shine at night and, therefore, even a south window will make the house chilly if it is too big."

I'll go along with that if you will listen carefully. You have put your finger on an important point. When the sun does not shine, and at night, even a south window will chill a room. It makes up for this waste of heat by catching a lot of free-of-charge heat during the sunny periods. But just the same, your Big Window will force you to heat hard during sunless periods, and you have to have the heating facilities that will do the job. So, if you have a window much bigger than the traditional window size (even a south window), you do have to "comfortize" it against the sunless periods.

"Comfortize?"



Use double glass, and in the most northern belt of this country even triple glass, or double glass plus storm sash. Have heavy draperies to draw over the window at night. And have heating arrangements which "play along" with the window—heat that turns itself off when the sun starts streaming in, and that turns itself on quickly when the sun goes behind a cloud. Heat that, during sunless periods, warms you from the same side of the room from which the window is trying to chill you, etc. That's where many people have made their mistakes. They simply put in a lot of glass and didn't realize that this would mean a lot of changes in the whole design of the house.

"So you admit that extra-big windows are quite an engineering job?"

An architect's job, yes. I not only admit it, I cry it from the housetops. If you have extra-big windows, you have to have the right kind of heating plant. But we're off the subject.

"How so?"

You've started talking Big Windows vs. Small, Traditional Windows. But the important question is: "In a house with such and such a window area, where shall the windows be?"

"Well, where should they be? You mean they should all be facing . . ."

Of course. They should all be facing south. The more you concentrate your window area on the south side, the easier it will be to heat the house. Look at the arrangement above.

The usual sort of house with windows spaced evenly on all sides. Well, with this arrangement, only one-third of all the window area ever gets any worth-while winter sun. But switch it around, as in sketch, right—same space, same window area, but with all windows south. That arrangement is, of course, much easier to heat.

Never again!

By Richard Williams

I will never again—but positively never—go to a cocktail party. Like all gall, the cocktail party is the bitter fluid in our social structure. Like all Gaul, cocktail parties are divided into three parts. Each is poison. At least, to me.

The first and most common of the three is called the Get-It-Over-With Cocktail Party. It comes about like this: During the winter, you have been invited by a number of casual acquaintances. You must now invite them back. However, you have given all the dinner parties that you can stand, or rather, that your help allows you to give. Furthermore, if you were to invite these new acquaintances for dinner, you would have to do so seriatim. The Proctors (he is a dentist) could not possibly be invited on the same evening with the Jenkinses (he is in the mascara business) because Proctor loves carpentry and will describe each hinge of the new cabinet he has made, and Jenkins is a first-nighter and will discourse on the relative merits of Ethel Merman versus Mary Martin.

Ahead of you, then, stretches the possibility of a long series of evenings, long in chronology and long in duration of each evening devoted not to good friends (Continued on page 239)

Rendezvous

a Bigelow Masterweave

You're never too young to be a "lady who likes nice things"! And the knee-high blonde above is no exception, as she sets foot on "Rendezvous," one of the most sumptuous carpets ever woven.

"Rendezvous" is a delight to touch . . . so deep and mossy soft. A delight to the eye, too . . . sculptured in classic simplicity, colored with a stroke of decorator genius. In Cocoa Brown, as shown, and five other handsome choices. Of course, "Rendezvous," woven of the world's finest yarns, will stay beautiful for many years.

You expect that when it's a Bigelow, famous for beauty you can see . . . quality you can trust, since 1825.

very neat, but it was the lighting that kept it from being a dark and useless little box. A single 20-watt fluorescent fixture containing a warm white tube was attached to the under side of the bottom overhead shelf about four inches back from the edge. A strip of plywood was attached to the edge of the shelf to conceal the fixture and—this is the smart part—the mirror was painted down as far as the depth of the fixture to keep the light from reflecting back in your eyes. Since the painted strip matched the gray of the wall and the shelves, I didn't even realize it was there. Never saw such an efficient dressing table in so small a space. And I had to look twice to realize how small it was since a closet with a mirrored door spanned the space between it and the bathroom. —M. R.

The Parental DILEMMA

It's a question of spare the rod and spoil the television, or—how old-fashioned should you be?

By Lloyd Shearer

I used to think that raising children in this modern day and era would be a cinch. Now, after having three of my own—my wife helped me in this—I'm not so sure; neither is my wife.

It seems that raising a child correctly these days is infinitely more difficult than it was 30 years ago when no one ever heard of Drs. Kinsey and Gesell, and a man named Freud was discussed only in women's beauty parlors.

Offhand, you wouldn't think this to be the truth, and for that matter, neither did we before we tried it. But now we have a four-year-old son and a pair of one-year old twins, and despite such modern conveniences as diaper service, electric blankets, and washing machines, we're convinced that bringing up Junior in 1910 or 1920 was a delightful tea-party compared to the child-rearing problems young parents face today.

For example, 25 years ago when I was a naughty little tyke, my mother used to let me have a fast one across the south side and cart me off to bed. I'd scream myself to sleep. I'd not repeat the offense, and that's all there was to it.

Nowadays, such punishment meted out to a child is virtua criminal and reveals you as a w ward parent with an alarming l of fundamental child psycholo So at least the child psychologi continue to tell us.

One of these—she happens to my sister-in-law—was visiting u few weeks ago when our son, Der picked up a pair of fire tongs a tried to ram them through the te vision screen. This is a militant tle habit the boy has developed late and since our television isn't yet paid for, I've tried to cu the child with a hundred explai tions of how short a distance a d lar travels these days, but this doctrination was to no avail.

On this particular Wednesd the boy sneaked the tongs out the closet, and while I was readi Drew Pearson, began to annihil the television receiver. As charged the set, chipping away o corner of the cabinet. I bounc up from the "Washington-Mer Go-Round," snatched the tongs of his hands and whacked h across the fanny. I then carried h toward his room, excitedly sh ing, "Now you're going to bed."

WHERE DOES THIS LIVING ROOM STOP?

By ruler, just a few feet from you.

By the eye, it reaches on out into the woods. That view could just as well be your favorite hillside—or flower garden—or wide, green lawn.

Visually, you move walls out . . . out . . . out . . . with glass. You can add spaciousness without adding expensive square footage. And you add a world of interest—the ever-changing patterns and colors of the outdoors.

Practical? *Thermopane insulating glass makes it so. Thermopane is made of two panes of glass with dry air hermetically sealed between them. That blanket of air assures comfort, for it reduces chilly drafts that come from single-paned windows. That adds usable space in winter. Saves fuel, too. And it minimizes frost and steam on windows.

With Thermopane you have no storm sash to put up or take down, or wash or paint. Thermopane insulates windows for greater winter and summer comfort. You can use Thermopane all around the house, in any type of window—picture, double-hung, casement, awning, sliding. Your L·O·F glass distributor or dealer, or your building supply dealer, can tell you all about it. And write for our Thermopane booklet. my sister-in-law's hand, an assortment of knuckles and rings, fell upon my shoulder. "Put the child down," she ordered. "What do you think you're doing?"

"I'm punishing him," I explained. "He almost broke the television set. And Gypsy Rose Lee is on tonight."

"You mean," my wife's sister asked as if I were contemplating a hatchet murder, "that you were going to punish Derek by putting him to bed?"

"Yes," I said.

A look of such stark horror swept across the girl's face that I felt like Dracula, and I put the child down.

Immediately, sister-in-law clasped Derek to her breast. "Don't you know," she demanded, her voice violently stomping its foot, "that sending a child to bed is the most stupid form of punishment known to man?"

I said nothing. I didn't have the chance.

"Once you send a child to bed for punishment," she ran on, "you're likely to have trouble with him at every single bedtime. He looks upon bed and sleep as terrible penalties. They become repulsive to him and he may never again know a good night's sleep. Is that the kind of future you want for your son?"

I lowered my evil head in shame.

THE next day Derek rammed his shovel through the TV screen, the set promptly blew up, and our panic-stricken neighbors called the fire department. But all this, I'm told by the authorities is much better than spanking your son and sending him to bed an hour early.

Dr. Benjamin Spock, whose Baby and Child Care has sold a million copies in the pocket edition is a case in point. "I wouldn't advise putting a child in his room for punishment," writes the Doc, "that makes it seem like prison. You want him to love his room for play or sleeping." John Langdon-Davies, the British expert on child guidance, also comes up with, "What is more stupid than to punish a child by sending him to bed?"

According to the experts, children exposed to such punishment grow up into neurotics and misanthropes. Supposedly, the old-fashioned method of child-rearing is largely responsible for the great number of psychological misfits we have in the world today. That's w my wife and I are right smack the center of the contempora parental dilemma. How do y raise kids? By the tradition standards or the latest research?

My wife and I were brought in the paleolithic or 1920 mann When we sucked our thumbs, mothers put alum on them, or pa no attention to us, and eventua we stopped. When Derek sucks thumb, we're quoted a long passa from Freud declaring the act to a form of masturbation. We're t that unless we consult a psych trist, the kid has a very go chance of developing into a noto ous sex fiend.

As I've said, I sucked my thu for years as a child, and nowhe at any time, not even when I w in college, have I ever been arrest or detained on a criminal assa charge.

SIMILARLY, when my wife w a little girl, she used to fall her knees whenever she didn't wa to do a thing. On such occasio her mother would say, "If you that, Mummy won't love you a more."

The other day my boy threw portable typewriter out of the w dow. My wife, in a masterful d play of self-control, said to hi "You've done a wicked thing a Mummy doesn't love you a more."

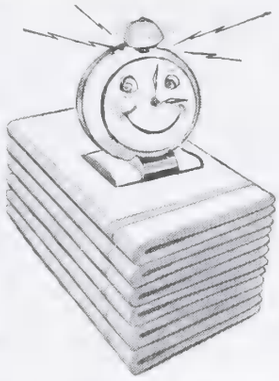
Now it so happens that our pe atrician was in the house at t time—he'd come to give Derek inoculation—and when he hea my wife speak that sentence he most blew his top.

"My dear Mrs. Shearer," he claimed, "you must never say t again."

"Say what?" my wife asked.

"That 'Mummy doesn't love y any more.'"

"Why not?" my wife ask "That's the third time he's brok the typewriter and since we're t ing not to spank him, the only w of punishing him is to talk to h severely."



"Maybe so," the doctor sa "but to threaten a child with t realization that his mother does love him any more is to depr him of the one thing he needs m —the feeling that he's loved a wanted. Do you realize how aw it is for a child to grow up kno ing that his own mother does love him?"

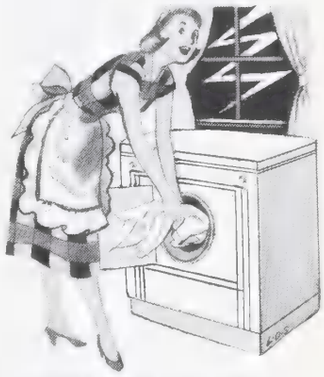
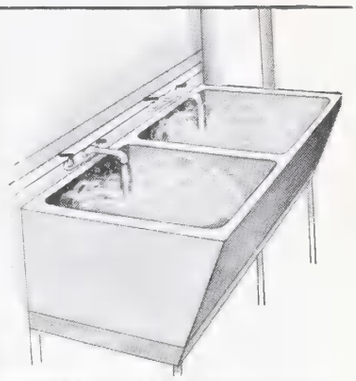
now! clothes dried faster than you can wash 'em!

by GAS, of course... because GAS is fast!



FASTER than any other automatic clothes dryer. Lightweight fabrics are ready to iron in 15 minutes . . . completely dry in 20! As for the old haul-hang-and-pin routine . . . a Gas clothes dryer is 15 times faster!

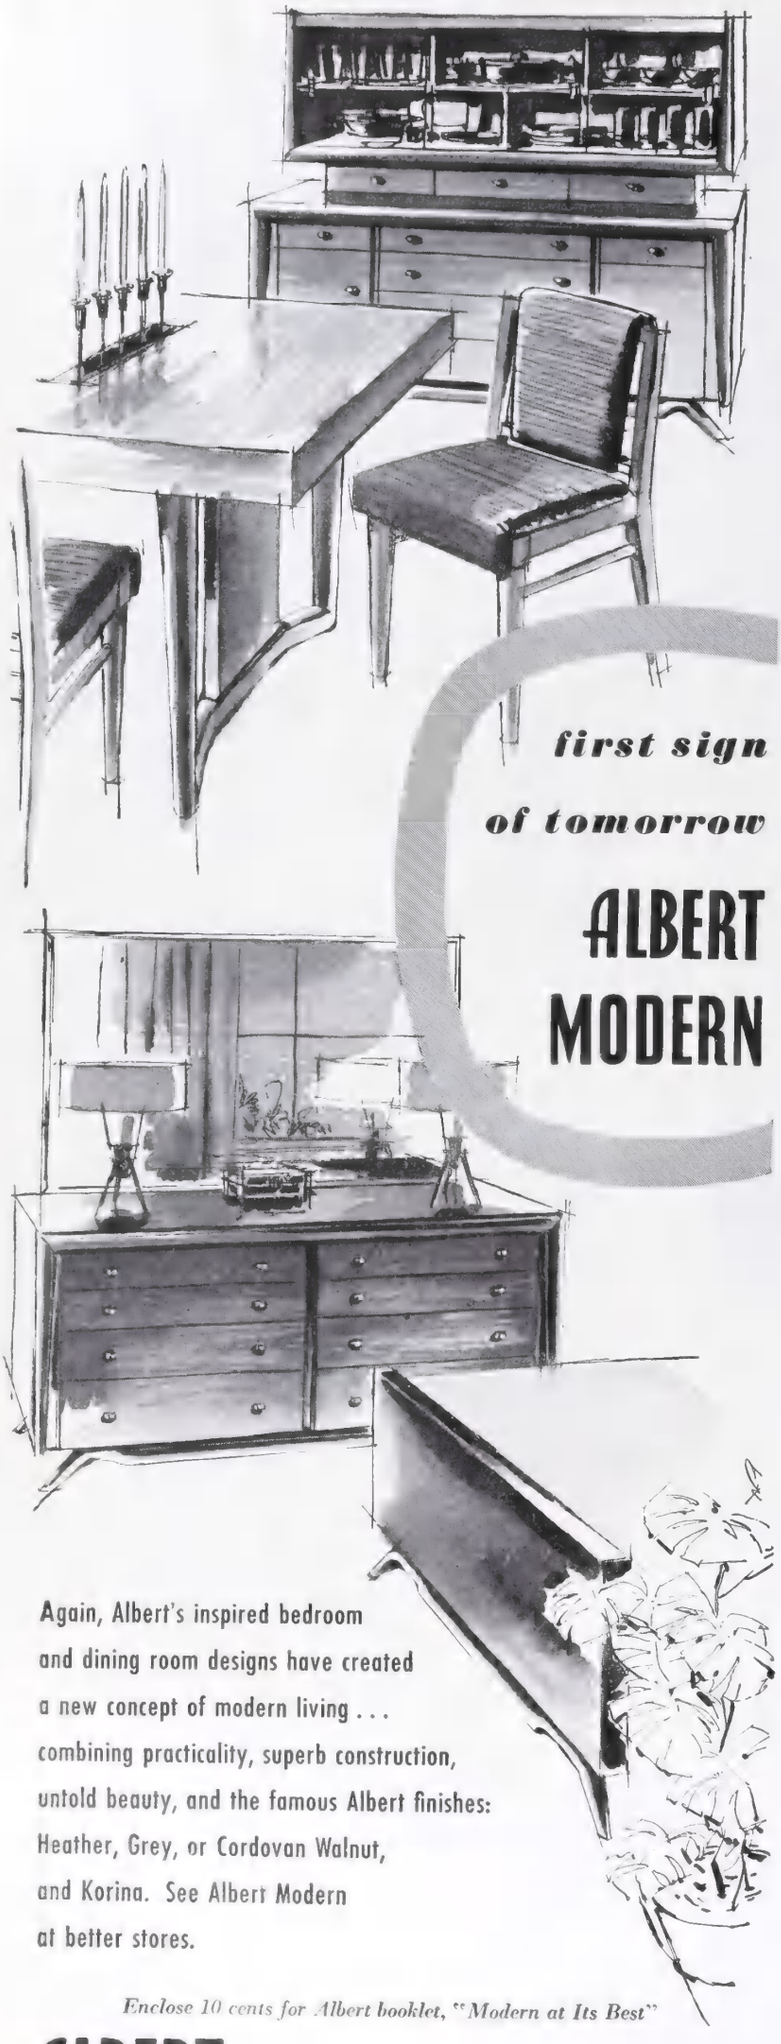
LESS IRONING...EASIER IRONING No sprinkling! A Gas clothes dryer damp-dries just right for faster ironing. Towels, cotton-knits, sheets come out so fluffy and unwrinkled you don't have to iron them at all!



SAFER . . . MORE SANITARY Gas dryers don't over-dry and weaken fibres. Sweeten and purify more thoroughly than sunshine . . . without any of the dangers of sun fading, clothespin rips or airborne germs.

NO WEATHER WORRIES! Icy fingers, mud-splattered sheets, laundry mildewing in the basement—you'll never have 'em again! With an automatic Gas dryer you can wash any day in the year! Even at night if you want to.

TWICE AS ECONOMICAL per load as any other automatic dryer. Far less costly to install. And you don't have to have so many linens and children's clothes. Because a Gas dryer makes it easy to wash more often.



3 TIMES FASTER for water-heating, too. That's Gas, the only fuel fast enough to keep up with the hot water needs of an automatic washer, yet flexible enough to give you the right temperature water for every job.

A very fast girl with a proverb, my wife said. "I really think you're making a mountain out of a molehill. Derek's probably forgotten what I've said already."

The pediatrician disagreed and proceeded to explain how an unhappy childhood frequently manifests itself in adulthood by a violent, neurotic behavior-pattern.

When I got home that evening, I found my wife smothering the boy with affection and an estimate on my desk from the typewriter repair shop for $27.50.

I had a talk with the little woman on the subject of child-rearing, and we decided that if the boy did anything nasty while I was away at work, his mother was to warn him not to repeat the crime by saying, "I'm going to tell Daddy about this when he comes home."

THE following day the boy tossed some of Sinclair Lewis's best works into the fire. That evening his mother told me about the offense and I tried to explain to the lad that such Hitlerian tricks were verboten. This did little good and for three days, the boy kept thinning out our library.

On the fourth day when he consigned Graham Greene to the flames, I finally broke down and spanked him. He hasn't repeated the felony since, but now my wife says she's done a terrible thing.

She claims that by threatening Derek with his father, she's aroused in the boy a deep hatred of his Daddy. "Instead of making you the family-head to be loved and admired," she explains, "I've built you up as a boogey-man to be feared and disliked."

"That's nonsense," I've told her.

But in refutation she's shown me an article on child care by John Langdon-Davies in which the author, an acknowledged expert, says: "Threats are usually bad, but worst of all is the threat of 'telling your father'. Any mother who does this spoils two relationships: first, her own with the child, because it suggests that she is incapable of managing him without help: second, the child's relationship with the father who becomes the big stick, the angry policeman, the big executioner."

As a result of that article we've stopped using the threat. "I'll tell Daddy on you." Moreover, we've read dozens of books by the child guidance authorities. All of them point out that the best way to bring up a child is not to punish him. "It is better to do nothing at all," advises Dr. Andrew Gesell, director of Yale University's Clinic of Child Development, "than to be too severe with a young child."

"People who have specialized in child care," writes Dr. Spock, "feel that punishment is seldom required."

"The trouble with child punishment," says John Langdon-Davies, "is that it is so dangerous to the parent."

Now, my wife and I aren't reactionaries. We're just as progressive as the next couple. But we can't escape the fact that we were spanked and punished when we were little and that we seem to have grown into solid tax-paying citizens. Why, we ask ourselves, won't our children follow in our footsteps if we treat them in the same manner?

We've seen the children of our friends who don't believe in punishment, and for the most part, their offspring are spoiled, selfish and willful. We don't want our children to grow up like that.

By the same token, we don't want to punish them into becoming neurotics who when fully grown will spend most of their time with a psychoanalyst, only to be told that we as their parents are responsible for all the unhappiness in their lives.

IT'S really most perplexing. We're searching for a common-sense method by which to raise our offspring, a way somewhere between the standards of the past and the present, and we can't seem to find such a method.

Of course, we're pretty new at this business of bringing up baby and our present dilemma may be part of our apprenticeship as parents. But somehow we feel that 20 or 30 years ago when there weren't so many authorities on everything in America, the papas and mamas of the nation had a whole lot easier going with Junior than we have today with the authorities.

True or false?

Curtains for steamy places

Curtain your bathroom windows with wilt-proof wooden shutters for a new freshness, for privacy and easy maintenance

■ Louvered panels, hinged to fold back against the wall when open, give your bathroom a crisp look that stays that way in spite of steamy atmosphere. Closed, they guarantee privacy.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY ROBERT C. CLEVELAND

■ Top section of these double-hung shutters can be flung open for air and light while lower ones are closed for privacy. These hinged, wood blinds are not only decorative, but save laundry.

FURNITURE-COVERING "MIRACLE"

Beauty that never shows wear because underside color can never be touched!

Now you can have a unique, amazingly beautiful upholstering material you'll marvel at . . . for it just can't show wear! Yes, when your furniture is covered—or re-covered—with miracle Kalistron, you'll enjoy "brand new" beauty year after year. For Kalistron's gorgeous color is applied to underside of clear Vinylite* sheeting . . . permanently protected against marring surface wear . . . scratches, scuffs, spots.

Just one look will tell you Kalistron is different. For Kalistron's exclusive underside color creates a magnificent "color depth." It gives chairs, sofas, lounges a soft, glowing richness you must see to appreciate.

Easily cleaned with a damp cloth, miracle Kalistron can't chip, peel or crack. Ask to see Kalistron covered furniture at local stores, decorators and upholsterers. Over 30 decorator colors for you to choose from.

BULLETIN BOARD, FAMILY SIZE

Until you've had one, you have no idea how useful a family bulletin board can be. The Barry Sturts built this one in their kitchen. On it they tack invitations, announcements of coming events, the children's school work when it is outstanding, the latest recipe that appeals to anyone. Above all, they use it as a family intercommunication system. With all the comings and goings in a big family, this is about the only way to be sure each member gets his messages, knows where everybody is, when he is due home. One member of the family can be appointed custodian, to keep the board in good order.

A MODERN TRADITION

Flexscreen

BENNETT-IRELAND INC.
Chartered in 1906
NORWICH, NEW YORK

Flexscreen has become a modern tradition — on today's modern and traditional fireplaces. That's because its loveliness, convenience and safety enhance any hearth . . . because there's a Flexscreen that's right for every home.

There's only one Flexscreen. It's the original woven-metal fire curtain, with exclusive Unipull (the curtains glide open or closed at the touch of one hand). Positively spark-proof, yet its sheer beauty drapes your fires with a graceful charm that's sure to be envied.

There's a selection of beautifully styled attached Flexscreens—or you may have Flexscreen in a movable frame, if you prefer. Just insist on the Flexscreen label—at better stores everywhere. Write us for your catalog, at 1051 Bank Street.

Here's a gay, versatile design with wonderful decorative possibilities.

Decorating advice by mail

If you're decorating or refurnishing your home, House Beautiful offers you this personal service

How many times have you said: "If I could only talk to someone who really knows decorating, I could whip that room into shape."? Well, here is your big opportunity. HOUSE BEAUTIFUL is offering you the consulting services of Elaine Neal, an expert who knows the home furnishings field inside out.

This is not a service handled by a department or group of people. It is a truly personal service done by one person for one person. In other words, every room is visualized as a unit and seen through one pair of eyes. If a group of people handled the mail with one person doing color, for instance, and one fabrics, and one furniture placement, there could be no continuity, for each one would see your problem from a special angle—a different viewpoint.

Therefore, we ask you to be patient with us when the answers do not reach you within the three- or four-week limit. Mrs. Neal tries to get them out as promptly as possible, but at certain seasons—spring and fall—the mail piles up so that the time lapse can be quite long. And the only fair thing is to answer the letters in their proper turn.

Try to send in your plans and information well ahead of the date by which you wish to complete your rooms, and follow the directions on the opposite page carefully.

WHAT YOU SHOULD SEND US

1. Send us a floor plan drawn to ¼-inch scale, showing window and door placements, giving measurements and dimensions, ceiling height, and distances fireplaces or jogs extend from wall. Indicate the location of radiators, pipes, and electric outlets. Tell us the kind of windows you have, whether sash or casement, small or large panes, the distance of sills from the floor. Tell us in what direction the windows face.

2. List your favorite colors, and tell us which styles of decoration and furniture you prefer. Describe the furnishings you wish to keep and what you desire to buy new. Tell us whether your taste leans to wallpaper or paint.

3. Describe your location, whether city, suburban, or country. If there is a particular condition which must affect your choice of furnishings, please mention it. State your problems clearly in separate paragraphs. The more carefully you follow the instructions, the more helpful you will find the decorating advice you receive.

WHAT WE DO FOR YOU

1. We will send your floor plan back to you, showing your furniture arranged in a comfortable, balanced manner.

2. We will suggest color schemes and send color guide samples of wallpaper, paint colors, and fabrics. We cannot, however, guarantee fabric distribution in all regions, but our samples will serve as guides for your shopping.

3. We will suggest draperies, accessories, and the placement of pictures, mirrors, and lamps.

4. We will send you this information—four pages of it—clipped together in an orderly, easy-to-refer-to, portfolio, 8″ x 10″. All samples will be pasted down neatly and securely on the pages so you won't mix them or lose them.

Elaine Neal. House Beautiful's Decorating Adviser

Address her at HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, 572 Madison Avenue, New York 22, N.Y. Give all the important facts. Allow at least 3 weeks for reply. Remember to include fee of $5 per room. Make checks payable to HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.

It's new, it's a Wurlitzer, you can play it!

New Wurlitzer home organ with 1000 different tonal effects

So easy to play you can teach yourself from this book...

Music of the masters, or music of the moment—play either, play both on this new Wurlitzer Organ. Even if you've never played an organ before, you'll find this one easy to "get on to." A new book shows you how to start right off with simple tunes. Your Wurlitzer Dealer has it now.

Solo voices... blended harmonies... majestic full organ...

Let your hands wander over the keys—and listen! There's the voice of the clarinet, the fife, the French horn, the piccolo. Now you hear the harmony of diapason and strings—a multitude of tonal colors that puts new fun in playing and new joy in music.

Built in the tradition of the "Mighty Wurlitzer," this new Wurlitzer Organ is complete—a musical instrument the whole family can enjoy. Two full 61-note keyboards for your fingers. A 25-note pedal keyboard for your feet. And fully equipped, ready to plug in and play, it's the lowest-priced standard two-manual organ you can buy.

Decorate your outdoor living-dining room with good-looking flowers, using the same taste that you apply to furnishing indoors. Note how raised edge lends importance to plant bed.

Bring your garden right up to your house

Today's gardens are not to be viewed from afar, but are made to be lived in and enjoyed close at hand

RUTH B. MILLMAN, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT

If insects are a problem and your outdoor living must be in screened area, have your flowers close by; otherwise you will miss their fragrance and subtle color and texture changes.

The "Hospitality Area" comes to life with

Haeger Ceramics

SALLY POTTER says: "You have a talent—for home arrangement!"

EVERY WOMAN HAS IT. Perhaps you can't draw a line, but being a woman, "home making" is a deep-grained instinct, just waiting for a few little nudges to bring it out.

YOUR "HOSPITALITY AREA." First, it's for several guests who will sit while they chat with you. You'll want places for cigarettes, magazines, ashtrays, flowers and, above all, lamps. Here our end tables are chests in disguise; the sturdy coffee table large enough for flower bowls, books, and coffee, of course. Notice how we "make a wall" by screening an unused arch to the next room.

THE "LIFE" OF THE AREA. Study this arrangement. Isn't it hospitable? And what gives you that feeling? The Haeger accessories, of course. The lustrous beauty in the lamp design...the serene loveliness of the flower bowl ...the gay, whimsical figurines...the practical and pretty array of smoking conveniences. This is where your "woman's touch"—as personal as your signature—expressed in the Haeger Ceramics you select will create a charmingly warm and hospitable atmosphere in your home.

Do visit your nearest store featuring Haeger Ceramics soon. Feel as well as see the glorious glazes and colors on the many intriguing designs. You will be doubly proud of your selection, for Haeger is the greatest name in Ceramic Lamps and Artware today.

Sincerely,

Sally Potter

A small garden needs only a few plants, so you can afford to buy real fine ones—the kind you like to have close to your daily living. Here is a good example of a very simple arrangement from the 1951 Boston Flower Show.

PHOTOGRAPH BY PHIL FEIN

Where does the house end and the garden begin? This is a most practical arrangement of paving for a combination path-terrace. Use of tubs and large pots of plants lets you move best plants into most prominent display positions.

PHOTOGRAPH BY MAYNARD PARKER SCOTT & IMLAY, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS

Courtyards are excellent—though often unexploited—pots for flowers. There's no wind to blow them over, and they can be seen from many angles. Spring bulbs often bloom weeks earlier than in unprotected areas, so shortens your winter.

Modern Living calls for 180° WATER

Today's automatic clothes-washers and dishwashers demand plenty of really hot water . . . 180° water. Besides, for bathing and beauty . . . for scores of household uses, you need an abundance of hot water at various temperatures. You get this abundance by mixing cold water with hotter water—180° water.

180° WATER calls for RUUD-MONEL

Hottest water can never rust Ruud's tank of solid Monel. You get years and years of flawless service . . . years and years of crystal-clear hot water.

The Performance-Rated Ruud-Monel gives the hotter water you need for many uses. Mixed with cold water, Ruud-Monel's hotter water gives you more hot water per gallon of tank size.

RUUD PRODUCTION is determined by the materials supply—Monel, steel, zinc, copper. Monel, in particular, is short because it is a vital war material. During this period when Ruud water heaters will be made in limited numbers, high manufacturing and performance standards will be rigidly maintained.

OTHER RUUD PRODUCTS

- Galvanized-steel-tank water heaters.
- Commercial and industrial water heaters.
- The sensational Ruudiator House-heating Boiler.

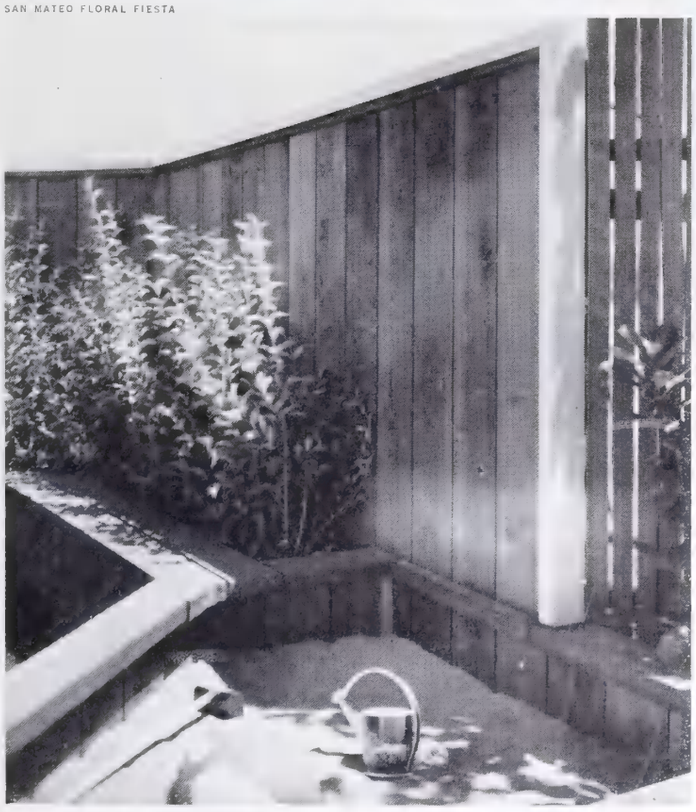
OSMUNDSON & STALEY, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS

Play yards must be easy to convert to adult uses. once need for them has passed. This sandbox can become an interesting flower bed. Wading pools make good lily pools. Spray pools become dance floors. Jungle gyms can do later duty as attractive trellises for vines.



Only the pre-three-year-old is content just to dig. Older children want space to mold things from moist sand. But needs change so rapidly that all play facilities must be easy to convert to other uses. This sandbox will become lawn or patio.

Water keeps all ages happy. Wading pool needs only 6 to 12 inches of water. A simple concrete basin 10 to 20 feet across makes a spray pool. It dries in an hour, so can double as dance floor or roller rink. Can be flooded in winter for skating.

CLARENCE PRENTICE, LANDSCAPE NURSERYMAN

SAN MATEO FLORAL FIESTA

Play yard needs bold architectural lines so that it remains attractive even when snow falls. Good design also brings a pride of ownership to the children, resulting in better tidiness on their part. Fence keeps dogs and unwanted chilling winds out of play yard.

Play is the child's work. He deserves pleasant surroundings that pamper him as he works. This sandpile has its own sun shade, but note that sun sterilizes sand at some time in day.

OSMUNDSON & STALEY, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS

Children like to cook. Even the smallest yard has space for this workable, attractive arrangement over a bed of sand. Top of sheet metal is bent inward, deflects heat back to food.

Shade is a must. Overheated children are unhappy people. This shade was made from pipe and canvas by the Oakland Park Department for 1951 California Spring Garden Show.

NEVER AGAIN!

but to people you don't care much about. Still, they have to be invited. At this point you say, "Let's give a cocktail party and get it over with."

Having made the decision, you or your husband remembers that there are a number of business acquaintances whom it would be politic to invite, though again the thought of spending an entire evening with somebody to whom you really haven't anything to say stuns both of you. Very well, let's get them over with also. Those business acquaintances are now added to the list. Finally, as long as you are inviting people, you might just as well get your friends in. Sensible though your friends are, if you don't invite them, they are insulted.

THE invitations now amount to about fifty people. You have forgotten ten, and you will remember these two days before the party. Total: sixty. Your living room can comfortably handle fourteen people—well, say eighteen, by squeezing. Sixty seems a dangerous invasion. However, you are quite sure that all sixty aren't going to show up. They never do, do they? At any rate, it is going to be only an informal cocktail party, and if everybody cannot find a seat, it won't matter. What you do not admit—if you have had experience you know it to be true—is this: Sixty-eight people will show up. A few of those you wanted to have—quite often those you most wanted to have—do not appear. Others, however, bring friends whom they happened to meet—I suspect in a Mission or an Opium Den—that afternoon. Since nobody takes a cocktail party seriously, unexpected arrivals are presumed to be welcome. The cocktail party is the free-for-all of social intercourse.

The invitations read "from 5 to 7." At 5:30 the blissful silence that fills the world on a spring eve pervades your room. How sweet it is! How much sweeter it would be were you not conscious of its impermanence!

Then they arrive, with shattering shouts of "Oh's" and "My dears."

At six o'clock the room contains about all the people it can hold. However, most of them have not yet arrived. You hope quite a number will leave to make room for others. They don't.

By 6:30 the noise is such that it couldn't be worse in a cage in which a herd of monkeys are being frightened by slithering alligators. The oxygen supply has given out; you are breathing pure, thick smoke. All those accidents which you foresaw were going to happen, and against which you had taken precautions, have happened, but in unexpected places. The anchovy canapé has been dropped on the light green chair; a peaceful cigarette, the only peaceful thing in the room, is smoldering in the piano; and the fat man has upset a Daiquiri. To his apologies you have replied, "Oh, it's nothing at all!"

One reason why you planned this party was to introduce Blenkinsop to Gaddish. These men have a lot in common. You have always wanted the two to meet, for it is possible that by such a meeting your husband's project might be furthered. Now Blenkinsop is in the east corner, Caddish in the west, and it looks as if never the twain shall meet.

IT IS a fallacy to believe that people make new friends at a cocktail party. No. Blenkinsop stays with his friends, Caddish with his, most of whom he saw yesterday. You now remember your purpose. You push a lot of people out of the way, you interrupt a few conversations, and you finally manage to get the two men together. Blenkinsop then asks Caddish what he thinks of the results of the election, and being unable to hear Caddish's reply, and being in any case totally uninterested in what he does think of the election. Blenkinsop drifts off to rejoin his friends.

Nobody leaves. Nobody leaves. Why? I do not understand it, because most people, I am sure, feel about a cocktail party as I do. Most people like to drink a cocktail or two, most of them would not agree with Paul Claudel's slighting statement that a cocktail is to a glass of wine as rape is to love. But can they really enjoy imbibing while standing on their feet in a fearfully close room? Why don't they leave? Is it asphyxiation that makes them stay? Is it fear of offending you? Or is it a hopeless, deedless inertia which has paralyzed their will? By eight o'clock it is still not over.

I presume that the way to shorten the duration of a cocktail party is to starve your guests. Hunger might make them go. However, your pride as a hostess does not permit you to be ungenerous. I don't know which is worse. I've attended cocktail parties where the food consisted of potato chips, mucilaginous olives, and peanuts. I have been to others where hors d'oeuvres rich enough for Chateaubriand or Honoré Balzac were served: smoked turkey, Nova Scotia salmon, caviar (though mostly red caviar), water chestnuts wrapped in bacon, meatballs, shrimps Orleans, piroshki, and petits saucissons (hot dogs). At the first party I ate stuff I detest because I didn't have anything else to do. At the second party I ate too much. In either case, I get no place.

Variation I-A of the Get-It-Over-With affair is the Meet-the-Celebrity Cocktail Party. It is like plain No. 1, except that the celebrity is obviously in agony and you will, in no circumstances, get to meet him.

More deadly and presumptuous than No. 1 or 1-A is No. 2—the Business Cocktail Party. This takes place in a hotel, to which, at the end of a difficult day, you are summoned so that you may become acquainted with the latest model of a refrigerator (or a new style of felt hat). The latest model is green instead of white; in other respects, it's the same refrigerator (or hat). You have to go: the refrigerator manufacturer is a client. If you don't show up, he will note your absence. It is perfectly amazing how accurately he counts the house.

AS YOU enter the room, you observe that it is lavishly decorated with flowers and that the trade mark of the refrigerator has been modeled in ice. If you should want a drink, you will not get it. The perspiring waiter will ask you what you want, and having carefully taken note of your wish, will disappear forever. If you should happen not to want a drink, six waiters will swoop down on you and force you to have one.

. You talk to people (if "talk" is the word I want) whom you have never seen before and will never see again. Mercifully, conversation is almost impossible, as there is on hand a six-piece hotel band, each musician especially chosen for strength of arm or power of breath. You don't get a look at the refrigerator, as the crowd is too thick. You are, however, handed an envelope which contains seven mimeographed press stories and four photographs. You are to take this home, study it, and learn that the new refrigerator represents "one of the significant contributions to the industrial development of civilization" and "plays its part in making America great." Before you leave, brush by your client: in fact, bump into him. As long as you came, you might as well make doubly sure that he has seen you.

THE No. 3 party is the informal or Oh-So-Gay Cocktail Party. You are bidden to this by your young cousin who has just married and to whom you sent a wedding present, thinking that you had done your duty. He feels it his duty (or his bride does) to invite you to their new apartment, which consists of two tiny rooms in Greenwich Village, furnished "cutely," with a doll on one chair or a mobile hanging from the chandelier. (It's never both in the same apartment!) Everybody sits on the floor. You are by far the oldest person there. Only one kind of cocktail is served, a sweet drink the bride has invented which contains cream and maraschino. Young men find young girls, young girls find young men, they pair off in corners, they giggle, and the room vibrates with love. It is a matinee of mating. You are obviously an intruder and, therefore, you don't have to stay long. You never will be missed.

All cocktail parties are uncivilized and unproductive of sensible social intercourse. They are hard on the nerves, the ears, the respiratory system, the stomach, the back, the legs, and the feet. They are a cowardly way of repaying social obligations. If you don't wish to have people who invited you over for dinner or an entire evening, reciprocate by sending flowers and let it go at that.

I SHALL never again, positively never, go to a cocktail party. If you have to go, let me give you two suggestions. First, find a chair —right away. If you don't you'll have to stand for the duration. Don't bother mixing with people; let them come to you. Just find a chair and sit quietly. Second, arrange a password with your wife or husband, one which will let the other half know that it is time to go and no fooling. The password must be such that eavesdroppers will not understand its significance. My wife and I have one which works perfectly. I ask her or she asks me anything pertaining to Anatole France. It is surprising how easily Anatole France can be worked into any conversation. If I hear her say, "It is years since I read Penguin Island," I get up and say to the hostess, "It has been lovely. Thank you so much for having us."

The most important home-making news in a decade . . . an inspired new collection by Russel Wright designed with you in mind! Over 50 pieces for the entire home . . . each one engineered for easy care, easy use. Take, for instance, this chair with the drop-leaf arms: one arm serves as an end table, the other as a magazine rack. Or this wheeled service cart with two sliding, metal-lined drawers, drop-leaves which form a table for two. Or . . . the cabinet with acres of space and a buffet serving surface which shrugs off heat and liquids. Each piece possesses the unaffected simplicity so characteristic of Russel Wright's designs. Executed in solid Shenendoah Sycamore with the warm Golden Greige finish, each piece works overtime for you in this servantless, small-homes era. See this historic collection at your favorite store or write for name of nearest dealer.

To free yourself from the slavery of housework, take advantage of new and efficient labor-saving equipment

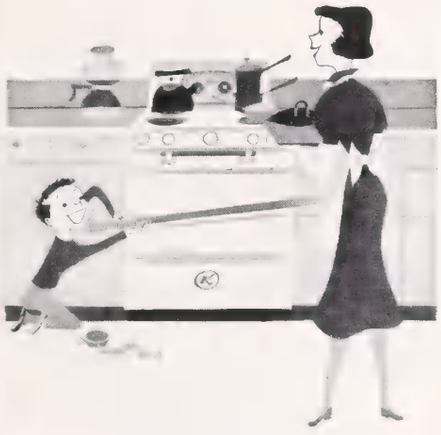
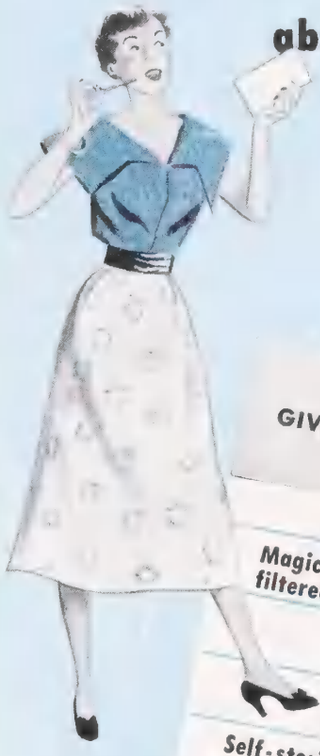
Are you one who has fallen for sheets in those lovely pastel colors? Now you can have an electric sheet in pink, blue, or maize (as well as white). Westinghouse has brought these out in mercerized broadcloth with a lustrous finish. They come in size 70″ x 84″, which fits twin or double beds. An 11″ non-heated area at foot end allows for tuck-in. The "automatic watchman" control looks like a powder box. To use the sheet you make up the bed as usual, first bottom sheet, then electric sheet topped with a lightweight blanket.



DRAWINGS BY KELLY OECHSLI

Want to learn how one small knob will do your washing? Well, not exactly, but almost. On their new "Time Line Washer," Norge has put a knob control on the back guard. You set it once. Then as it moves from left to right it fills the washer, washes, rinses, damp dries, and shuts itself off. It's as automatic as that, can be stopped and started at any position on the "Time Line." You can put the washer anywhere you choose, preferably near laundry tubs, sink, or drain. It need not be bolted down, fits snugly, neatly against wall.

If you're one who likes to have people drop in and enjoy offering them refreshments, you've wished many times for an extra refrigerator. Here is one that looks enough like a piece of furniture to go in living room, study, game room, or office. Known as the General Executive and made by General Air Conditioning Corp., it is finished with realistic-looking mahogany enamel, topped with tan Formica. In dimension 27½″ wide x 23″ deep x 36″ high, it has a capacity of 4 cu. ft., 2 ice trays, shelves adjustable for tall bottles.



Either kitchens are getting smaller or people want to crowd more into them. Anyway, we've heard lots of requests for small-size ranges with big cooking capacity. Kalamazoo obliges with two 30″-wide ranges, one gas, one electric. Both have huge 23″-wide ovens so you can bake several dishes at the same time, and 4 surface units. Both have Pyrex broiling grills, so you broil over glass, seal in juices, get even broiling. Glass is removable, of course, washes as easily as a dish. Handy storage compartment underneath holds utensils.

No one denies the advantages of all the mechanical equipment now available for our homes. But haven't you heard complaints about the noise all the motors make? Here's an electric refrigerator that is really silent. Made by Servel, Inc., it has neither motor nor moving parts to make noise or wear out. It works on the absorption principle, which any engineer can tell you about if you want to know. Refrigerators come in 8 sizes, the biggest 11.5 cu. ft., and operate on both AC and DC current. Shelves adjustable to seven positions.

"No place to put things" can never be said about Lyon kitchen cabinets! Now they have a little "eye-level" auxiliary cabinet which can be attached easily to all Lyon steel wall cabinets. Lid drops down at the touch of a finger, makes an extra shelf for cookbook or what have you. Cabinet itself is big enough for condiments, makes a grand place for pads and pencils, shopping lists, the little things so apt to get lost in a kitchen. You can have one or as many as you want, spot them where they will give you greatest convenience.

If you really want to get the man of the house interested in cooking, get him the big Universal gas range made by Cribben & Sexton. Men like to get out every utensil in the house, and they can use them all on this range. It has 6 top burners, 2 ovens, 2 broilers. The latter guarantee smokeproof performance with "whirlpool" grids. Juices run out of direct heat so they can't smoke, and grids are so easy to clean. "CP" models have automatic gas oven and broiler lighters, and automatic oven clock control for right-hand oven.

If you live in a high-humidity location, you needn't be one of those people who complains about the weather and does nothing about it. You can avoid moisture damage to the contents of your home with the new Kelvinator Air Drier. It's one of those magic devices that you just plug in and, presto, moisture in the air disappears. It removes as much as 3 gallons of water in 24 hours in a 10,000 cu. ft. space. Water collects in container or can be run directly into floor drain via hose. Fine for laundries, game rooms, store rooms, Among modern music I suggest Copland's Billy the Kid, Stravinsky's Petrouchka, Ravel's The Waltz, to name just three examples. Then, of course, Richard Rodgers, Cole Porter, and George Gershwin. The Rhapsody in Blue is an almost universal favorite.

Children also love to be gay and impudent. They like anything that strikes their funny bone. They like ridiculous conceits, strange words, impossible situations, crazy sounds. I am certain that children like humorous music. I have found that Weinberger's Polka and Fugue from Schwanda, Johann Strauss's Tritsch Tratsch Polka, Rossini's Overture to The Barber of Seville, Saint-Saen's Carnival of the Animals, Smetana's Overture to The Bartered Bride, Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite, etc. are favorites of this category. And assuredly children love Gilbert and Sullivan, not only because of the music but because of the funny plots and the fascinatingly incomprehensible words of the patter songs, and possibly also because of a certain streak of topsy-turvy cruelty inherent in Gilbert's nature.

It is also reasonable to suppose that children, like many adults,

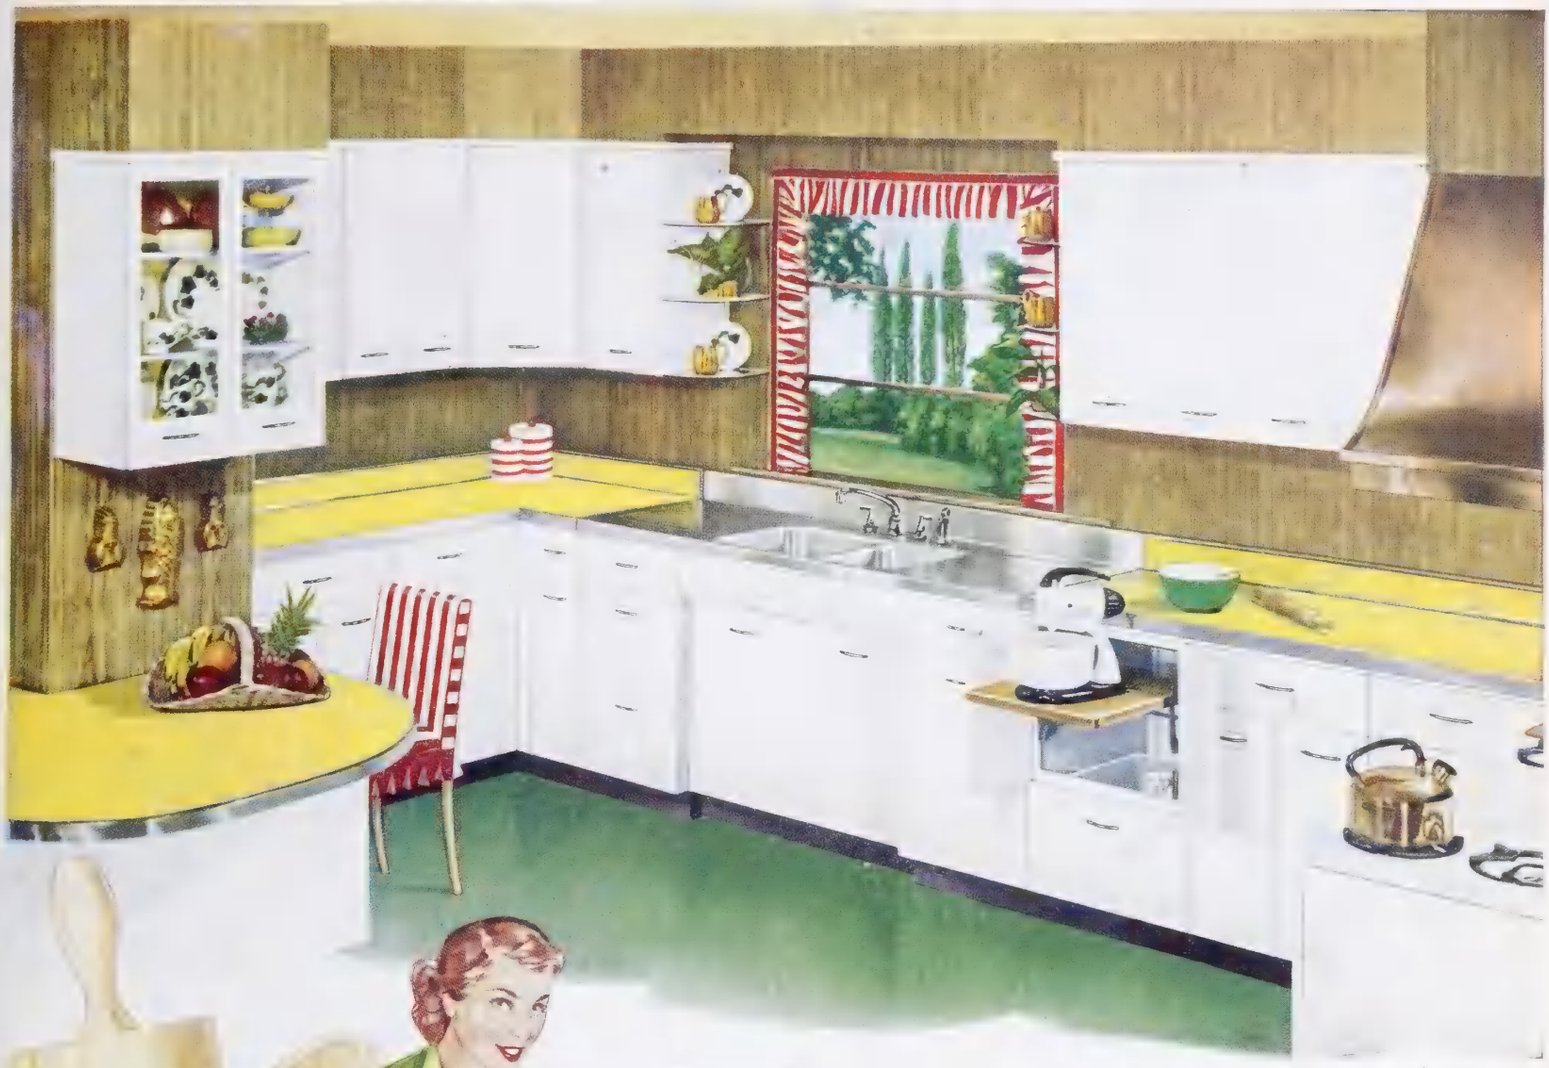
Short cut to an inexpensive Storage Wall

You don't have to pay the air-borne fee of a master cabinetmaker to build a decoratively distinguished wall of cabinet-like storage space. Call in a carpenter to do the simple job of shelf construction. But instead of installing the usual wood doors, which require expert and costly craftsmanship in trim and detail, conceal the shelves with handsomely textured roll-up shades of split bamboo or wood splints. See how designer Paul Frankl did this, using "Temlite" roll-up shades by Aeroshade Co.



• To substitute for costly cabinetry doors, easily installed roll-up shades of woven basswood splints create a distinguished, textured facade for a wall of storage space. Such shades, usually hung on windows, come in many colors.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

• Supple roll-ups do not hog space as open doors would, but whisk up and out of the way at the pull of a twine cord. You can get them up to 15'8" wide, in any length. Here the shade "fabric" was applied flat to lower cabinet doors.

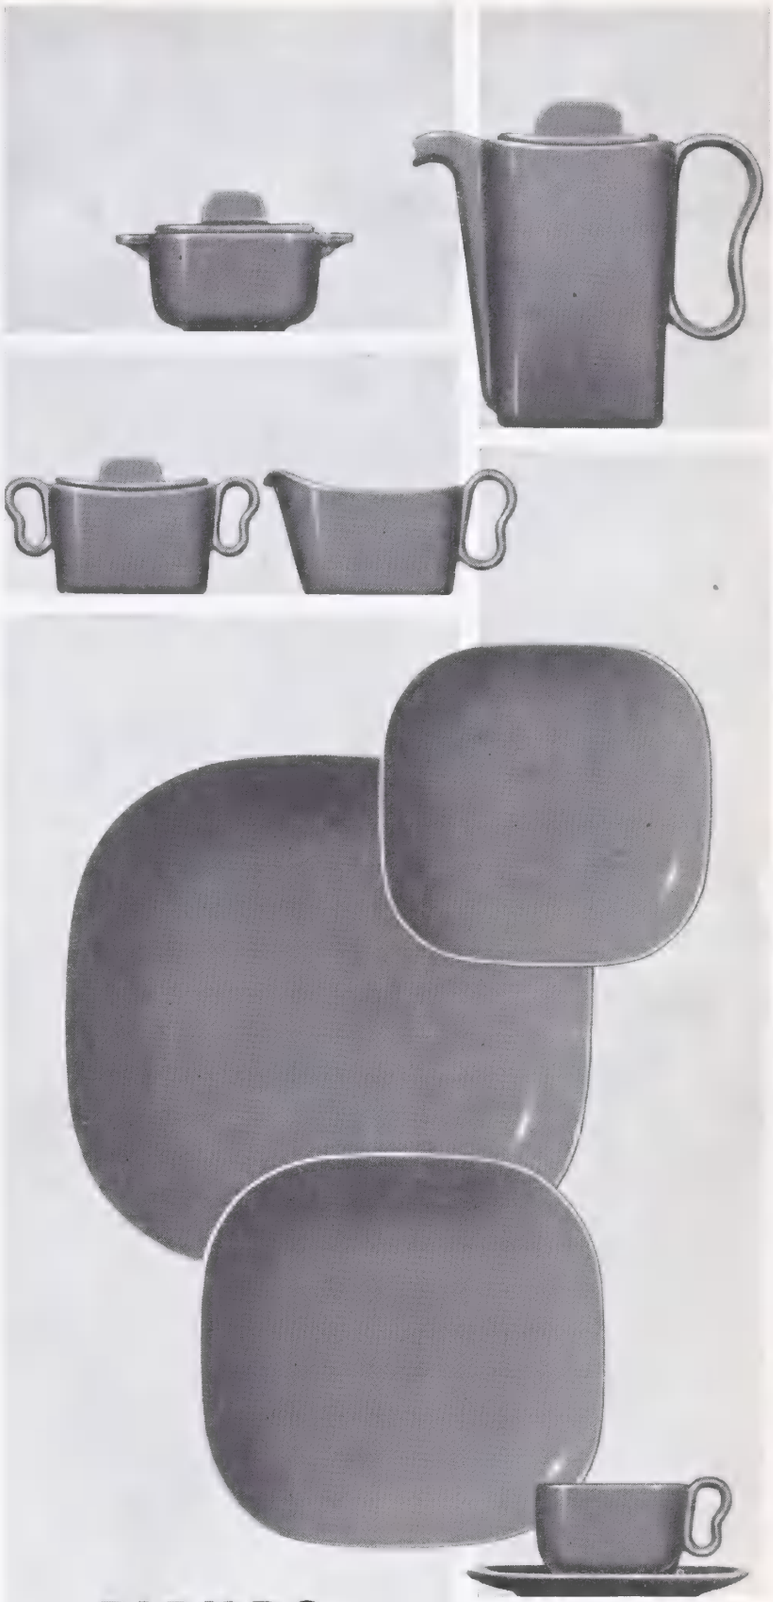
Doors can Double as Bookcases



In a small room this space-saving trick permits you to have your favorite books close at hand without sacrificing precious wall or closet space

PHOTOGRAPHS BY WILLIAM HOWLAND

■ If you have too many books and too little wall space—as is often the case in children's rooms—don't give up and store the books in the attic. See if you can turn a closet door into a bookcase as Mrs. Fairfax Murdock has done here. Remove center panel and fasten boxlike shelf structure (see below) to the back of the door. SHUTTERS—the permanent window "curtains" that give you light, air, and privacy, and need no doing up

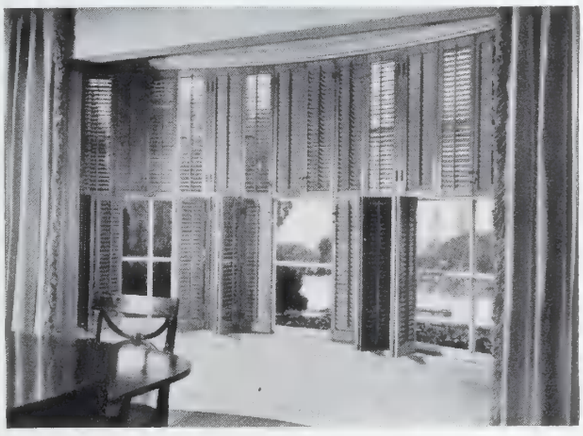
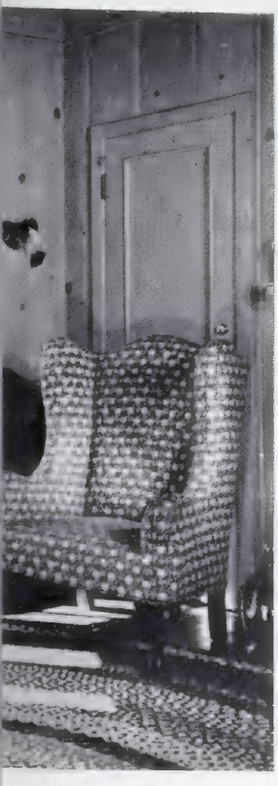
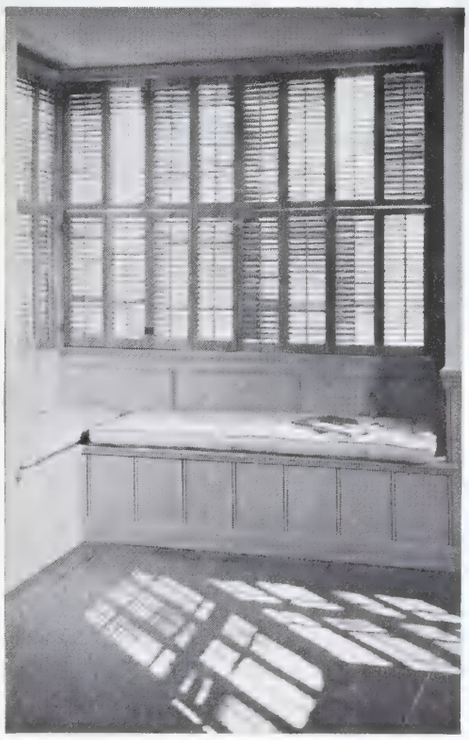
• Movable shutters, the old-time kind with adjustable louvers, are your answer if you want completely dressed windows that keep your privacy intact, yet let in light and air. But you don't need to canvass the wrecking yards to find them. They now come brand new and ready-made in a variety of sizes.



PHOTOGRAPHS BY ROBERT CLEVELAND



• The living-room bay of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moss, Beverly Hills, Calif., is fully dressed with shutters stained to match the pine walls, and a complicated window problem is solved. You can get such shutters made of pine in many colors. Upkeep is a matter of occasional dusting and washing down.



• Use shutters where curtains would be too bulky, as on dormer windows, French doors, or tiny windows high in the wall. Standard shutter panels are from 6" to 12" wide, 18" to 7' high. Two pairs of full-length panels dress this dormer.

• Full-length shutters can be cut in half to give you an upper and lower set. Double-hung like this, they offer all kinds of combinations for light-, air-, and privacy-control. Panels, hinged together in twos or threes, fold back neatly, save space.

• Shutter shadows of light and shade are a decorative plus. Shutters can be installed on double-hung or casement windows, on wood or metal frames. Unfinished, 12"x60" panel costs $11-$12.

WHAT KIND OF MUSIC DO CHILDREN LIKE?

prefer music which tells a story. It helps them to translate music back into the life with which they are familiar. That's why Dukas's The Sorcerer's Apprentice is popular, and so is The Skaters Waltz, and so is, with slightly older children, Richard Strauss's Till Eulenspiegel. Prokofieff's Peter and the Wolf owes its popularity to its being a combination of good storytelling and good music.

HAVING made the suggestions that children like dramatic music, storytelling music, and comic music, I now must circumscribe my suggestions with the caution that many exceptions exist. Probably everything I said could be gainsaid. Children's tastes differ as much as adults' tastes. They don't like only exciting music. One of my boy's favorites is Mozart's Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, as gentle, restrained a composition as you could find.

Let's not set up any hard and fast rules of what is suitable children's music. Nor does it make any difference what kind of music children like, as long as they like music. There is no such thing as music that is *un*suitable for children. There are books that are unsuitable for children. I would hardly give Dangerous Acquaintances or From Here to Eternity to a youngster to read. But he can listen to any music because music by itself, stripped of explanation, titles, or program notes, has no social message, and is neither moral nor immoral. We adults may feel certain music as being seductive, but I doubt whether a child, listening to Salome's Dance of the Seven Veils, would be "corrupted" by the music. No, of course not. Even Salome's last apostrophe to the severed head of Jokanaan may well be proper music for children. The Rite of Spring at its first performance violently shocked and shook an adult audience. It did so not only because of its dissonances but also, I think, especially because of its "immorality," an immorality which was demonstrated by the accompanying ballet but was hardly innate in the music itself. Now children listen to it. And that's as it should be.

ay the natural stage, because ieve that most children are ally not neat. Left alone, they l be quite willing to live in nfortable pigsty. This is hard e rest of the house and hardly best training for the child as ure social creature. So we try best to cajole or train the oc- nt of the room to neatness. esult is sometimes one of those es between child and parent a parent cannot win.

st children are collectors. refuse to throw anything . The favorite toy is usually ld broken toy, the tin soldier ut his head, or the doll with eye. In addition, a child's tion includes a bus transfer, gic ring obtained in exchange ne top of a cereal package, a er of chewed pencils without s, a piece of taffy from Atlan- ity, a piece of glass, origin own, a deflated football, one sock with a hole in it, and half a compass.

A particular treasure is the envelope of a year-old letter from Grandmother, though the letter itself has been lost.

All this lies around the room. When you plan the room, when you decorate it, when you furnish it you must plan to cope with the child as a collector and you must take into account the natural untidiness of children. It seems to me that a child's room ought to contain few objects, and those it does contain should be large and substantial. The furniture, even for a small child's room, ought not to be itsy-bitsy. Little objects just add to the confusion. They are also likely to get broken. You are not going to stop ball playing in a room altogether. The ideal child's furniture, from a child's point of view, should be capable of having a ball bounced against it. Surfaces should be hard and simple. While I do not suggest that a child's room should look like a hospital room or be devoid of the kind of beauty and warmth that a good picture on the wall lends to a room, I do suggest that the room be underfurnished and that there be as much unused closet space as possible. Soon enough such space is going to be filled up with stray objects.

• Children can be orderly only if there is a place for their toys and paraphernalia. See how these storage cabinets give interest to window, provide seat. Shown in home of the Alvin Lippmans.

It seems to me that most of the children's rooms that I have visited are planned to be "pretty" and "adorable" rather than serviceable. They are planned to make an impression on the friends of the parents who enter the precincts willy nilly in order to admire the offspring. It is really quite curious how frequently a child's furniture is adult furniture covered over or painted up to be artificially young.

Take the chair. The chair is often a standard upholstered chair with a pillow for a seat. The fabric used is gay—gay pink for a girl or gay blue for a boy—and shows chocolate stains very easily. If you lift the pillow, you will find, hidden in the crevices, various objects occasionally of an unsavory natur The other extreme is the straig wooden chair which is so unco fortable that the child uses the b as a chair. If he uses the bed a chair, the springs will soon broken.

Take a child's desk. The de we bought for our boy has a nu ber of drawers and small compa ments. The drawers are hard open and the partitions betwe the compartments are by this ti broken. It is a most uninviting, i practical desk, with not enou kneehole room for his very lo legs. The drawers are not lar enough: most of the books a papers are left on top of the de

Ob- sly, when Mother is dressing children, the problem of neat- never—well, almost never— comes up. But as the child starts to dress himself, his clothes should be within easy reach. Drawers should be compartmented so that, as he grows, there will be some hope of his organizing his clothes in an orderly fashion. Of course, in the ideal world, the child's chest of drawers would be operated by springs so that the drawers would close themselves—and no one would know what the insides looked like.

AN important object in a child's room is a wastepaper basket large and attractively decorated. On the wall I suggest several pictures framed without glass in which the pictures can be changed. Children change their tastes. And indeed a child's life is accompanied by a series of pictures, a series which begins with Mother Goose illustrations and ends, in a boy's room, with his first all-color photograph of a dazzling motion picture star, clipped surreptitiously from Daddy's copy of Esquire Magazine.

However, after I have made all these suggestions, I realize that my most important contribution is the sunk-in floor garbage can with magnetic attachment. I now must leave you and return to the invention in order to perfect the details.

● A big, double-door cleaning closet is designed around the things that have to go into it. Step-stool, vacuum cleaner and all its attachments, long-handled brooms, mops, and all the packaged cleaning supplies were measured first, then shelves and partitions built to accommodate them. Near-by shelves store frequently used food

There are two basic reasons why this kitchen serves its family as efficiently as it does. First, Mrs. Myers knew exactly what she wanted. Second, Architect Smith knew exactly how to give it to her.

As a matter of fact, Mrs. Myers analyzed her family's needs to the point of putting them down in a memo written to her architect before blueprints were even started. She did it not in terms of a plan, but in terms of how the plan must work. For instance, here's one of her notes: "Teen-agers are always back and forth getting Cokes, pickles, mustard. That's all right, but I don't want them in my way when I'm cooking." Still another: "Counters the same height as the stove, so that pots of food will not slide off and so there is not the constant danger of anyone brushing against pot handles and upsetting hot things on himself." And so on through a long list of her kitchen "musts."

Family needs translated into blueprints

Architect Smith did some analyzing too, drew up a plan to meet Mrs. Myers's prescription, then selected equipment and materials qualified for the performance required. Here is what she used:

Kitchen equipment: Wood cabinets. Kitchen Maid Corp., Andrews, Indiana. Range, refrigerator, freezer. Kelvinator Div., Na vinator Corp., Detroit, Mic washer sink with Was disposer. See what wonders a Nurre "living picture" mirror can work in your favorite room

No other single accessory can so enhance the appearance of your favorite room as a lovely Nurre "Living Picture" Mirror. In the decorative sense, a Nurre Mirror, created by Nurre's own decorator-designers, is a thing of rare beauty in itself . . . an especially refreshing note in severely modern settings to relieve the over-all effect of "plainness." And functionally, a Nurre Mirror gives any room an entirely new look . . . making it seem larger and more spacious . . . introducing subtle shadings of light and color . . . lending emphasis to a particular furniture grouping and carrying out any desired decor.

All this and more you can accomplish with a Nurre "Living Picture" Mirror—and at a cost to fit any budget, because the Nurre price range is extremely broad. See Nurre Mirrors at better furniture and department stores. Choose from a wide selection of framed and Venetian patterns specifically created for contemporary, traditional and period settings. Be sure you get the best by asking for genuine plate glass Nurre "Living Picture" Mirrors.

Lost horizon found

If you are looking for a new Old West to conquer this fall or winter, there's Apple Valley, California, latest darling in sun and saddle circles. It's 93 miles northeast of Los Angeles on Route 66, five miles from Victorville on the Santa Fe Railroad, and equipped with a welcoming airstrip for those who fly their own. You may already know Apple Valley, by sight at least, since its Joshua tree-spotted desert and snow-capped mountain backdrop were conspicuous in such movies as Lost Horizon, Sword in the Desert, Duel in the Sun. But not even technicolor can reproduce the true beauty of this choice desert basin.

Three thousand feet high in the San Bernardinos, Apple Valley boasts all year around that combination of hot but not too hot sunshine and cold but not too cold nights that make desert vacationing the wonderful tonic it is. As resorts go, it is spanking new—only five years from bare desert to model frontier town with all the conveniences. Many who own its white-fenced ranch houses or are regular visitors are Hollywood celebrities. Behind the deliberately frontier front along its main street, nevertheless, is a genuine Old Western friendliness. It's pretty sure to suit you, whatever your idea of fun may be—a lazy afternoon beside the pool or rugged exploration via pack trip; golf on the all-grass or water sports at near-by Big or Arrowhead Lake, snow at Snow Valley.

Island valleys, emerald, mountain-rimmed, sheep-strewn, that Samuel Butler had in mind when he described in Erewhon his idea of Utopia. But to the fisherman, New Zealand is, first and foremost, the spot where the mighty black marlin come bigger and fightinger than elsewhere—especially from mid-December through April. And the lakes and rivers do really teem with rainbow trout (season—mid-November to April). Today, with Pan American and British Commonwealth Pacific bringing New Zealand to little more than 24 hours from our west coast, you can enjoy both the scenery and the fishing in less time and at less expense than you might think. The Auckland Public Relations Office is eager to custom-tailor package trips throughout its domain. Example: an all-expense over-all sight-seeing, deep sea and trout fishing, private automobile and fishing yacht included. All accommodations pre-arranged; 30 days for two, around $650.

Midwestern surprise

If you like surprises, plan to be in southeastern Indiana October 5, 6, or 7, when every little gorge in Clifty Falls State Park will be choked with autumn color. The Ohio will look the bluer for the richly tapestried hills of Kentucky on its opposite bank, and the little river town of Madison near the park invites you to inspect a dozen or more of its prize properties. Madison, of course, is small and midwestern. Its most recent fame came in 1943, when the OWI chose it to be photographed as the "typical American town." The greater your surprise then, to discover there a considerable showing of noble old homes in the Virginia mansion tradition, white pillars, porticos, spiral staircases, captain's walks, carved woodwork, antiques and all! Several of them are open all year, like the Lanier House, rich with the genius of Baltimore-born designer Frances Costigan and the piquant attraction of a top-floor nursery crammed with the furniture, toys, and minutiae of long-ago childhood. However, most houses are open only during the tour, which is a civic betterment project, and will cost you $2 plus tax. Best bets for overnight: Clifty Inn, in the state park a mile away; the Hillside or Denny Hotels in town; and a number of tourist homes, augmented for this occasion, and available through contact with the Reservations Chairm 506 West Main Street, Madi Indiana.

Caribbean by car

People are just discovering that there's more to Cuba than Havana, and that several of the larger Caribbean Islands are particularly rewarding to those who bring their own car, rent one, or utilize recently expanding automobile or motor coach touring facilities. Just which is for you, of course, involves research into how and for how much you can get your car there, entrance requirements, island driving costs. But, however you make it, you'll find the Central Highway that extends some 700 miles east and west the length of Cuba, together with the side roads leading from it, veritable roads to romance. You will also find Puerto Rico set up with a number of "out on the island" tours from San Juan, from a half-day jaunt to El Yunque and its tropical rain forest, to a three-day tour of the entire island. And the scenic roads of Jamaica are mapped and illustrated for you in a Guide put out by the Jamaican Automobile Association, which thoughtfully includes data on licensing procedures, facilities such as hotels and petrol stations, points of interest. Rhapsody in blue

If just any beach won't do, you might turn your next dreams toward Cuba's Varadero, La Playa Azul, or Blue Beach, to you. Here the brand new Hotel Varadero Internacional now gives you suitable entree to a resort community long more or less exclusive to opulent villas, private clubs, and the Cuban smart set. Varadero Beach is a thin finger of palm-spattered sand extending into the Gulf Stream from the north coast of Cuba. Not only is it pleasantly cooled by steady breezes, surrounded by warm waters rich with fighting fish, and replete with facilities for typical Caribbean beach activities, but its powdery white sands borrow blue from the intense aquamarines of the water and are considered by many one of the greater beauties of the entire area. And the new Varadero Internacional is a beautiful background from which to enjoy it. It has elegance, air-conditioned lobbies, and an arrangement whereby all guest rooms are turned toward the breeze. It has the usual pool, cabañas, a Café Continental where two orchestras, one American and one Latin, plus Broadway-caliber entertainment, keep things lively; two dining rooms, a full panoply of shops, providing everything from aspirin to French imports, and, Varadero being Cuba, a gaming casino. Winter rates: $20 and $24 per day for a double room, meals extra. The beach is 120 miles east of Havana, whence you can make it in a little over two hours by highway (by bus), or thirty minutes by air via Aerovias "Q" or Cubana Air Line. You can easily make this an extra bonanza on a Florida trip, for National Airlines has four flights daily between Miami and the Cuban capital.

What to do with an impossible fireplac

Before

• We've all shuddered over familiar fireplaces like this one, above. Roughing it for a week end, such a lump of fireplace can be ignored, but confronting it in daily life is another thing. When the Mathew Jenkins turned their Pebble Beach hide-out into a year-round home, something drastic had to be done about the fireplace. So by sheathing the fieldstone, they covered the old ugliness, and by using wood horizontally, combined with Roman-type brick, they immediately gave dimension to the room. At once the fireplace became a congenial setting for the sleek furniture grouping. Note, too, how the lack of mantel, and the use of few, but carefully selected accessories contribute to the serenity of this new room. The room, below, belies its unesthetic origin, with a new look.

Walls and cabinets are Malarkey plywood of vertical grain fir, finished natural, washable.

Build your new kitchen of Malarkey plywoods, with flush doors of matching woods. Genuine wood, like real leather, has no substitute. Malarkey plywood is wood in its most beautiful and usable form.

Warmth and color are as important in the modern kitchen as cleanliness and convenience. You get all of these qualities when you build or remodel with Malarkey plywoods, and in addition your kitchen will have long style life and low upkeep costs.

Choose from a wide range of light or dark Malarkey plywood panels and doors. Finish them to your color taste showing the natural grain and color; deepen or lighten them as much as you like, or finish them in gleaming paint surfaces. The kitchen shown above is a suggestion of the exciting possibilities that await you. In addition to its practical and convenient plan, it contains 16 step-and-bend saving ideas which you or your builder can follow.

Plans for this kitchen, complete bill of materials and production drawings of each of these 16 features will be mailed for 10c. Address: M and M Wood Working Company, 2304 North Columbia Boulevard, Portland 17, Oregon.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT THE HIGH COST OF EATING WELL

(See HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S recommendation for a minimum seasoning wardrobe, page 199, May, 1951).

3. Use the flavor of one food to enhance and embroider another. This works well when you use expensive foods as flavorings for inexpensive ones.

4. Think of left-overs as ingredients in other recipes, rather than as something merely to repeat and repeat. Some of the world's best recipes are dependent on using previously cooked foods.

5. Get straightened out in your mind that low priced does not need to mean inferior. Shop for high quality foods, but seek out those which are not vogueish, or which are in abundant supply. Eating what everybody else eats is the sure way to spend more. This is one time when being original and different is the way to be economical. However, you can economize on foods that are only a part of a recipe that has other highly flavorful ingredients.

6. Get acquainted with the practices of foreign cooking. For instance, the French and Chinese cuisines are probably the most cultivated and sophisticated in the world.

7. Get in the habit of using concentrates (borrowed richness like chicken concentrate) to step up the richness of economy recipes.

ONE OF the most effective, and, among us, the most neglected methods of securing the illusion of high living in the midst of scarcity is through menu planning. You all know the function of the one-dish meal as a meat and flavor stretcher. Whatever the ingredient that might have been insipid when used alone, loses its identity in the whole. The most savoring ingredients enhance the flavor of all the rest. But did you ever realize that a five-course dinner is merely a different way of achieving the same result? The true value of the several-course meal in eating inexpensively is that it can weave foods of different price and quality into a total composition which gives the effect of richness, even though many of the materials are quite ordinary when considered by themselves. As you are skillfully led on through the succession of courses, you hardly realize that you have been enticed into eating enough odds and ends before you come to the main course so that your appetite has nearly disappeared before the arrival of the costly meat. The French hors d'oeuvres course, at luncheon, is a perfect example of this. For by the time you have gorged on a few modest bites of eight or ten different delicious things (which are probably left-overs to begin with) you can barely struggle through a plain omelet.

In the past, diners did get onto this trick and demanded advance notice of what was going to appear so that they could save their appetites for the best dishes. This was the origin of the written or printed menu card, which we Americans find so amusing and archaic. But printed menu or not, the trick works for most of us, for few people can resist the first tempting dish that comes along, even if they are well aware of what may be coming after it.

If you don't believe this, watch in restaurants how the bread and butter disappears while people wait for dinner to be brought in. Some restaurants even specialize and feature lots of courses on a prix-fixe dinner, and run in four or five courses ahead of the meat course, which invariably turns out to be of inferior quality. Yet the happy diners throng to such places and even stand in line for what they think is "a good buy."

But it is not enough to make a canny composition of each menu. In addition to this you must vary the pace and richness and character of your meals from day to day. I remember my mother exclaiming over the extravagant table of a French family living next door, until it finally dawned on her that the lavishness was more seeming than real. For though one day they would have a rich dinner crowned by a magnificent French gâteau, it would be followed on the next by a single dish of lentils, with a crisp green salad, coffee and fresh fruit.

Over a period of time the expensive and the cheap canceled each other out, so that the food budget was no higher than that of an average family with a succession of mediocre meals. Yet this family had the illusion of high living, which the others did not. In attempting to imitate this, remember it was the drama provided by contrast which did the trick. Two meager dinners in a row and the spell would have been broken.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT THE HIGH COST OF EATING WELL

During the period of meat rationing in the Forties, most people relied heavily on meat stretchers, some of which are very, very good, as for example this:

Rice and Sausage Casserole

1 pound sausage
2 tablespoons hot water
1 cup coarse cracker crumbs
1 cup hot boiled rice
1 cup canned tomato
1 cup chopped celery and leaves
½ cup chopped onion
1 clove minced garlic
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ tablespoon Beau Monde Seasoning
2 tablespoons butter

Cut sausage into small pieces and fry until delicately browned, stirring constantly; add water. Combine crumbs, rice, tomato, celery and leaves, onion, garlic, and seasonings, mixing lightly; add sausage and mix well. Turn into greased casserole, dot with butter and bake in moderately hot oven (375° F.) for 30 minutes. Approximate yield: 8 or 10 portions.

Other people found out that a tiny portion of meat, which would have been appallingly small if presented as the main course at the beginning of a meal, seemed quite reasonable when following canapes of liver paté (point free), and served with sherry, half a grapefruit and a highly seasoned dish of shrimps cooked in wine.

Shrimps

18 large Magdelena Bay shrimps or prawns
1 onion, chopped
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 clove garlic, minced
½ bay leaf, minced
1 cup hot water
1 teaspoon cornstarch, blended with 2 tablespoons of cold water
Salt and pepper to taste
½ cup sherry

Wash and shell the raw shrimps, taking out the blue vein. Fry the onion in the oil, add garlic and bay leaf. Add the shrimps and sauté for 5 minutes. Add the water, stir. Stir in the cornstarch mixture and cook, uncovered for 15 minutes, over a gentle flame, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper, remove from fire and add sherry. Pass crisp zweiback or thin, hot buttered toast with this.

People also found the situation could be reversed, by preceding the fish with a generous serving of liver paté or a small one of cooked liver—(both of which were point free.) If you are astounded by the idea of serving meat BEFORE the fish, let me refer you to the words of Mrs. Buwei Yang Chao, a much traveled Chinese gentlewoman, author of the delightful "How to Cook and Eat in Chinese." Mrs. Chao remarks, ". . . Being left to my own devices under all sorts of conditions has made me feel most conventions of cooking, serving, eating to be a little silly." The longer you ponder these words, the more you see of the world, the older you get, the more you will be inclined to agree. So here is the recipe for liver—to be served before the fish.

Liver

3 slices of pork liver
2 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper to taste
1 onion, sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons bacon fat
1 cup red wine
2 tablespoons parsley, minced

Drop the liver slices in boiling water to sear the surface. Take them out and cut into squares. Roll these in the flour which you have seasoned with salt and pepper. The best way is to put liver, flour, pepper and salt in a clean paper bag and shake them around. (The salt, put on the meat before it is cooked will extract some of the juices, but this doesn't matter as they are going into the sauce anyway.) Next sauté the onion and garlic in the bacon fat. When the onion is nicely browned add the liver. Sauté the liver until it is well browned, pour on the wine which has been heated in another pan, cover and cook for half an hour. Add boiling water if necessary to make the gravy the consistency you desire. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

After this preliminary dish serve your fish with a very sharp sauce. There are dozens of them in every recipe book.

IN MENU making, a few simple principles are of more help than all the recipes in the world. It is the relationship of the foods to each other, rather than the foods themselves, with which you are concerned, for you are interested in building up a whole—the dinner. Concern yourself with the over-all effect given by each food; that is, whether it is bland, sharp or rich. For example, potato soup is a bland dish, fried chicken with cream gravy is a rich one, sliced oranges are sharp in flavor.

In menu planning, which (it can't be repeated too often) is the art of making a composition of your meals, you are also concerned as to whether foods have contrasting colors, whether they are soft or crisp in texture, formless or shaped in appearance. For example, potato soup, fried chicken with cream gravy and sliced oranges would not make too inspiring a menu because the soup with the sauce coming after are both white and shapeless.

Sauces, too, fall into groups—thick ones like cream sauce, buttery rich ones like hollandaise and mayonnaise, and watery, sharp, thin sauces like sauce vinaigrette.

Try your hand at making up menus, just to get used to thinking of food this way. For example: Tomato bouillon—thin sharp Beefsteak and kidney pie—rich, shapeless. Lettuce salad—sharp, crisp, formed. Apple juice gelatine with custard sauce — bland, formed. Fruit cookies—rich, sweet. Black coffee—bitter.

If you are not used to thinking this way it will seem hard to you at first, but after it becomes more natural and you begin to do it without thinking of it, you will be surprised how your meals improve.

You will also be amazed to see how the juxtaposition of several simple dishes adds up to a successful meal. You can change the whole tone of a simple meal by using a small amount of something unusual or rich. I remember a most successful meal which started off with Russian Beluga caviar. It so "set the tone" of the dinner that no one noticed that there wasn't any meat. Actually the caviar cost as much as steak would have. (Of course, the substitution of caviar for steak isn't being recommended as the way to feed a family, but that was not the aim of the dinner.

If you want to serve epicurean, well-balanced meals and still keep within your budget, read Economy for Epicures, by Mary L. R. Taylor. This book contains 400 economy menus, conveniently divided into categories: Family Luncheons and Dinners for Summer and Winter; Party Luncheons and Dinners; Buffet Suppers; Special Low-Cost Dinners; Three-quarter of an Hour Dinners for the Woman with a Job; etc. Economy recipes are given for every dish mentioned. Mrs. Taylor tells you what not to do as well as what to do at every step in the preparation of a recipe or menu. She is an authority on the cost and quality of food.

Once you've seen its sparkling beauty on the walls of your kitchen, bathroom or playroom, you will be a "Coronet" enthusiast forever. Deep-bevel edges give this superior plastic tile an appearance of luxurious depth. Once over lightly with a damp cloth renews its loveliness even after years of use, and—best of all news—it is thrifty to buy and goes on your walls quickly and easily. Install it yourself or ask your dealer for an estimate.

DRAPERY HARDWARE

FOR BEAUTIFUL WINDOWS

To get the most from your careful planning and lovely fabrics, depend on Kirsch drapery hardware. You pay no more to enjoy the extra beauty, value and durability of the fine products made by the leader in the business. Ask for Kirsch . . . select from this line that is complete for window needs.

Kirsch traverse (draw cord) rods, for example, work better and look better longer . . . Generous, positive overlap of the master slides insures privacy — your curtains stay closed. The cords are hidden inside the rods. They are simplicity itself to put up . . . and the famed bone-hard Kirsch enamel finish lasts for years and years. The adjustable type comes in four length-sizes, for windows 28 inches to 150 inches wide. (Also available in cut-to-measure type.)

Delightful

CORNER AND BAY WINDOWS

Kirsch traverse rods also come in one-way draw, for beautiful effects in corner or bay windows . . . and for French doors or in-swinging casement windows. Kirsch cut-to-measure traverse rods can be curved to fit bow windows, too! Ask your Kirsch dealer about this typical Kirsch "extra."

■ The swinging motion is one a child enjoys longer than any other. You can make a swing, also many other pieces of playground equipment, from the easy-to-follow directions in "Home Play and Play Equipment for the Preschool Child," Government Printing Office, Wash., D. C. (15¢).

EQUIPMENT FOR ACTIVE PLAY

(See Article on Pages 174 to 177)

■ Play is a necessity, not a luxury, of childhood. If it is hard to find simple equipment like these blocks, write the National Recreation Association, 315 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y., for a list of their bulletins on ways to use commercial and homemade play equipment.

■ Platform truck satisfies the five basic requirements of all good play apparatus: 1, provides a safe outlet for surplus energy; 2, encourages body-building activity; 3, needs little supervision; 4, attracts children to play yard; 5, is adaptable by child to a choice of play activities.

■ All children like the sense of motion. They need space at home to run and jump, yes; but they also need equipment or trees to climb, swing, balance, and to hang from by their hands and feet. This jungle-end swing set (about $90) satisfies preschool through Grade 2.

PHOTOGRAPHS FROM "CREATIVE PLAYTHINGS"

● Preschool children like to carry things around, build simple playhouses. Hollow blocks like these are lightweight, cost about $50 for set of 20. Play boards (in child's arms) are about $1. Little barrels (about $2) are great favorites. (More equipment for children's play on next page)

'Round the clock freedom from Heating Discomfort

®Janitrol
WINTER AIR CONDITIONER

While ordinary automatic warm air heating brought freedom from furnace fixing it didn't always bring complete comfort. Sudden cold and hot air blasts . . . cold floors . . . chilly "seventies" were common. Surface Combustion, leading pioneers of advanced design gas heating equipment, overcame these problems to bring complete freedom from heating discomfort.

New, more accurate controls, faster heat transfer, improved combustion efficiency and constant air circulation are combined in Janitrol Winter Conditioners to bring you heating luxury that costs no more than out-dated equipment.

So, insist on Janitrol for comfort-level heating...enjoy the benefits of a continuous gentle flow of filtered, humidified warm air that provides a more even room temperature from floor to ceiling regardless of outside weather.

Your Janitrol dealer will gladly demonstrate these features that make Janitrol the preferred heating in builders' own homes. Your Janitrol dealer is listed in the yellow pages of your phone directory under "Furnaces"—call him for winter comfort advice.

The Dutch Spirit and Puritan England Marched Side by Side in Cherry Valley

This splat-backed bench in cherry with traditional pine seat merges the style influences of two centuries of American life in a distinctive style known as Stickley American. Mirror (17½" x 37") with a copy of Currier & Ives etching.

Patroon, puritan, gentleman adventurer, frontiersman, farmer and financier . . . each wrote his life history and left his imprint along New York State's historic "pathway of empire"... the Cherry Valley turnpike.

Out of this great diversity of cultures and interests, sprang a virile and regional furniture style. Marked by simplicity, primarily for use with no clutter of things that didn't belong, it clung with an appreciative eye to basic principles of beauty.

Leopold Stickley, famed Valley cabinet maker, has taken this regional style and its famous fruitwood, shaping both to the changing needs of the times. Today Stickley American furniture is as distinctive in its own design as the style influences which gave it birth. Possessing their utility, grace and honesty of craftsmanship, it has the muted gleam of a finish that cannot be mass produced, a hint of the rich patina that will develop over the years.

Read "A Developing Furniture Style". . . the fascinating story of American furniture development from the pilgrim century down to today. 52 pages, 19 illustrations. By postpaid mail, $1.

■ Climbing (wooden or metal) gyms, built for continued safety outdoors, are expensive. But this sturdy rope gym, patterned after Army commando-climber, costs only about $50, or make one yourself from rope, cargo nets.

■ Preschool tots get a lot of fun from fireman's gym. They can get a three-alarm thrill climbing up rungs, sliding down pole, running to imaginary fire. Anchor climber for older children in concrete. (About $70.)

■ Movable things, like this box ($10), crate ($10,) and ladders ($5 and $7), delight the imagination of children and help them to gain poise through good muscle control. Pails, boards, and sawhorses are also good toys.

■ The home handyman should have no trouble making this sturdy blackboard which won't chip or crack if dropped or knocked over. Cut a sheet of Masonite to size and paint it a flat black. Alphabet adds "store" look children like. Chalk ledge at bottom is made of wood.

Make-it-yourself Play Equipment

(Other equipment on page 234)

■ Toy chest provides an attractive durable home for play gear. Make it from the embossed hardboard sold as Leatherwood. Wheels at one end and handles at other end make it easy to move chest when full.

■ Here's a non-tipping play chair and table made from an old card table. New top is Presdwood. Child's saddle seat is a standard item in play stores. When child is older, a panel of Presdwood can be cut to cover present center hole.

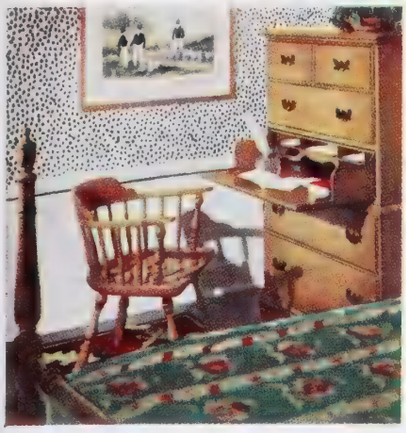
night before. All honor to him!

But, of course, for the most part the uninhibited record buyer does know precisely what he wants, and insists on getting what he wants. I am glad to be able to report that within the last three or four years there has been a very substantial increase in this type of customer. Not only are there more such people visiting our stores, but they are asking for an ever wider repertoire. Where before they traveled the broad highway of music—confining their "sight-seeing" to the great classic symphonies and the concertos, to selections from the standard opera, to the famous tone poems—now they are strolling into the bypaths of the musical forest. And this is almost as true of the lover of popular music as of the classical record fan. He, too, is interested in the unusual.

IN OUR stores, more than half of the business is done in classical music. (This condition is peculiar to our stores; the total record business is divided about two-thirds popular and one-third classical.)

Among classical music, the favorite type of music always has been and still is orchestral music: symphony, concerto, etc. But since the advent of long-playing records I have noted a pronounced increase in the demand for complete operas. There are two reasons for this increase: First, long play has made complete opera recordings cheaper (around 40 per cent cheaper). Second, on the old-style 78 RPM records a complete opera recording was a big bulky affair, often two fat albums requiring storage room. Now a full-length opera can be recorded on two or three slim LPs.



The record companies are busy catering to the new operatic demand. Right now, for example, our customers have a choice of not one but three complete recordings of Carmen, all new. From Europe flow new recordings of operas, including those operas which are seldom heard outside of their country of origin, works which perhaps have never been performed in this country. In addition to Verdi's Rigoletto and Traviata, you can get a complete recording of Ernani, Un Ballo in Maschera or even Nabucco, Verdi's first great success. Today the opera lover can hear a more varied repertoire on records than he could if he undertook an expensive pilgrimage to the world's leading opera houses.

This is a nostalgic age. We long for the roseate past. Not only the older people, but even our teenagers are curious about the turbulent Twenties and feel sentimental about the turn of the century. Lovers of popular music want to hear Glenn Miller and early Benny Goodman. Opera lovers wish to rehear the great voices of the past. They can do so now, in a series called "A Treasury of Immortal Performances." Once again Caruso, Chaliapin, Ponselle, Titta Ruffo, Geraldine Farrar, Friedrich Schorr, Marcel Journet, Lotte Lehmann—artists long dead or artists still alive who have stopped singing only yesterday — are delighting thousands of music lovers.

The movie, "The Great Caruso," has attracted many new people to operatic music. It is a sign of the times that Mario Lanza's "La Donna è Mobile" and "Vesti la Giubba" are appearing on the juke boxes, along with Patti Page and Les Paul. I am glad. I believe that the presentation of music and opera in the movies or on television can create more real interest—uninhibited, unself-conscious, unaffected—than all the music appreciation courses put together. Iturbi did the very same thing with Chopin's music some years ago when he played the Polonaise in A Flat in a movie. I remember people came in and asked for Iturbi's Polonaise, not Chopin's. But the end result was that people came to know more about Chopin.

THE uninhibited customer not only expects to find what he wants, but he expects to listen before he buys, and very often he expects to discuss the relative merit of one recording as against another with our sales clerks. As to listening—I approve of it. I think people ought to sample what they buy. We encourage our customers to use our record booths and to play, if not all through the recordings, at least a portion of it. The uninhibited music lover likes to spend plenty of time in the booth. There are some of them who love to conduct. Yes, they sit in the booth and they conduct the unseen orchestra, thus realizing an ambition which must be second only to that of driving a locomotive. Singers sing along with the records. Then we have the boy and the girl in love, who sit and hold hands. Sometimes the girl takes her shoes off. By and large, people are considerate and don't rp the booths when others are ting.

)ur record clerks must be able discuss records with the cog- centi. A record clerk is more ibrarian than a bookseller. By ıparison, a bookseller has fewer ls for the unusual. For all ctical purposes, there need be one edition of a book. Not so music. Whether it's "Open the or, Richard" or Mozart's Jupiter ıphony, there are many versions ıe compared with each other, to ıotly praised or condemned. We our clerks, however, not to be ics. That is the customer's pre- ıtive. Who among us would be sh enough to say positively that s X's version of "Too Young" ıetter than Miss Y's? For that ter, who knows the reason why ne clicks? I have asked experts it was that during the same od "Good Night, Irene," "If," Vie en Rose," "Wang Wang es," "September Song," "Be My e," "Sweet Violets," and "Be- se" were all popular. No honest can answer.

S. mine is a fascinating busi- ss because my customers often v curious likes and dislikes. A years before the war, "La ne Piaf" ("môme" being a ı of endearment akin to "gut- nipe") enchanted her listeners he small night clubs of Mont- tre by her recitals of grief, zy, and passion. The war ed, black markets almost dis- ared, but Piaf remained. The rations of Heloise and Abel- of Romeo and Juliet, etc. are nothing compared to Piaf's and girls' sorrows as ex- sed in slang comprehensible ut a few Parisians. Yet these ds are loved by Americans certainly do not understand language.

t me now say a few words t the inhibited music lover. I lly can tell the inhibited music as soon as he or she enters hop. And he or she is particu- dear to my heart. Nothing ises me more than to serve the ibited music lover and eventual- rn him into an uninhibited one o a true music lover.

seems to me that there are two s of inhibited record buyers: who are a little ashamed to for a record because it's low- music—and those who are on erge of liking good music but still a little suspicious of it.

The first often ask for their selection with an apologetic smile. I wish I could say to them, "Don't apologize for your taste. Have the courage of your convictions. There is only one thing that's important —your own enjoyment. Buy what you like."

As to the second kind—sometimes they are afraid to ask for what they want because they cannot properly pronounce Tchaikovsky or Khatchaturian or "Kindertotenlieder." I wish all foreign titles could be translated into English. It would help the cause of music. But since tradition won't have it so, please, please don't be afraid to mispronounce. A Frenchman would also mispronounce were he to ask for "An American in Paris" or the "Grand Canyon Suite." What's the difference? Even some of our own sales people mispronounce the titles.

EVERYBODY, inhibited or uninhibited, asks with full confidence for the new show albums, the musical comedies recorded with the original casts. These show albums also have done their bit in attracting new people to the enjoyment of records. Oklahoma! started it, and this was followed by Carousel, Song of Norway, and Annie Get Your Gun. In the past two and a half years the big successes have been South Pacific, Kiss Me Kate, Guys and Dolls, Call Me Madam, and The King and I. Recently, also, full-length recordings of plays with their original casts have become available: Henry Miller's Death of a Salesman, Christopher Fry's The Lady's Not for Burning, T. S. Eliot's The Cocktail Party, etc. The interest in these recordings is somewhat limited, although it may increase.

Shakespeare sells well, particularly Laurence Olivier's Hamlet, an album which was made from the sound track of the movie. Parents buy this record for their children. Indeed, children's records are being bought in ever greater quantities. Within the past five years, these records have shown a marked rise in standards of taste and intelligence.

It is not always easy to satisfy all requests, to answer all demands. But, as I said, it is always a fascinating task. Longhair or shorthair, inhibited or uninhibited, vociferous or shy, the record buyer remains "My Hero" and daily I invite him to "Be My Love."

HOW TO MAKE A KITCHEN AISLE LOOK WIDER

w spaces can be a problem. y look so cramped that they you feel cramped, and that's ıy to be in a kitchen. But with a narrow aisle, there's ς you can use which makes ace seem much larger. trick lies in choosing a floor pattern that carries the eye beyond limiting partitions or cabinets. Here narrow contrasting stripes of linoleum are inset across the narrow aisle. Widely spaced, like railroad tracks, they appear to be going somewhere, give you a feeling of space where there was none before.

Practical guidance is likewise given for the design of a shrub border. The elements distinguished in it are mass plants for bulk and stability, interest plants for flowers and foliage, accent plants for contrast, and filler plants for quick effect while the important shrubs are gaining their growth.

Specimen plants and trees, and how to select and place them, are among other subjects on which wise advice is offered. There are lists of trees and shrubs, including vines, for different regions of the country, and for different types of soil, also of woody and herbaceous plants for special purposes, such as concealment or fragrance.

These lists are presumably based on the wide experience of the two authors, who have been landscaping properties from their Long Island headquarters for more than 25 years. It therefore seems strange to include among hardy perennials for partial shade the tender evergreen subshrub, Lithodora diffusa (also known as Lithospermum diffusum, as it appears on page 106). If they have found this choice little plant of sky-blue flowers to be hardy, even on Long Island, it deserves a special note.

The authors seem a bit co about sweetfern, but perha more so than the botanists, f call it on one page Comptoni grina, on the next. Compto plenifolia, and on page 281, tonia peregrina asplenifolia. ing that it is easy to collec overlook the fact that it is the native plants which st resents man's efforts to tra it.

For lists that have, on the been so painstakingly pre two and a half per cent is to a proportion of carelessly plant names.

Of perhaps greatest helpf after the principles and pu of the planning have been ab from the early part of the is the list of 265 perennial their blooming dates tabula weeks from April through S ber.

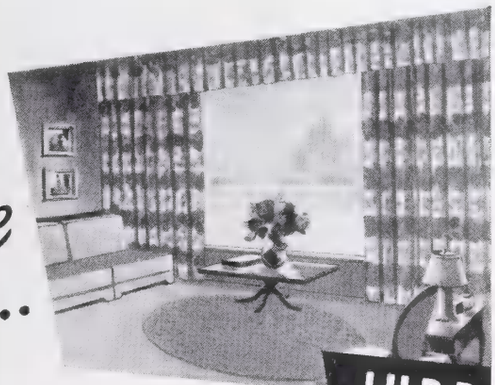
Carl Molitor is a breezy fellow—l an earnest one. He claims to ve spent more time adapting hy-ponics, or water culture, to ne garden use than "anyone else ve, or dead." As a result, he ieves that anyone, anywhere, have a garden of some sort, ether it be a peanut-can filled h chives at the back of the hen stove, a lawn on a roof top, nk full of mint in a conspicuous ce in a bar room, or flowers l vegetables growing together in omemade box.

To some of us it still seems sim-r to cultivate plants in soil (and ay we can buy soil at the dime e), but others find sawdust l chemicals an easier—or more iguing—medium. Most of the litor formula can be bought at drugstore; all of it is easily ained. Largely by the question-answer method, the author s case histories of plants of ny different types that have n raised with great success in mical solutions. Scientific ex-iment and government and com-cial practice all prove that it be done.

This is the third edition of Moli-s book. "I still call it 'magic dening,'" he says, "because it still seems like magic to me."

He writes also: "I do not want to argue with scientists. . ." But scientists and potential landowners alike will dispute his statement: "Soil is just a lot of inert, dime-an-acre substance with a small amount of active chemical elements mixed up in it."

"The soil teems with microscopic life," reads a statement in Soils and Men, the 1938 Yearbook of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and this statement introduces ten pages of discussion of these living organisms, which may vary "from a few per acre to billions per ounce." No soil worthy of the name can be called inert.



2,500 Rock Garden Plants

The Propagation of Alpines by Lawrence D. Hills. Pellegrini & Cudahy, New York, 1951. 464 pp.

Covering a field which has received scant attention in the general books on rock gardening, Lawrence D. Hills gives detailed directions for the propagation of 2,500 species of alpine plants. All the methods described have been tested by growers in the British Isles. For convenience, he gives the formulas for eleven different

STARTS IN THE PLANNING

For a bathroom that excites admiration, architects and builders suggest style-matched plumbing fixtures. For extra beauty, we suggest Eljer, in lovely pastel colors, or immaculate white. You will get quality; the finish of Eljer Fixtures cannot fade, become dull or lifeless. Bathtubs have an extra-thick enamel coating, fused to a rugged, rigid, cast-iron base. Vitreous China Lavatories and Closet Combinations resist stains and are impervious to all ordinary acids, because they are real china. So, be sure . . . write Eljer Plumbing Fixtures into your plans.

Ask your plumbing contractor, builder or architect to help you select the exact combination of fixtures you want for bathroom, powder room, kitchen or laundry. For free booklet, write Eljer Co., Box 192, Ford City, Pennsylvania.

■ You can remove connecting pieces between posts of upper and lower bunks and convert them into standard-size twin beds. Chests at foot were not specifically designed as toy chests, but how well they perform as such!

To meet all the requirements of small-fry living, furniture needn't necessarily be labeled juvenile. You are very likely to find small-scale pieces that fill the bill to a T among lines designed and sold primarily for adults. Since they were designed for adults to begin with, there is no danger of their being outgrown. But you will have to free your mind of conventional ideas about how individual pieces should be used before you can fully appreciate their adaptability.

Study the furniture on this page and you will see how easily it makes the switch from grown-up to juvenile use and back again. The wood is husky oak. The finish is practical gray-beige that mates well with the strong primary colors which children much prefer to the tender pastels beloved by dreamy-eyed mamas. And it's a good deal hardier than ordinary paint.

One piece in the group is a bunk bed, which any camp director will tell you is the favorite type of sleeping accommodation of most anyone under twelve. If two children share a room, a pair of bunk beds has the practical advantage of leaving more floor space clear for play. But this one is no children's specialty. It converts readily into a pair of twin beds of standard adult proportions which may be used later in any bedroom.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY EMILIE DANIELSON NICHOLSON

■ When two beds are needed in a child's room, a pair of bunk beds saves floor space for play. Ladder and removable side rail for upper bunk are of the same gray-beige finished oak as the other pieces. Sligh furniture.

setting for many impromptu evenings of bridge or canasta.

How do you furnish a room like that? With as little furniture as possible. The fewer movable pieces you have, the freer the floor for trucks and trains and games, and the fewer things to be moved for an evening of square dancing. But there ought to be lots of storage for toys and hobby equipment and phonograph records. That's where this new kind of room has one up on the living room—you can keep everything you need right there on the spot.

But however much or little there is in the way of furniture, all the materials in the room should be as nearly indestructible as you can achieve. Floors, cabinet- and table-tops, wood finishes, window treatments should all be the kind that manage to look ship-shape even when you "haven't really cleaned for days." They should put up a stout front to falling baseball bats and carelessly steered trucks. They should be able to withstand spilled milk and all varieties of minor accidents.

The family room should be the one room in the house that is always ready to be enjoyed, and never confronts you as a burden to be taken care of.

The family room was added to the existing house without excavating because the owner did not wish to disturb the roots of a large tree that shades the adjoining terrace. Instead, the new room was cantilevered out from the house on concrete block piers. Following is a list of materials chosen by Mr. Sears for the addition:

fore embarking on this tale the new and infinite dessert-oring possibilities that Noirot tilled Concentrates have in store you, let me say a few words ut their basic nature. That ect, and the wide scope of their ors are, in fact, the basis heir worth. Each of the French-le concentrates is the pure, un-ted essence of the fruit, berry, t, or plant from which it's ained by maceration and/or dis-tion. Unlike flavoring extracts n which we are familiar, no hol is added to these distillates. ir undiluted form makes them emely powerful. Also, the ab-e of alcohol permits them to nto hot concoctions without loss lavor, and is a virtue, too, when are used in desserts that re-e freezing.

et's take a look at the numerous nbers of the Noirot family right e and now: Anisette, Chartreuse ite or green), Cherry-Brandy, icot, Cocoa, Moka, Peach, aschino, Mirabello (plum), nadine, Orange Blossom, Küm-, Orange Curaçao, Reverendine nedictine-type flavoring), wberry, Raspberry, Pineapple, me Mint (green or white) ion, Creme Vanilla, Orgeat nond), Black Currant, Black-y. (These represent only that ion of the clan that have nary interest.)

's fitting to explain here the on for the great range of their rs. Abroad, in addition to r wide culinary use, and their in the making of flavored, ple syrups for soft drinks, rot concentrates also play an ve home role in creating lials, apéritifs, and hard liq-. In that guise, they're added is" or in the syrup form to hol, brandy, gin, rum, etc., a very prevalent custom in France, especially because of the general availability of alcohol.

Culinary-wise, they lend themselves to virtually any dessert you can name. Whipped cream for toppings or icebox cakes, custards, gelatine concoctions, ice cream, sherbet, Bavarian cream, meringue, icings, cakes, cookies. They open up new vistas for gelatine dishes, give new-found scintillation to marshmallow toppings, fruit salad, stewed or baked fruit. I think you can carry on for yourself from here. Happy adventuring! An assortment of any three of the concentrates costs $2.50, from Charles & Co., 340 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

A new kind of service and a new kind of tea has come to the American tea-drinking world. To wit, a Japan-to-your-doorstep mail-order service that brings you tea processed and fired precisely like that sold in Japan for Japanese consumption. The elite tea you receive is made of the crop's first leaf-yield, a grade of Japanese tea almost unknown in this country except for blending purposes. The content of the package you receive is not processed until the importer's orders reach Japan, and you receive it within five to six weeks from that time.

The service offers you two types: Sencha, a green tea, fired in the traditional Japanese manner; and Hojicha, which has become the rage in fine Japanese hotels and restaurants since its introduction a little while ago. It's actually the same tea as Sencha except that after the traditional firing it's re-fired to create "toasted" tea, as it were—quite different in flavor from Sencha. But for that matter, both Sencha and Hojicha are quite different from the teas we know because of the manner in which tea created for Japanese consumption is processed and fired. Sencha's brew is light in color and body, subtle in flavor. It has what might be called a "leafy" taste. One of my samplers said it was reminiscent of the scent of new-mown hay; another, that it has a "seaweed" taste; a third described the savor as a "grassy flavor." Some found its flavor and bouquet intriguing and delightful; others, not to their liking. Perhaps, because it's so foreign to tea flavors to which we're accustomed. Then, too, all palates aren't pleased by the same flavors. And also, there are some food flavors that "grow on you." Many people who have sojourned in Japan say that's the case with Japanese tea; many come to like it more than other types.

To get on to the Hojicha. It's as intense as the Sencha is light. A dark brew, dominated by a smoky quality that reminded one sampler of the taste of darkly-toasted bread, another of the burnt-butter flavor found in the French cuisine, another of heated shredded-wheat biscuits. Iced, Hojicha takes on a winy flavor.

That's as far as I can go in painting a word picture of these tea flavors. You'll have to complete it first-hand and decide whether you find it pleasing to your palate.

The importer was associated with the tea industry in Japan for several years in Shizuoka, Japan's leading tea producing and trading center, and he obtains these two teas from one of its largest and most reputable organizations. You receive them in an attractive, humidor-like tin canister, especially devised to preserve their freshness. It's housed in a quaint latticed basket; primarily provided to assure the canister's safe transit, but very attractive and usable, too. You can have the tea sent directly to a friend; the importer sends him a card informing him of its subsequent arrival, and the sender's name. But remember that you have to count on a five- to six-week delivery time.

Sencha is supplied in a 16-ounce canister, Hojicha in a 13-ounce canister (because it has less bul than Sencha). Each costs $4.50 postpaid. (The U. S. Postal Depart ment is authorized to levy a 15-cen handling charge on the parcel delivery.) From Jones-Shokay, Bo 476, General Post Office, New Yor 1, N. Y.

One can see things without notic ing them. That likely was th case with Quetzal Guatemala Coffee. Before my all-too-brief vaca tion in its homeland, I was a unaware of its presence on stor shelves as one is of a passin stranger. Now, having savored it rich flavor, it caught my eye o sight—like encountering a goo friend with whom you've somehov lost contact. It would be futile t try to describe the flavor of this or any other coffee for that matter The taste variations that result from the type of planting, th nature of the soil, climatic influ ences, create intangible difference that really defy description. Th Quetzal brand is a "straight" coffe —not a blend. It has a pungent rich flavor and aroma and yields a delectable brew that's full-bodied yet ever so mellow. The tinne vacuum pack you receive is no imported as such. Its content i imported in "green" form, as they say in the coffee trade. The bean are processed, roasted and ground here, and the flavorsome end-re sult given the benefit of vacuun packing. This is the usual pro cedure with commercial coffee im ports such as this one.

The name, Baker Boy Vienness Confection Roll, leaves one some what in the dark as to just what t expect. But having been raised on Viennese cuisine of a very high order, the fact that the concoction had a Viennese derivation, wa enough to make me send post haste for a roll when I became aware of its existence. Mighty glad I did for it's a delectable morsel. Calling it a rich glorified coffee cake, swee enough to serve as a dessert cake doesn't do it justice, although factually accurate. It's made o layer upon layer of butter-rich Viennese "kuchen," rolled as thin as cooky dough. Sandwiched be tween them is a heavenly filling concocted of sugar, butter, Saigon cinnamon, and toasted walnut bits in great profusion. The many layers are rolled into loaf form that can be sliced as thinly as you like with out falling apart. That aspect and avanese Saté Spice is another in the box. A unique blend mustard, chillies, and spices, ecially conceived as a season- agent for Trader Vic's famous Saté (meat on a stick), the recipe for which is supplied you on the label of the jar, in addition to a folder containing recipes for satés made of sea foods.

The final member of the box has real fire in it—Chinese Style Hot Mustard. You can sprinkle it on meats in its dry form as you would any herb or spice, or mix it with water, beer, wine, or soya sauce to create a wet mustard that's a delicious shrimp dunk. Spread very lightly on meats before cooking, the mustard gives them a delightful verve.

Andersen's delicious green split-pea soup first saw the light of day in Andersen's Valley Inn in Buellton, California, about 25 years ago. Its first venture into the outside world was in frozen form about five years ago. As of now, it has emerged in canned form, produced by a new canning method of such outstanding merit that it received the award bestowed biannually by the Institute of Food Technologists for the outstanding contribution to food engineering and technology.

You'll understand why it was singled out thus, when you taste it for yourself. It hasn't a vestige of canned flavor. I wouldn't believe it wasn't homemade if I hadn't cut the tin open myself. The soup's complete absence of meat or meat stock makes its rich-flavored savor all the more remarkable. Only the peas, carrots, onion, celery, and their stock go into the puréed soup. The spicing is ever so subtle. Just enough to give the blend sparkle. I didn't miss the absence of the usual ham bone or whatever. Matter of fact, in this meatless form, the peas take on a kind of "fresh" taste, if it's permissible to use that word to describe a dried vegetable. The Andersen people suggest the purée be used without adding water. I found it a wee bit thick for my liking, but the addition of a little milk took care of the situation. A mighty worthy candidate for any pantry shelf. Six 15-oz. cans cost $2.00. From Andersen's Foods, 130 Los Aguajes Ave., Santa Barbara, Calif.

such a luxury as homemade bread), and especially when the spread slices are parked for a moment or two under the broiler. No reason at all though, to confine it to dark bread. What's wrong with taking it into the realm of "garlicked" French bread? Corn and cottonseed oil, egg yolk, garlic, and vinegar provide the make-up of Old Mill Farm's zesty Garlic Butter, and the garlic shouts at you the moment you open the jar. Garlicked bread is one place where you don't want garlic to be a sissy. The mixture is about the consistency of a thick salad-greens dressing, and it can be used in that fashion, too; "straight," if you like dressing to have great umph, or mixed with French dressing, if you like it a little tamer.

Old Mill Farm also has a garlic dressing concocted especially for use in tossed salads. The list of its ingredients seems the same as those in the garlic butter, except for the absence of the egg; yet the finished product is differen The garlic is still the dominan member, however. For a main dish luncheon salad, mix cut asparagus, sliced hard cooked egg, and finely diced celery and stir all into a lemon jelly. Pour into mold and chill.

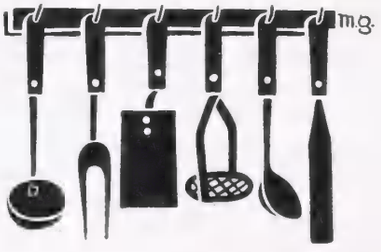
There are many ways of serving canned asparagus. Try serving cut asparagus in cheese sauce over hot biscuits.

Or cut asparagus in pieces (or use cut spears) and combine with diced chicken; heat in mushroom sauce and serve over toast or fine noodles.

Or arrange asparagus spears in bottom of greased loaf pan, add a small amount of liquid, cover with biscuit dough; bake in hot oven until biscuits are done; turn out with vegetable on top; serve with white sauce to which finely chopped or sieved pimiento has been added.



Or roll several stalks of asparagus in thin slices of boiled ham heat and serve with cheese sauce

If you have been condescendin about canned peas, have a fling a some of these ideas. Try givin canned peas the sweet and sou treatment.

the sauce. The amount of vinegar depends on your taste; ditto sugar. Vary both until you get what you like. Add the peas. Season with salt and pepper and cook till hot. The flavor of this dish depends on the vinegar. Do not use any but Spice Islands. Any of their herb vinegars is good for this.

For a vegetable shortcake using peas, make a white sauce substituting part of liquid from canned peas for milk; add peas, chopped pimiento and onion juice; serve on baking powder biscuits.

Or braise celery in liquid from canned peas; add peas and heat thoroughly.

Or add canned peas to scrambled eggs and serve plain or with tomato or Creole sauce. Good for main luncheon dish.

Or cream peas and sprinkle with curry powder; serve with chicken or lamb dishes.

Try combining peas, sliced hard-cooked eggs and sliced cooked potatoes in casserole; pour medium white sauce over all and sprinkle with buttered crumbs; bake in moderate oven to heat through.

For luncheon variety, peas may be heated in leftover meat gravy with bits of meat and served on toast or in potato nests.

Frozen vegetables are slightly cooked

If you live in a cold climate, frozen vegetables will be fresher than the fresh market vegetables you can find in stores in winter. That is, they will be closer in time to the field. (For freezing only stops time still.) Using them is, therefore, a "different kettle of fish" from using canned ones. Success with them is more technique in handling than in recipe formulation.

Properly frozen green vegetables come very close to having the flavor of their fresh counterparts. With a few exceptions, such as tomatoes and some salad plants, almost all vegetables can be satisfactorily frozen. Freezing changes the texture of vegetables, while the color and flavor remain approximately the same as when fresh. In cooking frozen vegetables always remember that they are partly cooked when they reach your kitchen so they require a shorter cooking time than fresh vegetables do. Also, they are like fresh vegetables in that their special qualities can be spoiled by overcooking. (Very likely the people who are against frozen vegetables are cooking them too long.) However, if you still object to the somewhat greater softness of frozen vegetables, it stands to reason that you should attempt to cook them in some form in which texture is not important, such as in soups or soufflés.

In general, aside from shorter cooking time, the recipes for using frozen vegetables are the same as those for cooking fresh vegetables.

Much of what has been written about frozen foods has been to help those who wanted to do their own freezing. Now, frozen foods are on the market to such an extent that they are available to everyone whether one has a freezer or not. Therefore, everyone should know something about commercially frozen foods and how they are handled and prepared. One of the best books to give an over-all picture of freezing is The Freezing Preparation of Foods, by Donald K. Tressler and Clifford F. Evers. The Avi Publishing Company, New York, 1943. It should be in the hands of every woman who is interested in the use of frozen foods in cooking. The chapter of "The Cooking and Serving of Frozen Foods," was prepared by Faith Fenton, of the College of Home Economics at Cornell.

Professor Fenton stresses the fact that the final quality of frozen foods on the table depends as much on how the food is handled after it reaches you as it does on how it was treated before. Here are some of the things she says.

Don't let vegetables thaw slowly because this causes undesirable changes. It is best to cook frozen vegetables before they have begun to thaw. However, broccoli and asparagus should be thawed enough to be broken apart so that they will cook evenly. Frozen spinach should be cut into one- or two-inch squares before cooking.

Don't overcook frozen vegetables. Since they are already softened by blanching and freezing, this is easy to do. In general, frozen vegetables require from half to two-thirds the cooking time of fresh vegetables.

The color of green frozen vegetables has been stabilized so you don't have to take precautions to save the color as you do when you are cooking fresh vegetables.

Frozen vegetables can be cooked in the oven. Heat frozen squash in a covered casserole. Put frozen asparagus or frozen peas in a well-buttered covered casserole wi little extra butter and salt.

Defrost corn on the cob at r temperature for 15 minutes. dip it in salted melted butter bake uncovered 20 minutes at F. Corn on the cob can also b frosted and fried in deep fat it turns brown and crisp. Cut can also be successfully panf

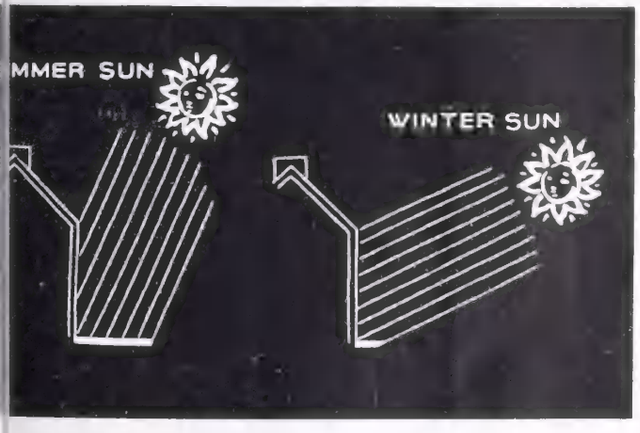
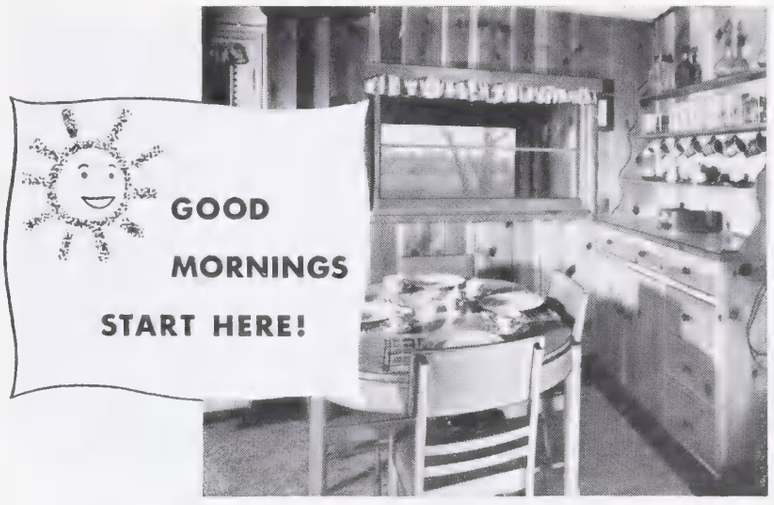
"Doesn't look like a practical house plan to me."



It isn't supposed to. It's just a sketch to bring out idea. Of course, it isn't practical to have 100 per cent all windows facing south. For one thing, you want oss ventilation. For another, you want "light balance" a room to cut down glare. I mean, you want daylight m two different sides of a room. And then, in planning easonably compact house you are bound to have north oms that simply have to have a north window. The th window idea is like most any other idea—you can't t it in practice 100 per cent, but you can perhaps have per cent of your window area facing south. And that a lot better than the 33 per cent you get when a house s its windows set evenly all around.



"But a house with all south windows—isn't it bound to be hot in summer?"

No. In summer the west wall is the one that gets so hot. s the one to be afraid of. The south wall stays fairly ol. That's just it. Let's get down to fundamentals for a oment. Why is there such a thing as summer, such hing as winter? The reason, when you come right down it, is the sun angle. In summer, the sun shines steeply wn, as in sketch on left below, and has great heating wer. That's why summer is warm. In winter the sun is t as hot as it was in summer, but it hits the ground at shallow angle, as in sketch on right below. It cannot at the ground much, and that's why winter is cold. But for a vertical wall, facing south, the same business works out the other way round. In summer, the sun hits the wall at a shallow angle (sketch on left at bottom of page 305) and, therefore, cannot heat it much. In winter the sun hits the wall more squarely (see the sketch on right at bottom of page 305) and has lots of heating power.

"Then you might say when the country in general has summer, a south wall has a sort of private winter of its own. And when the country has winter, a south wall has a private little summer."

Exactly. You might say the south wall of a house has a sort of automatic built-in climate that keeps it cool in summer, warm in winter. And that is why a house should always face south with all its important rooms. You know you can feel sunshine right through a solid brick wall?

"You mean the cosmic rays, or something, shine right through the brick?"

Nothing as fancy as that. Here is what I mean, and it is another thing you will observe this fall in your own house if you watch for it. Suppose it is a cold, cloudy day, and the house is a bit chilly. All of a sudden the sun comes out. Ten minutes later you will feel much warmer in the room. Why? Simply because the sun warms the outside surface of the wall. That immediately slows down the seepage of heat through the wall from the warm inside of the house to the cold outside. A few minutes later, the inside surface is a few degrees warmer. And those few degrees make all the difference to the people in that room. They stop that nasty chilling effect a cool wall has even in a well-heated room.

"You mean, then, all rooms of a house should face south?"

I mean, the most important rooms should face south. Don't waste south-facing space on halls, bathrooms, utility rooms, garage, etc. Perhaps the dining room, or dining alcove, which is used only a couple of hours per day, need not face south. But the main rooms should, at almost any cost, even if it means that the house "turns its back on the street," or that it faces the neighbors, or whatever.

The time to have this in mind is when you select your lot. Ask yourself, on this lot—a house facing south—how does it come out? Perhaps the lot practically compels you to face north or west (the two worst directions). Well, a clever architect can almost always figure out a way to let you have your south exposure after all. If you will leaf through your back issues of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, you will find many such solutions, and if you can't find any satisfactory solution, reject the lot and find another.

"No exceptions allowed? We want to have an east bedroom with the morning sun shining in. Is that bad?"

Another salient point about the Waters house is the far-sighted planning. Their thinking was not how to house six children in 1951. They thought ahead ten or fifteen years. The children's play yard, for example, will then be a swimming pool. The seating area around it will give way to planting beds. The barbecue room is another illustration of looking ahead. It's a "family room," a new kind of room that suits the combined needs of parents and children today better than the den, study, or rumpus room. Right now, the children seldom use it except when Daddy plays chef. The Waterses use it themselves for parties and barbecues. But they foresee the day when the teen-agers will take over, the waxed cement floor will become a ballroom, and they will retire to the living room.

So the whole house is something the family can grow into—and the nice part of it is that it will be as attractive ten years from now as it is today.

From concrete foundations to its cedar shingle roof, the Waters house is a fine example of how to design a home for a large family. In the list of materials that follows pay special note to what architects Ciampi and Milono specified for the children's areas:

Structure: Framing lumber and exposed ceiling in barbecue room is common Douglas Fir. Western Pine Association, Portland, Oregon.

Exterior wall surfaces: All redwood.

Interior wall surfaces: Vertical grain plywood in hall and play hall, vertical grain boards in barbecue room, surfaced redwood shiplap in gallery, living room and one wall of dining room, U. S. Plywood Corp., New York, N. Y. Bedroom walls are ⅜" plaster over Gypsum rock-lath, California Stucco Products, San Francisco. "Harmonitone" tile walls in showers and baths, Mosaic Tile Company, Zanesville, Ohio. Ceilings throughout house are 1" plaster on diamond expanded metal lath.

There are always exceptions. There are places where you want morning sun so badly, both summer and winter, that architects prefer to have a house face southeast or east, even at the cost of losing the most effective winter sunshine. For example, in the mountains, the mornings are often so cool, even in summer, that big east windows are most welcome. In other places, Florida, for instance, the summer nights are so damp that summer morning sun is needed to dry out the house. Then, for example, a summer cottage needs no winter sunshine, of course, but it needs summer morning sun in most parts of the country. It's a question of what you want. For most parts of the country, for most purposes, you want to face south.

> "But the development where we want to build has winding streets, and you are required to build the house parallel to the street. We won't be able to face our house exactly south."

That's okay, too. In fact, if you have hot summers, the very best direction to face is probably not straight south, but twisted around a little toward the east.* That way you get more sun in the mornings and less afternoon sun. And forenoon sun is always more welcome than afternoon sun because the mornings are cooler than the afternoons. But then again, in many cities in Eastern U. S. A., the winter mornings are murky and hazy with industrial smoke, and the sun does not really come through until about 11 A.M., and then shines in the afternoon. In such places, you might want to twist a house a little more toward the southwest. But those are fine points. The main point is . . .

* (Since air temperatures are highest around 2 to 3 P.M. even though solar radiation is at its peak at 12 M., the total environmental heat gain (radiation plus convection) occurs around 2 P.M. Thus the wall which faces slightly west of south will have the greatest heat gain.—ED.)

"I know, I know. Only a South Wall is a Good Wall. Only a South Window is a Good Window!"

That's it.

THERE ARE TWO KINDS OF MAGAZINES

One is the kind you're reading now. It carries entertainment, education, and projects the American way of life. The other is the kind our GIs are using in Korea. That one carries explosives, firearms, and the last-resort weapons against communism.

It's only the dictator's damper on free expression, as voiced in our paper magazines, that forces us to keep our powder dry in the steel ones. If the world had more access to the printed ammunition, it would have less need for the primed.

You can help fight communism with this magazine by sending it, together with others which depict the American way of life, to our potential friends abroad. It costs only twelve cents per pound to make the millions of copies wasted each week—that many humane weapons against tyranny.

BOOKS FOR GARDENERS

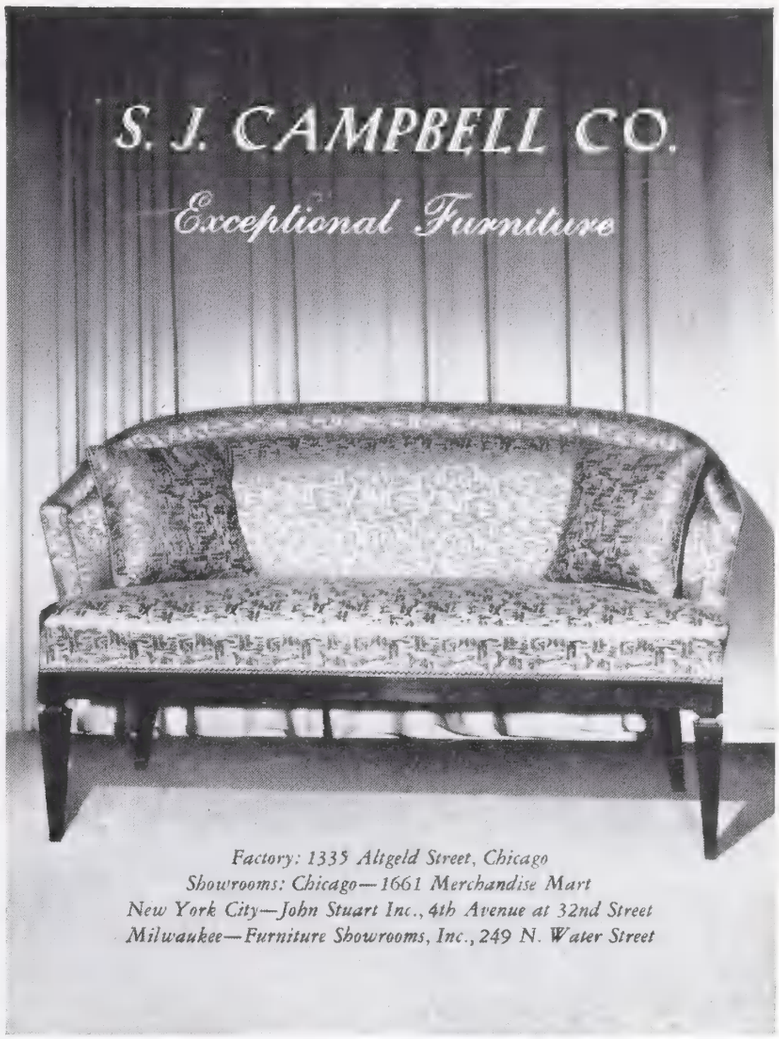
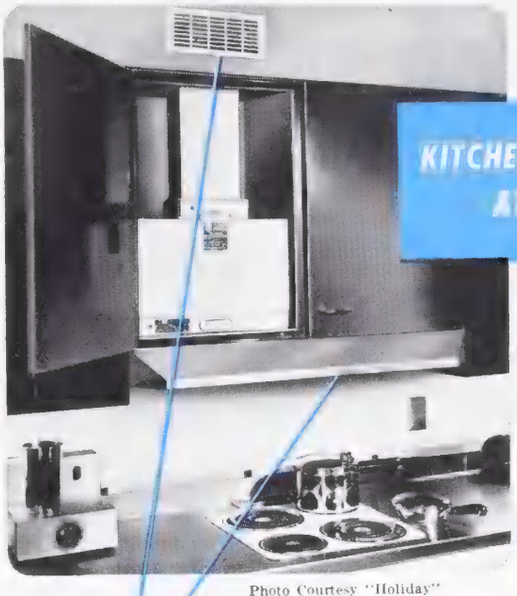
seed and potting mixtures, and refers to these by name or number when one of them is required.

One chapter is entitled "Alternative and Unorthodox Methods" as opposed to standard practices. Here he reports on the work of other gardeners in using sterilized chopped sphagnum, pumice, broken glass, and vermiculite.



He lets the reader know which plants are "super-easy" by initials S. E. For others he seems to give all necessary cautions and details, handling each species separately.

American gardeners will find a number of names that are new to them, such as Rhodohypoxis Baueri, of the Amaryllis family; Morisia monanthos of the Cruciferae; and Hypsela longiflora of the Campanula group, described as "a good carpeter for a shady sheltered spot not too dry." There are also the tongue-twisters Michauxia Tchihatcheffii of the Campanulaceae and, named for the same explorer (Petr Aleksandrovich Chikhachev), Tchihatschewia isatides, a Crucifer, which he suggests pronouncing chee-ha-chev-ia. "It is unlikely to suffer any name change," he remarks—a bit sadly, we suspect.



The appendix on botanical names, prepared largely by W. T. Stearn, Librarian with the Royal Horticultural Society, is worthy of being separately published as an informative pamphlet for the serious-minded gardener. With it is a useful glossary of specific names of many alpine plants.

While the book is at times almost telegraphic in the brevity of its directions, it is a practical, careful work in which clarity never is lacking. When he expands, the author writes with sympathetic feeling for the plants, the gardener, and the reader.

Warnings have often been issued against the use of gardening books from England on this side of the Atlantic, because of the difference in climate, which affects the behavior of plants, even in greenhouses. Many subjects treated here (such as Meconopsis) would undoubtedly fail with us, whereas they thrive in England. However, any person competent or confident enough to use this book has most likely been forewarned, and will follow or modify directions accordingly.

WOVEN PICKET FENCES

For a third of a century we have made woven picket fences whose natural beauty has added charm to homes and estates in every state in the United States. These fences not only beautify your home and enhance its value . . . they also afford privacy and protection.

We make two types of woven fences, CLEFT, with ¼" between each picket, or CLOSE, with pickets butted tight together. You can choose from imported French Chestnut or domestic cedar. Lasts for many years and its rustic attractiveness increases with time. Made in several heights. Easy to erect from instructions we furnish. Never need painting. Our illustrated booklet shows the many types of fences we make.

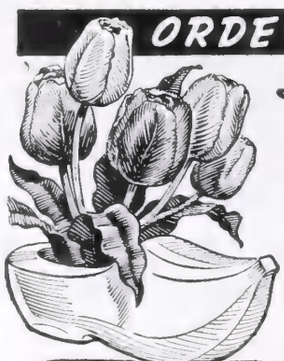
tage is two-fold. By now your muscles are accustomed to work and can manage the job of digging and turning the soil without exhausting you or endangering your health. The second reason: If you spade now, it will take less effort and time in the spring to put the soil in condition. Soil-wise, the earth will be improved. The action of the weather opens it up, seasons it to better consistency and texture. In spring, a quick shallow spading and an equally rapid leveling is all you need to prepare for planting. If you have planted winter rye or any other cover crop, turn the garden soil as late as you possibly can before snow or freezing sets in. Some garden experts advise incorporating a mulch at this time. Others merely broadcast the mulch and let it remain on top of the rough soil over winter. I've noticed no difference plant-wise from either method, only more work in spring to spade in the organic waste.



Watch out for frost. You don't want to take a chance on losing your vegetable crops. A light frost may not be dangerous to tender vegetables, but even the Weather Bureau cannot predict with accuracy how long a frost may last or how damaging it may be. Don't take chances. Listen to the radio broadcasts of frost warnings and harvest your tender vegetables—beans, tomatoes, etc. Try to harvest them a week or two before the first expected frost. But keep an ear glued to the weather broadcasts; frost can come earlier than the anticipated date. Once your tender vegetables are nipped by frost, you might as well discard them. They will neither look good nor keep well in storage. If the damage is not extensive, you c cut out the frost-blasted areas the fruits and use them immediate

Plants that must not be frost-bitt include beans, limas, cucumbe okra, New Zealand spinach, ton toes, some summer squashes, sw corn, eggplant, melons of all kin chard usually, and green peppe

Frost won't harm certain plan so you can leave these out all w ter. I leave cabbage and broc outdoors as long as possible. Af the first heavy frost I cover th with salt hay and let them alo until the ground freezes. If nec sary, I then cover them with ea and put more salt hay on t to protect them from incleme weather. Cabbage, for instan when stored in the cellar, gives an odor that can permeate yo house and is one of the most o noxious smells you will ever e counter. Perhaps one of the n chlorophyl odor-neutralizers wou keep the air fresh.

Parsnips and salsify are also l in the ground all winter. Turni too, and always the younger leel Even spinach and kale are mu hardier than you'd suspect. T rows are lightly covered with s hay, more for identifying the ro than for protection. The low te peratures prevalent during wint convert a part of the starch in the vegetables to sugar. As a resu when they are pulled out of t ground and cooked, they have sweeter taste. Potatoes, you kno when stored at low temperatur become so sweet you can't eat the

It should be well-rotted cow manure —if you can afford it and obtain it. There is no better way of insuring fat, succulent spears of asparagus the following spring.

A new mulch is catching the fancy of gardeners in the Central and Western states—corncobs, finely ground. This mulch has the advantage of being light and easily handled. It has a whitish-yellow color as you take it out of the bag, but air and moisture quickly reduce it to a neutral brownish-gray that blends nicely with your soil and your plants. Plant food is notably lacking, although the ground cobs do contain some sugar which leaches into the soil and stimulates bacterial action. As a conditioner, the ground corncobs are incorporated into the soil rather rapidly and improve the soil texture and moisture-holding capacity. One midwestern horticulturist insisted that the mulch of ground cobs reduced his watering by half during the summer months. I'm going to try this mulch as a winter protection for the strawberries. It is as light or lighter than peat and doesn't get as soggy by spring. Also, its insulating characteristics should be uniquely suitable to the berries.

Plant blueberries now and enjoy a real dessert or breakfast delicacy next year. During the past 25 years blueberries have advanced from a swamp fruit to a table luxury that is difficult to surpass. There is no trick to growing them if you can provide a reasonably cool summer and only a modicum of winter freezing or cold weather. I have grown them in, of all places, the far Southwest; maintaining them in Dutch beds beneath the cool shelter of large oak trees. Naturally in warm areas the life of the shrubs is limited to seven or ten years, but

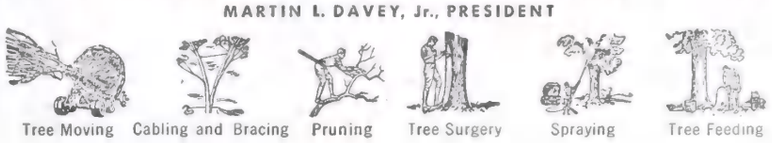
A tree is more than just branches and leaves. It is a haven of peacefulness in a hurried world . . . an old, true friend standing silently by to gladden your eye and help you recall the pleasures of days gone by. In return, it asks only a little thoughtful care.



And with cold days and strong winds ahead, now is the time to have the Davey Man give your trees an important pre-winter inspection. Fall is the best time for pruning dead wood, cleaning out underbrush, moving trees, and cabling and bracing weak V-shaped forks against inevitable winter storm damage.

Such care can be safely left to the skilled hands of the Davey Man, whose craftsmanship comes from years of thorough training . . . in classroom and laboratory, and out on the job. With him are the most modern scientific tools, and behind him lie the traditions of three generations of Davey men . . . men who have earned the respect of the communities they've served for many years. Call for the Davey Man today!

by replacing two or three shrubs each year with two-year-old nursery stock, the fruit yield was kept high. The bottom twelve inches of the Dutch beds contained three-inch alternate layers of manure and soil. The top twelve inches had a blend of equal parts of sandy loam and peat. Oak leafmold, three to four inches deep, was used as a mulch, and an acid-base plant food was used to keep the soil slightly acid. About the only pests are birds, and they are thwarted by covering the shrubs with cheesecloth after the berries appear.

Tomato fruits keep longer, I am told, if the fruit is picked and stored loosely on shelves (never piled). As the green fruits begin to show color, carry them to a sunny window to ripen. Left on their vines the tomatoes ripen much more quickly. We use the smaller green fruits which may not reasonably be expected to ripen to make mock mincemeat. In its way, mock mincemeat is as good and sometimes better than the original delicacy put up for Thanksgiving pies.

Cool your vegetables and fruits after you harvest them and before you store them. They will last longer if their normal temperature (field heat) is considerably and gradually reduced before storing them at the acceptable storage temperatures. Place them in the shade or in the back of your garage or shed. Tender vegetables and root crops can be transferred to storage after three or four hours: pears and apples after 24 hours or, if it is more convenient, overnight.

You can still plant many vegetables in the temperate South such as lettuce, spinach, kale, and nips. In the far South start t same vegetables along with proper varities of broccoli, bru sprouts, cauliflower, carrots, tard, and cabbage. There are vegetables which may be pla now—and later—in these reg but these constitute what migh called the "safe" species. For others you would do well to c with your local nurseryman, as your nearest seed store, or writ the near-by Agricultural Ex ment Station. Take full advan of your special growing seas and your tables will never lack dietary fun and variety.

Peach trees in the south shoul treated, almost as a matter course, with an emulsion of p dichlorobenzene or a similar p uct. Follow the directions on container and soak the gr around the trunks. Borers wi over in the ground at the bas peach trees and at this time of year when they are making t burrows, they are most vulner Protect fruit trees in the n particularly the younger ones the dwarf varieties, by wrap their trunks with soft cloth circling the trunks with hard cloth a few inches away from bark. Winter-hungry rabbits mice will gnaw the bark as natural food sources are depl They can girdle a trunk in evening, killing the tree or ca you considerable trouble in bri grafting the wound. Last year bits came in over snowdrifts girdled two of our apple trees t feet above the ground.

The Styles for the next 10 years

Look no more, my Lady

Here is a well-mannered car that says the nicest things about those who own it. That they have an eye for style and smartness—for fine tailoring of fine fabrics. That they love to command exultant and mighty power that's obedient to their mood and whim. That they recognize the evidence of fine engineering. Fact is—you'll search far to match the exclusive features of a ROADMASTER. No other car has its Fireball Engine, or coil springs on all four wheels, with a torque-tube keel to level its ride with magnificent smoothness. No other car of its length can turn in space so small. And no other car but a Buick has Dynaflow Drive. This is, indeed, a car you can own with pride and drive with distinction. BUICK Division of GENERAL MOTORS

The magazine dedicated to the business of better living

● On our cover: The living-room fireplace in the new home of James M. Fitch, House Beautiful's Architectural Editor, and Mrs. Fitch, at Stony Point, New York. To be able to enjoy the fine southeast view and an open fire at the same time, Mr. Fitch placed his fireplace in a glass wall. This glass has two sets of continuous, floor-to-ceiling curtains—casement cloth (for glare) and heavy, lined osnaburg, stenciled in gold (for cold winter nights). The house is described on pages 210 to 220. Photograph by Ezra Stoller.

by LIGHTOLIER, of course!

Just as the right hat adds the final fillip to milady's costume...so the right lamps lend the magic touch to your entire room. This season Lightolier offers exciting components for your decorative scheme—a striking "bird in flight" alabaster by new Italian master, Tempestini...a sleek, eye-catching Italian Modern with a tiltable "coolie-hat" shade...a flexible, functional standing lamp. See these and many others at your furniture, department or electrical store; or through your architect, decorator or electrical dealer at Lightolier, 11 E. 36 Street, New York—1267 Merchandise Mart, Chicago—12th at Folsom, San Francisco.

Look for the distinctive waffled surface when you buy!

She turns her back to bring in hors D'ouveres and up comes the carpet again. It's a regular pre-dinner ritual. The whole family's proud of their Supreme—show it off every chance they get. Fremont Supreme's surface grips carpets firmly, yet provides a soft buoyant feel to walking. Next time you buy carpet underlay, ask to see the best—Fremont Supreme. Try it and you won't buy anything else.

Choose any design! There's true economy in a CEMESTO* HOUSE

Note the beautifully simple, unspoiled lines of this fine home. Cemesto Panels permit refreshing designs like this, while reducing building costs.

Photographs: © Ezra Stoller

Quality homes of individual character cost less to build with Cemesto Panels

Whatever design or size home you may be considering, chances are you can build it better, faster, and with greater economy—with Cemesto Insulating Structural Panels!

Do many jobs at one cost

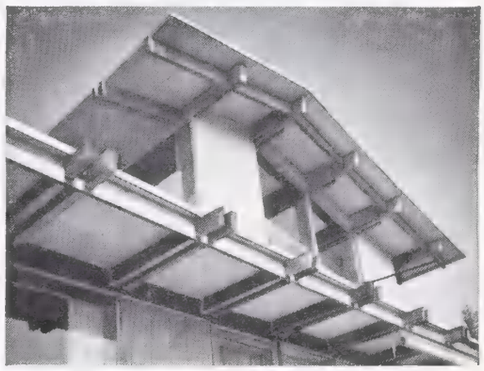
That's because each Cemesto Panel is a complete wall or roof deck unit replacing the combination of other materials required in ordinary construction. It combines great structural strength—high insulation value—both exterior and interior finish.

Thus, a single 4′ x 8′ Cemesto Panel gives you 32 sq. ft. of completely finished and insulated wall or roof deck. All in one easy operation . . . at remarkable savings in time, labor and money!

Permit important economies

Cemesto Panels resist fire, weather and wear—give you a beautiful, comfortable, enduring home. Light and easy to handle, they go up fast. Require minimum framing.

No additional insulation needed! Unlike ordinary materials, Cemesto Panels insulate as they build. Keep your home snug against chills and drafts, reduce fuel consumption in winter. And they shut out excessive heat, give you a cooler home in summer, too.



You need never paint or decorate, with Cemesto Panels. Their smooth, stone-gray surfaces have an unusual natural charm. Left exposed, they provide both exterior and interior finish. No maintenance required! Can be readily painted if desired.

Amazingly Versatile

There's almost no end to the interesting, distinctive architectural treatments possible with Cemesto Panels. You can achieve virtually any effect you choose . . . quickly, inexpensively.

So right now, find out how you can build a striking, individual, quality home for less money. Write for the full story of Cemesto Insulating Structural Panels! The Celotex Corporation, 120 S. LaSalle St., Chicago 3, Illinois.

*Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

See how the natural beauty of exposed Cemesto Panels lends interest to overhangs and second story walls. "Different" treatments are easy and inexpensive with Cemesto Panels.

Second-story interior detail shows the structural simplicity made possible by use of Cemesto Panels. Note the striking effect created by exposed Cemesto Panels in the wall and ceiling.

WHAT ARE CEMESTO PANELS?

As you can see in the diagram, Cemesto Panels are strong, rigid, permanent structural "sandwiches." Their core is genuine Celotex cane fibre insulation—protected effectively by the patented Ferox* Process against attack by termites and dry rot. Non-combustible cement-asbestos facings are bonded to both sides of this insulating core by a moistureproof, vapor-resistant adhesive.

Look at the G-E picture... and believe your own eyes

MILLIONS now can enjoy television — and don't know it! Distance from a station is not necessarily a handicap, nor hills or valleys or big buildings — if you have the right set. In side-by-side tests with other leading brands, the G-E picture proved outstanding in areas where good reception was thought to be almost impossible. So see the G-E picture and believe your own eyes. Look at this lovely console in genuine mahogany veneers with 17-inch rectangular black tube. Swirl-figured doors and concealed casters.

General Electric Co., Electronics Park, Syracuse, N. Y.

Prices range from $249.95 to $775 including Federal Excise Tax. Installation and picture tube protection plan extra. Prices subject to change without notice. Slightly higher West and South.

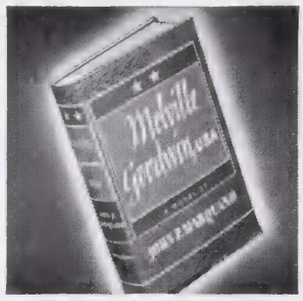
Books and Records make wonderful Christmas Gifts

Books for Every Taste:



THE CONFORMIST

By Alberto Moravia. Moravia's greatest story, one of the most rewarding novels to come out of Europe in our time . . . a profound tale of a man who embraced any evil to become the conformist. By the author of "The Woman of Rome" and "Conjugal Love". Farrar, Straus & Young. $3.50

LISE LILLYWHITE

By Margery Sharp. Nobody but the beloved creator of Cluny Brown could have produced—complete with French aunt, cousins and wildly assorted suitors — the thoroughly charming, utterly penniless, and triumphantly innocent Lise Lillywhite. A delightful new story! Little, Brown. $3.00

MELVILLE GOODWIN, USA

By John P. Marquand. The latest Marquand best-seller, and his greatest in the opinion of many readers. It tells the dramatic story of the public and private life of a two-star general who commanded an entire division in battle—yet couldn't command his own heart. Little, Brown. $3.75

MOONFLEET

By J. Meade Falkner. You've heard about this novel . . . a magnificent adventure tale that's been an English best-seller for 55 years and now published here for the first time. "Can be compared to Stevenson at his best", says Walter Edmonds. For "Treasure Island" lovers! Little, Brown. $3.00

MOSES

By Sholem Asch. The noble story the great Biblical leader . . . fus with the same vigor, insight a imagination that distinguished author's other great novels, "T Nazarene", "Mary" and "The Ap tle". One of the unique novels of time. Putnam. $3.75

MR. SMITH

By Louis Bromfield. Here's Bromfield at his best as story-teller and social satirist, brilliantly dissecting a man we all know well — the successful American businessman with his well-run home, his "perfect" marriage, and his growing sense of dissatisfaction and loss. Harpers. $3.00

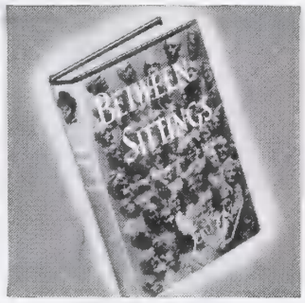
THE VIKING

By Edison Marshall. Here is adventure —by America's great master of romantic fiction! If you loved "Yankee Pasha" and "Gypsy Sixpence" you'll revel in this story of Ogier the Dane . . . lusty lover, fearless fighter and bold discoverer of new lands. Farrar, Straus & Young. $3.50

THE WANDERER

By Mika Waltari. Islam was at the height of its power; Christians and Mohammedans fought across Europe . . . and wherever intrigue and battle raged highest, there rose the figure of the Wanderer! The best novel yet by the author of "The Egyptian" and "The Adventurer". Putnam. $3.75

WITH ALL MY HEART



By Margaret Campbell Barnes

Charles II of England was a powerful man, an exciting intellect, a magnificent lover—but young Catherine, his bride, had to learn that he could not be faithful. And yet she came to know also that she had a husband who could manage an empire in one of the world's most turbulent periods and still give his whole heart to her alone. You will cherish this superb fictional telling of one of history's most tender love stories. Macrae Smith. $3.00

THE WORLD'S GREATEST CHRISTMAS STORIES

Edited by Eric Posselt. The most fitting Christmas gift of all . . . 39 best-loved Christmas stories, plus words and music of 23 Christmas carols in one DeLuxe edition. With 24 superb illustrations by renowned Fritz Kredel. Prentice-Hall. $5.00

BETWEEN SITTINGS

By Jo Davidson. The informal autobiography of one of the greatest living sculptors. This book bubbles with shrewd observations, delightful wit and behind-the-scenes anecdotes about virtually every history-maker of the last 50 years . . . F.D.R., Rockefeller, Ghandi, G.B.S., etc. Dial. $5.00

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT'S OWN STORY

Edited by Donald Day. From F.D.R.'s papers—both private and public—the editor of the "Autobiography of Will Rogers" has compiled a fascinating record of the man and president, told in F.D.R.'s own words. Almost an autobiography. Little, Brown. $4.00

JEFFERSON AND THE RIGHTS OF MAN

By Dumas Malone. The latest volume in the great work that "supersedes all previous biographies". Tells the story of Jefferson's eventful ministry to France and his differences with Hamilton as Sec. of State in Washington's cabinet. Little, Brown. $6.00

LORD CHESTERFIELD AND HIS WORLD

By Samuel Shellabarger. The wor famous author of "Captain Fr Castile", "Prince of Foxes", "T King's Cavalier" gives us a colorf exciting and witty biography of great Chesterfield and his glitter entourage. Little, Brown. $5.00

ROSS AND THE NEW YORKER

By Dale Kramer. Here's the fabulous story of the most unconventional magazine in America and its brilliant, eccentric editor . . . and a real treat for the 50¢ price. Illustrated with photographs. You'd better get two copies . . . one for yourself and one for your spouse! Doubleday. $5.00

A SAILOR'S ODYSSEY

By Admiral of the Fleet, Viscount Cunningham. England's leading naval officer of World War II has written a thrilling autobiography—the story of himself, his many naval adventures, and his experience as Eisenhower's deputy in the African landings. Maps and photos. Dutton. $7.50

GETTING YOUNGER

By Richard Williams

t summer I went, as usual, to e Berkshires, to the Tangle- d Festival given by the Boston phony Orchestra. As usual, the ning night was favored by the ther. (When it comes to ther, the Boston Symphony as to have a special arrange- t with God.) The crowd was so e, so punctual, and so enthusi- c that the evening seemed more a prayer meeting of a particu- pleasant and suave sect than a mere concert. Billy Sunday ht have met Marie Antoinette. kinds of people were there, ously outfitted, from ladies ssed in slacks which were too t, to Bostonians dressed in edos which were too loose.

ll this was what I expected. It nothing new. What struck me new and different was the pres- e of very many young people, e young people than I remem- seeing before. Was it the ro- ntic program — Schumann's rth and Berlioz's Fantastic phony—which had drawn them he concert? Was it the beauti- summer evening which brought n out? I don't know. But there were, most attractive young ple, a few in the higher-priced ts but most of them sitting, sprawling, lolling on the lawn outside of the Shed. Whole parties of six or eight had arrived together, but most had arrived in couples. Many brought blankets; some, a picnic basket; a few, camp chairs. One rather dashing young lady was enthroned on one of those modern and comfortable curved chairs. As you took your walk during intermission, threading your way in the semi-dark through the field, you had to be careful not to step on arms or legs. You were among a newly recruited but peaceful army bivouacking here for the sake of music. And a most attentive army it proved to be, serious and silent, though no doubt there was some smooching going on while the orchestra played.

I must say that the sight of this young audience filled me with happiness. I thought of them while the music played and I got quite sentimental about them. For they form good evidence to the continuity of music. New audiences with new enthusiasm are not only important in themselves as customers for the present music makers, but they are important also as the material from which future talent will spring.

You hear quite a lot of discus-

from solid mahogany

Only the patient natives who use their century-old skills could shape the enchantment of the Tropics into these superbly decorative table pieces. Each is an individual miracle of workmanship—carved from a solid block of mahogany; blond inside, richly dark outside. Use as centerpieces or for serving.

Automatic Retract DOUBLE CLOTHES LINE

Clothes line permanently stretched across the yard, basement, etc., can be most unsightly, sometimes dangerous and always dirty and grimy. Here is the modern answer to the problem of "put-up and take-down" or "always-up-and-in-the-way" lines! An automatic retract line with 40 feet (2 lengths of 20' each) of strong toughknitted rope which unrolls with easy finger-tip pull from a compact wall-mounted metal case—then rewinds with smooth spring-roller action when released. Always available when needed . . . but is out of sight and out of the way when not in use. Lines tighten at any desired length by a quick turn of plastic knob.

"THE FINEST EGGS I EVER ATE . . . and so easy to prepare!"

That is what you will be saying once you have tried the wonderful new FIL-MAR egg poacher. Greaseless poached eggs are perhaps your best source of energy-producing, non-fattening pure protein. The FIL-MAR will serve them up to you more easily, more deliciously then you ever thought possible. Eggs are gently but quickly steamed to the exact consistency you want. Simply fill to water level, place on fire, put one egg into each of the four self-ejecting cups; and in a few minutes you will have an experience waiting for you.

Quality Construction Throughout
The FIL-MAR is made of aluminum and heat resisting glass. It is a beautiful and durable addition to any kitchen.

Built-in rotating knife flips eggs out instantly—completely. Makes grease unnecessary.

Modern in Design Antique in Flavor

The charm of Provincial Blue lies in the shapes, which are similar to Colonial Classics created in the 1700's of tin, pewter, pottery, and wood. Note the cleverly simulated "rivets." Provincial Blue captures the Early American appreciation for blue—and its ability to create a pleasing, harmonious, mealtime atmosphere.

The U. S. Koylon Foam Mattress has awakened America to a new—a different—a more restful sleep, to restorative, healthful rest.

You rest more, you turn less. U. S. Koylon Foam gently yields to body pressure. It is engineered and controlled to an exact resiliency. You are gently cradled from head to toe. The buoyant support of U. S. Koylon is literally unnoticeable; it permits free blood circulation.

There is only one U. S. Koylon Foam. The companion Foundation is engineered to give you, to the very ounce, exact compression. Fifteen years of research developed this controlled rigidity. Together with the mattress, here is the greatest sleep luxury—U. S. Koylon. Look for the exclusive cloud ticking, at finest stores. Prices you can afford.

THERE IS ONLY ONE

U.S. Koylon® FOAM

You'll want furniture with U. S. Koylon Cushioning, too. It fluffs and ventilates itself, protects upholstery fabrics because of U. S. Koylon's resiliency.

Self-fluffing U. S. Koylon Pillows bring perfect cradling comfort to head and shoulders all night long. They adjust to every move you make. Cool, odorless, dust-free.

THE FOUR SEASONS by LING-FU YANG

Ling-Fu Yang, formerly of Mukden and Peiping and now instructor of Chinese art in California, combines an Oriental feeling for delicacy of line, with an Occidental approach to landscape values. In soft hues, she depicts Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter. Prints are matted and measure 7¼" by 14". They are carefully reproduced and convey the feeling of original water colors. It is impossible to describe their loveliness in words, or black and white reproductions. We think they are among the most decorative prints we have ever seen. They blend with any type of decor.

WASH FRAGILE THINGS SAFELY!

LYON'S Washing Bags

Designed to protect fragile or dainty articles while being washed in any type of washing machine. Also to enclose articles which are apt to tangle with the rest of the washing, such as aprons, children's dresses with ties, etc.

The mesh is small—does not catch on buttons, hooks, etc., as larger mesh would, yet it allows free passage of water through the bag. Closed with covered rust-proof snappers, allowing full capacity of bag to be used.

Set of Two Bags

Small bag, approx. 11"x13" for washing belts, doilies, handkerchiefs, gloves, lingerie, stockings, etc. Large bag, approx. 17"x20", for blouses, children's dresses, panel curtains, etc. Ideal for gifts and bridge prizes. Packed in cellophane. Mailed postpaid, both for $1.85

DRINK-O-METER

Now you can tell, with clinical accuracy, what your guests have had, and what they require in the way of liquid refreshment. The Drinkometer is a spool of chemically sensitized paper, sealed in a lucite case. Just tear off a strip, place it on the tip of the tongue, and the color it turns will tell an un-failing story. As indicated on the color chart, if the strip turns Green "You need a quart"; if Red "Get off the floor," etc. It's fun for the party, and hardly ever lies! Enough for 200 "tests." $1.50. Giftboxed and Postpaid. No C.O.D.'s.

Lift your basement into your living

Metal scaffolds, coated on Weirton—electrolytic zinc-coated steel that resists heat, moisture and rust—demonstrate the exceptional workability of this fabricated metal.

Right in your own house, there's an underground treasure, yours for the making—the completely useful basement.

And it's so easy, so logical to discover your basement—to decorate it . . . equip it . . . transform it into a most valuable part of the house.

All it takes is the right idea—and the right equipment. Modern, good-looking equipment. Durable and reasonably priced equipment. Steel equipment.

There are steel appliances to make your basement pleasant to work in—washers, ironers, driers, cabinets and lighting fixtures. There are steel furnishings and equipment to make your basement nice to look at, fun to play in—Venetian blinds, wall tile, tables and chairs, to name a few.

All these products are modestly priced because they are made of steel—America's great bargain metal.

Whatever you buy, make steel your standard—and save.

Automatic BRIDGE TABLE

that OPENS and LOCKS in ONE OPERATION!

An IDEAL XMAS GIFT!

• STURDY ENOUGH TO STAND ON!

Of course you've heard of it . . . it's the famous "WEED" Automatic Bridge Table. One twist of the lever . . . and Z-I-P . . . all four legs snap open and lock—giving you a firm, wobble-proof table. To close: another twist of the lever, and the legs spring back in place. Ingenious . . . but definitely! And, it's more than a bridge table—it's a handsome piece of furniture, comparable to your good dining room set. The top is covered with "Pantasote" plastic (it looks like fine leather) that sheds water and alcohol, resists burns and scratches, and cleans with a damp cloth. Comes in mahogany or blonde finish. Choose from Ivory or Red top (in the mahogany finish); Green (in the blonde finish).

Specify finish and color desired. Send check or money order. Sorry, no C.O.D.'s. Shipped promptly. MONEY BACK GUARANTEE.

Glorify Your Silver with Bromwell's

Quadruple *Silver Plate

ALL OF BROMWELL'S WORK IS GUARANTEED Back of the name Bromwell is the knowledge and experience of 79 years in restoring of fine silver. Replating, repairing, replacing missing parts; engraving erased. Send your silver—antique and modern for an estimate, or write for Booklet B-111—it tells you in a jiffy how to figure plating costs.

*"SILVER PLATE is applied by electroplating, the process of putting a silver coating on metal with an electric current. The term Quadruple plated indicates the various thicknesses of the plate." Encyclopedia.

THE FINEST in Quality, Craftsmanship and Value are essentials you should demand when you have your precious Silverware restored.

SINCE 1873 no Quality factor has been overlooked at Bromwell's. Only the finest Silver is used for our famous Quadruple plate and it is applied by our experienced Craftsmen, all of which makes Bromwell's value outstanding!

Only 1420 boxes this year!
Ted Henry's Fabulous VERMONT APPLES!

The Plumpest, Juiciest, Best-tasting Apples Direct from my Vermont Orchards

Out of the thousands upon thousands of apples we pick each year, about one in a hundred is good enough to pack in my Christmas Gift boxes. The rest are shipped to the wholesale market. Vermont apples are the finest you ever tasted—and I am offering only 1420 boxes of the finest of these on a first-come, first-served basis. You never saw such apples—you never tasted anything like them. So crunchy crisp they "pop" when you bite them. So tender and tangy sweet you'll never forget their taste. I pack 15 of these prize beauties in a handsome Gift Box—five each of the three favorite varieties: Delicious, Northern Spy, McIntosh. This year my price is only $3.25 a box—as long as the 1420 Gift Boxes last. Mail me the addresses of yourself and friends with check or money order and I'll ship the boxes postpaid, just before Christmas, perfect delivery guaranteed. (Free on request: Brochure of unique gifts from old Vermont). Address Ted Henry, "the Apple Man," Box 11-HB, Shoreham, Vermont.

NO MORE UNPLEASANT SCRUBBING!

Now you can leave your "most unpleasant" chore to Serf-o-Let—the modern, sanitary device that cleans toilet bowls automatically. Serf-o-Let stays on the job every day removing odors, stains and bacteria with each flushing. It removes the invisible film and eliminates unsightly "iron stains" that gather in all toilet bowls. You do nothing except attach it inside the flush tank (and so easily) and add only one refill package twice a year. Harmless, odorless and invisible, Serf-o-Let is the practical way to keep bowls fresh and clean without unnecessary scrubbing and scouring. Positively safe on septic tank systems. Only $3.95 (check or money order) for this work-saving Serf-o-Let. Extra 6 months refills only $.75 each. Guaranteed to save you work and keep your toilet bowls cleaner or your money returned.

EVERYBODY'S HAPPY!

. . . when Young Folks Have the Floor

Make a gay place of a gray place. There are years of pleasure for the whole family with a playroom in your basement. Start with a floor of durable plastic tile.

"Burgers" sizzle on the grill. Steaming coffee teases palates. A pop bottle fizzes open. And . . . while the band plays on . . . the kids wind up a swell evening with a snack. Right in your basement!

Yes, you can change that dreary old waste space "down cellar" into a gay playroom for the whole family to enjoy. Quickly. Easily. Reasonably.

One of the most important decisions you'll have to make is, "What to do about floors and walls?"

You'll be smart to choose Flexachrome* for your floors, and Mura-Tex* for your walls. Why?

Because they're decorator-designed in a wide range of sharp, clear colors . . . Companion colors that harmonize perfectly. And you can have special inserts set right into the tile . . . like the shuffle-board in the floor above.

Or, if you wish, we'll design one especially for you. These plastic-asbestos tiles are practical, too. Tough. Durable. And so easy to clean! A minimum of effort keeps your Tile-Tex floors and walls looking their best.

There's more than one place in your home for Tile-Tex. A foyer like the one at the right gives visitors just the right kind of first impression.

Get full particulars on these and other Tile-Tex products. Mail the coupon and ten cents for our new booklet.

CHARCOAL MEATS
without a charcoal fire

Several years ago a fellow we know got to wondering if it were possible to season a piece of meat to give it exactly that same delicious smoke flavor it gets when cooked over a charcoal fire. He started to experiment. Today he has it! CHARCOSALT is as simple to cook with as salt and pepper and you can prepare, right in your own kitchen, the most aromatic charcoal steaks and meats without investing one dime in fancy stoves and broilers. Treat your meat with CHARCOSALT in ten seconds time, and cook in any frying pan or oven broiler. It's amazing but it's true.

New Amazing Wonderful Gem
DIAMOTHYST Far more brilliant than DIAMONDS
$24 Per Carat

Harder than zircons, keep their brilliance forever.

Diamothyst is .7 on the Moh's scale of hardness, and diamonds are 1.0.

The greatest gem discovery in history, which is the result of experimentation of one of America's largest corporations, brings you Diamothyst, a gem with a refractory index higher than, and a dispersion factor greater than a diamond. Its refractory index is about 10% higher than diamonds. It may seem fantastic to you as it did to us, but now you can have a gem that looks like a diamond and is actually far more brilliant than a diamond. Yet you can have it at about 1/30 the cost of a genuine diamond. (Buy a Diamothyst instead of a diamond and save the difference.)

Only $24 a carat, tax included. The hundreds of dollars thus saved will go far toward buying a home. You need no longer invest large sums of money in a tiny stone, the value of which is determined largely by scarcity and control. YOU can enjoy the beauty and prestige and the envy of your friends with a stone that only an expert working under a good light can detect as not being a real diamond.

COMPARE: refractory index of diamothyst is between 2.62 and 2.90 as compared to diamond's 2.42. Dispersion of diamothyst ranges between 0.155 and 0.205 in comparison to the diamond's 0.025.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE WITH A 30-DAY TRIAL IN YOUR HOME.

YOU ARE THE SOLE JUDGE

In this advertisement, you are assured, that if you are dissatisfied for any reason whatsoever, you may return the Diamothyst for 100% CASH REFUND WITHOUT QUESTION!

You can order them in 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 — up to 10 carats at $24 a carat. Take the price of the rings shown above in the ½ carat size and add $24 for each additional carat you want. ORDER TODAY, DON'T DELAY!

A beautiful engagement ring made with a Diamothyst presented to any girl will inspire her devotion. You can buy many things with the hundreds of dollars thus saved. Each Diamothyst is perfectly cut, with full 58 facets per brilliant stone. Legally we cannot refer to the Diamothyst as a diamond, so we ask you to order in the 3 most popular diamond shapes —namely the round or BRILLIANT, the oblong or EMERALD and the oval or MARQUISE cuts.

You may order these gems for setting by your local, friendly, trustworthy jeweler, who will be glad to verify your purchase, or you can order them in the mountings shown above.

FREE There is no charge for mounting Diamothysts in Your Jewelry—they will be mounted absolutely FREE!

Found! A Place For Your Silver—And A New Idea

A truly beautiful piece of furniture, sensible, clever. What better place for your silver than the dining room wall?

Our graceful slant front holds over 150 pieces. It is completely lined with tarnish proof Pacific Silver Cloth. The drawers, for odd serving pieces, have roll flaps of the same. Slots hold up to 13 pieces. Separate grooves for knives and butters. Each piece is beautifully displayed. It closes tight and trim. Top shelf displays 12 spoons and bric-a-brac. Here is a wall piece worthy of the finest silverware.

Hand made in honey tone knotty pine or lovely mahogany finish—rubbed to a satin smooth sheen. Size 27" x 23½" high x 5¾" deep.

Natural Jargoon... Rivals Diamond in Brilliance and Fire
Not a Synthetic Stone
FREE CATALOG

Nature IS always right . . . and the Jargoon . . . a natural, mined gemstone proves it. 200,000,000 years in creation, the Jargoon is so white, so fiery . . . yes ▣ brilliant that even National Geographic called it the closest rival to the diamond. Mined from the gem bearing gravel of Ceylon, this glowing, mysteriously lustrous gem is cut to full 58 facet magnificence by our master craftsmen. It glows on your finger with the same splendor that made it a favorite of Sultans . . . caused it to be included in the British Crown Jewels.

Now own a full carat of this naturally beautiful gem set in 14K solid gold for as little as $11.95 plus tax. Our amazing free catalog gives full details as well as facts about Jargoons and synthetic gems. Get your catalog today!

your floors of WRIGHT RUBBER TILE!

IT'S NOT ENOUGH to simply select floor colors and patterns when you decorate. In order to get all the extra beauty your home deserves, you must also select the make of floor.

Why? There's a big difference in the appearance of apparently similar floor covering materials. A difference you can see very easily when you compare a sample of Wright Rubber Tile with any other material.

Notice the clearer colors, the smoother surface, the finer marbleization of Wright Rubber Tile. These differences mean that your floors will be far more beautiful when you use Wright Rubber Tile.

You can be sure this extra beauty is permanent, too. Many floors of Wright Rubber Tile, laid over 28 years ago, still look like new.

Don't tolerate drab floors! Demand Wright Rubber Tile and enjoy the most beautiful floors in your home for years to come.

SEE THE DIFFERENCE!

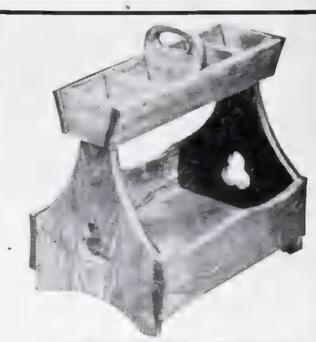
LITTLE KNIFE BOX. A darling miniature of a full-size antique knife box becomes an engaging holder for cigarettes on the coffee table. Or get one for your desk and keep paper clips on one side, loose stamps on the other. Handmade of pine in a mellow antique finish, it's 5" x 4" x 2¼" high, costs a small $1.95 ppd. Gray Gables, Box 212, Saugatuck, Mich.

HIDE OUT. No longer will you discover your best Sheraton chairs tipped up to make a "house" for a rainy-day prisoner. The Kiddie Tent is made of khaki-colored pre-shrunk muslin, simply constructed over a light aluminum frame—and with it he can play Indian to his heart's content, or be a draftee in his pup tent! 43" x 36" x 28" high. $8.95 ppd. The Eldac Co., 211 G. Street, San Rafael, California.



KEEP IT UNDER HIS HAT, and your sparkler won't lose its sparkle while you're polishing the silver, your watch won't get a bath while you're bathing the baby. A smiling chef has lots of room under his hat for all your valuables, measures 3¼" in diameter, 3" high. Made of ceramic, he's $1.95 ppd. Abbott's P. O. Box 686, Fort Wayne, Indiana.

NEVER A CREEL LIKE THIS!

Practically a complete fishing outfit in itself. (A) Five pockets for fly boxes, leaders, etc. (B) Detachable bottle for fly dressing. (C) Washable lining with (D) screen ventilators. (E) Adjustable shoulder strap with landing-net ring. (F) Top pops open like a woman's purse; snapped shut, creel hangs flat. Packed in multi-use pliofilm case. Perfect gift for the fisherman who "has everything". $5.00 postpaid sion about the lack of creative talent in our age. Where are, we ask, our great composers, comparable to those of the past? Where are the Chopins or Brahmses? Where, to come closer, are the new Stravinskys or Richard Strausses? Strauss is dead; Stravinsky is old. It is true that the present age is not blessed with creative talent. Perhaps it is not even distinguished in first-class executant talent. Can you name a young conductor that promises to become another Toscanini? Can you name a successor to Rosa Ponselle or Lotte Lehmann or Pablo Casals? But where there is enthusiasm there is hope. And where there is hope there is creation. If youth takes an interest in music, then the chances are good that youth will develop new composers and new musicians to keep the interest supplied, the enthusiasm satisfied.

MY SON is eighteen years old. He loves music. So do his friends. I listen to their talk whenever they permit me to do so. Those boys know what's good. They love what's good. And they have no inhibitions about certain music being too heavy. They plow into Hindemith with equal lightness of heart with which they plow into Schubert. They are not, of course, always right in their judgments. They get impatient quickly. No matter. I have respect for them and I am happy that they turn on the phonograph or turn up at Tanglewood.

It is my impression that an enormous development of musical taste and of love for music is going on under our very eyes, or rather under our very ears. It is my belief that the next ten or fifteen years will show so appreciable an increase in listening, in record buying, in attendance at concerts and —what is most important—in the playing of music that it will make the increase of the last generation look small. The children who grew to be teen-agers during the war and who experienced in some way or other war's unpleasantness, the youngsters who now face an equivocal future in which bright opportunity is mixed with so many black clouds that the horizon looks to be dirty gray—these youngsters turn to some form of inspiration which has nothing to do with and lies above "the realities of life." Music furnishes such inspiration.

The young people have even in-

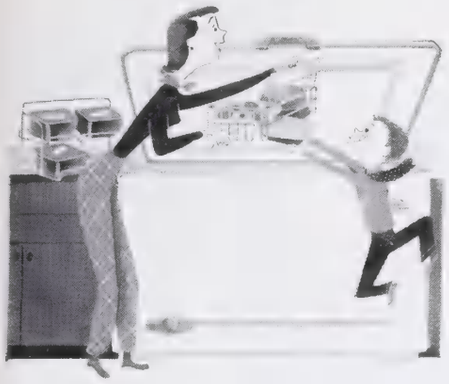
Take It Easy, Lady!

To free yourself from the slavery of housework, take advantage of new and efficient labor-saving equipment

By Charlotte Conway



If you read the new about kitchens, you know there's a trend to islands or peninsulas in planning the most efficient use of space. To fit this design idea, Odin has brought out a gas range with oven on the end and windows on both sides, also controls on both sides, so you can look at "what's cooking" and handle the controls without walking from one side to the other. The double-or nothing plan holds for storage compartments, too. Again, there's one on each side. There are four burners and good work space besides

DRAWINGS BY KELLY OECHSLI

Fitting food into a refrigerator can be as brain-busting as a Chinese puzzle, if you don't have adjustable shelves. The Frigidaire 11 cubic-foot model has three full-width shelves, two half-width, and a swing-down utility shelf. When you have a lot of tall bottles the utility shelf just swings down out of the way. Otherwise, it's handy for little things that have a way of getting lost. Freezing compartment has capacity of 29 lbs. of frozen food. Two hydrators will hold more than 23 quarts of vegetables and fruits. Full-length door

For our money it's the baskets that make the freezer, and make it easy for you to find the food you're looking for. The new Deepfreeze freezers have three apiece. One is of standard design. Another, with side latch, is a double decker for pies and cakes, and, mirabile dictu! you can take out lower deck foods without disturbing those above. The last is their Menu-Maker, a rack fitted with four gaily colored pint-size aluminum containers for main dish, vegetable, salad, and dessert, a whole meal for a hurry-up occasion.

Do you ever find yourself standing at the stove with a hot pan in your hand, and no place to put it down? Crosley has fixed all that. Now they are making their electric ranges with "divided" tops, two units on one side, two on the other, with handy work space between. This way you don't have to reach over a hot burner to get at the controls or food cooking on one of the back burners. The new range shown has two ovens, push-button switches for automatic control, two appliance outlets, deep-well cooker.

If you've ever had a cart-on-wheels that you could move from kitchen to dining room to living room to terrace, with those delicious buffet meals, you know what a great convenience it is. Now you can have your tea cart with electrically heated radiant-glass top. It's the Hotable Regent, made by Salton Mfg. Co. With this you can roll a whole meal to dining room or television set, and know food will stay hot without your running back and forth to the kitchen. Unheated lower shelf is fine for salads, desserts, or used dishes.

YOU BUY BEAUTY WHEN YOU BUY Birge

Too long have walls been regarded merely as backgrounds! It is easy today to use them as active participants in the home living scene. In fact, Birge wallpapers are used more than ever to help furnish a home. The new Birge plaids for instance, enter cheerily into this popular decorating trend.

Color leadership again distinguishes the Birge wallpapers for 1952, now to be seen at leading decorators and dealers. They not only interpret the authentic, most widely accepted tones but they forecast the colors of tomorrow, based on skillfully conducted research. They simplify and make easy the selection of room-to-room, color-related papers for the entire home . . . the finest wallpapers in all the 117 years of Birge wallpaper mastery. Yes, you live with Beauty when you live with Birge wallpaper!

GET HIM IN A CORNER. Don't get the mopes if you can't afford to "re-do" your living room. You can lift it out of the doldrums . . . make it look entirely different . . . make "him" look at you with new admiration—

IN YOUR "MR. AND MRS." ARRANGEMENT. Your home revolves around you two, doesn't it! Then why not arrange furniture and accessories for the companionable leisure of "Mr. and Mrs."?

ARE YOU "APPLES IN A BOWL" TRADITIONAL? Then you'll just naturally reach for an apple as you settle comfortably under the light of this magnificent lamp.

—OR RANCH HOUSE MODERN? Here you see the same furniture, but, obviously, a different family lives here. Amazing, isn't it, how clearly that entire change in personality is expressed with Haeger Ceramics.

NOW, LET YOURSELF GO! If your floor space is limited, this corner arrangement will make the room seem larger. In a spacious room try "two chairs and a table" away from the wall. Be certain, in either case, that your chairs are comfortable and your table a convenient height. Then you are ready to give your "Mr. and Mrs." arrangement individuality and personality through your selection of Haeger Ceramics.

At your favorite store featuring Haeger Ceramics you'll find just the lamp you want . . . engineered for good reading. You'll find it in the colors you want, in a brilliant gloss, a satin glaze or a rich new pewter effect. You'll find ashtrays, bowls, vases, figurines in countless designs, colors, glazes . . . and you'll always be proud of your selection, for Haeger is the great name in American Ceramics.

GETTING YOUNGER

vaded the world of opera, traditionally the realm of the older people who possess a silk hat or a diamond tiara. You don't see so very many young people at the Metropolitan. But in New York City a new organization has come into being whose accent is definitely on youth, both behind and in front of the footlights. This is the New York City Opera Company, which last year completed its sixth season and which has now become so popular that seats for most of the performances are difficult to get.

IT is significant that the New York City Opera Company has not confined itself to the standard operas, and perhaps part of their success with young people is due to their fresh repertoire. (Part of it is due to the low prices—$3 top. And part to the fact that the singers, male and female, are presentable, their behavior on the stage intelligent.) The company has experimented with such out-of-the-way works as Richard Strauss's "Ariadne in Naxos" and Prokofieff's "Love for Three Oranges." They have dared to present so complex a work as "The Meistersi one so small as Massenet They have given Menotti Goes to the Ball, and are to give the American pr Tamkin's The Dybbuck Among the standard w have done well are Carm ata, The Marriage of Fi Don Giovanni. Boon companion to the woman who has an unpredictable household, and never knows when guests may turn up for a snack or a full meal, is the famous Arvin Electric Cook. Now it has been re-designed inside and out, but it still gives you top performance in cooking hamburgers, cheese sandwiches, waffles—what have you. The beauty of it is that it gives you 190 sq. in. of cooking surface, yet when closed it's only 12" square. Buy it with or without four waffle grids. Drip spouts in 2 corners for draining purposes.

Maybe you haven't used your vacuum cleaner as much as you could because it was awkward to haul it all over the room. Well, no worry about that with the new General Electric canister-type cleaner. It is made with a swivel top into which you fit extension tubes and hose. Then, as you move around the room, the top rotates and you can clean virtually the whole place without moving the cleaner. It has a large dirt storage capacity and a disposable dirt bag, which needs replacement only a few times a year.

Sleeves, pockets, pleats hold no terror any more for the woman who has to iron them. Westinghouse has a new open-handle iron, and of course the upper part of the material slides through the handle opening. (No need to turn garments inside-out.) There's another advantage, too. The new handle design fits the hand, so you can work without strain on hand or wrist. Since there's no barrier to get in the way of your thumb, hand can be relaxed all the time. It's easy to roll the iron back on its heel without lifting it.

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL NOVEMBER 1951

to the homemaking styles of the next 10 years

Forty-nine pages of this issue are devoted to showing and explaining what House Beautiful believes will be the predominating new style trends during the next decade. This knowledge can help you spend your homemaking dollars wisely, so the new things you acquire will not become obsolete before they are worn out.

ELIZABETH GORDON Editor

House Beautiful's FORECAST of the Styles for the Fifties

Your Future Way of Living

You will strip your life more and more of the unessential encumbrances: the bric-a-brac you have to dust, the dishes that can't be put in the dishwasher, the carpets that show every footprint, the carvings that catch dust, the curtains that have to be washed and starched every three weeks.

You will replace these possessions with things that serve you without your serving them—things that are beautiful but which are also fitted to their purpose, things that minimize maintenance instead of asking for it.

Your attitudes about upkeep and maintenance will cause you to find beauty in things you didn't realize were beautiful. These same attitudes will shift your habits, manners, and customs toward informality. Your entertaining will be just as gracious but less strained, less of a chore.

Your house will focus more and more outward toward the outdoors through glass. Glass will stop the weather, but the real walls of your house will be the outer edge of your garden, where fences and screen plantings will be the real barrier walls of your house, that give you privacy, enclose you. As a result, your rooms will seem bigger than you ever dreamed possible. Also, as a result, you will instinctively want all your indoor furnishings to merge sympathetically, in color, texture, and pattern, with nature outdoors so there will not be any sharp line of demarcation at the glass wall. This merger will produce subtle changes in what you consider desirable and beautiful.

Even if you don't live in a house, your apartment will reflect these same decorating and furnishings tendencies. For this attitude (about walls not confining us and the beauties of nature) is one of the big social forces of this century. To understand why, read Dr. Linton's article on page 298.

You will like Textures

The biggest style news in the home field is the high rating of texture. Watch for texture in everything—furniture, architecture, fabrics, wallpapers, floor coverings. The texture may be real and three dimensional. Or it may be the effect or merely the impression of texture. Or it may be achieved by emphasizing natural irregularities of the material, such as the grain in wood, or the slubby nature of some threads, etc. Or it may be accomplished by three-tone or four-tone effects to produce a look of tweediness or graininess, even on a smooth surface.

This liking for the textural look is bringing natural materials into style prominence. For natural materials have interesting variations which can be played up, featured as the design, made to take the place of ornament. Our liking of texture produces a preference for the hand-woven look in fabrics, where character rather than evenness is the aim. It is bringing brick and stone inside our rooms as interior finishes. It is making wood popular for walls; it is bringing back into style grass and rush matting; reviving grass cloth wallpaper, upping the demand for rough-sawn lumber, creating a brand new type of furniture finish (see pages 204-205), causing a revolution in floor covering styles. The trend is away from the shiny and uniform, and is toward the dull, glowing, and variable.

The 4 gauges of good design in our times:

beauty, simplicity, convenience and utility.

Styles in homemaking are somewhat like a layer cake that is always being added to from the top. New styles build up like layers, on top of old styles. And the old ones on the bottom crumble away after a 20-to-30-year period. Favored styles of the last few decades will continue to be seen, for people do not discard old houses or old furnishings till they wear out. But new styles, that will characterize the decade of the 50's, have come into being. They are well enough crystallized so that HOUSE BEAUTIFUL can describe them for you quite exactly

You will like Landscape Colors

There is a positive, pronounced trend (in both decorating and architecture) to landscape colors: the warm browns, beiges, and grays of soils, sands, rocks, bark; the multitudes of greens in leaves, grasses, ferns; the delicate colors of the sky and of sunsets. You will make no style mistake if you use these colors in the same way Nature uses them. Use ground colors underfoot. On walls and ceilings use the colors Nature uses overhead. Nature, the best stylist of them all, can be your guide and master, your inspiration.

Flower colors will continue to be popular, but used in the same proportions as they are used by Nature—that is to say, in small quantities and as accents against the other less brilliant colors.

It will be stylish to combine several colors to make another color. This can happen only when a textured surface is involved, because then different parts of the texture can be different colors. See pages 196-197, 200-203. Tweedy types of fabrics, salt and pepper effects, stippled effects, irregular textural effects are all coming in.

Watch the new tendency toward monochromatic color scheming, in which you do a whole room or a whole house in many shades of one color with a very small percentage of accent color used only for sparkle. These new color schemes look deceptively simple, but can be really quite sophisticated because so many subtle gradations of color can be worked in.

You will like Landscape Patterns

Patterns that derive from Nature are the strongest contenders for style in the foreseeable future. Nature forms, commonly found in the average landscape, are currently the darlings of the designers as well as of the public. Particularly stylish are those nature forms which previously did not inspire the designer: driftwood, mushrooms, field grasses, wildflowers, ferns, the veins in leaves, bamboo stalks, pussy-willows, seed pods, thistles, dandelion puffballs, lichens, etc. We are all suddenly noticing the close-up beauty prevalent in the natural scene around us. Nature, as she arranges herself without man's aid, seems to be a dominant style inspiration of this decade. It is an infinitely rich design source, which has only begun to be tapped by designers and stylists. It is undoubtedly a mood which will last for a long time, since it is so compatible with our outward-turning houses and the strong upward surge in the use of glass.

You will like Integrated and Organic Designs

Whether it is architecture, or furniture, or a teacup, you will have a growing liking for the kind of designing known as "organic." An organic design is a form which expresses the innate character of the thing. It results when all the elements of an object integrate completely into one whole.

Choose

LANDSCAPE PATTERNS

You will run into a real embarrassment of riches when you set out to find patterns that derive from natural forms in the landscape. As you can see from the array on these two pages, the designers are getting their inspirations from natural wonders in the ordinary landscape—forest vegetation, scattered showers of leaves, winter-bare trees—instead of "show-place" gardens.

Think back over all the traditional floral patterns you have known since you were a child and you will see the difference. Formerly, designers took their motifs from idealized blossoms, the perfect specimens in the seed catalog that represented the maximum results of arduous cultivation. (Continued on page 290)

LANDSCAPE TEXTURES

Every era has its pets and darlings in ideas, people and things. We feel about textured surfaces, in this decade, the way the Elizabethans felt about brocade. We think they are beautiful. So they are selling "like a house afire" in all price levels and in everything from fabrics and wallpapers to ceramics and carpets.

These textural furnishings may be really textured. Or they may seem to be, by the combining of several flecks of color. Or they may be printed impressions of texture seen as from a distance. Examples of all these are shown here.

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL predicts that our current liking for textures will last a long time—for practical and social reasons. Textures are practical, don't readily show signs of wear and soil, and merge objects into their backgrounds like the protective coloration of a bird. In short, they make sense for the easy, unostentatious life of our times.

LANDSCAPE COLORS

The best color system ever devised in the history of the world awaits you outside your windows. You'll make no color mistakes if you use Nature's color schemes for your decorating. For all Nature colors are compatible with each other. You can use them everywhere, with safety and confidence

On the opposite page you see only a handful of the thousands of beautiful colors that occur in the everyday landscape. They are there to remind you of the multitude of foolproof colors and schemes awaiting you outside your windows—waiting to be picked for decorating use inside your rooms.

Nature is infinitely wise about color. She never makes a color mistake. The colors of the things that make up the landscape are always colored agreeably—never shrieking or posturing for attention, always blending with each other agreeably and modestly.

There has been a lot of nonsense written about "the right color"—as though certain colors are better some years than other years. All colors are always good colors. The real problem is: How are they used? Are they combined pleasingly? Are they used logically for the work they are supposed to do? Do they compose together, enhance or spoil the objects seen against them? Do they "knock your eye out," shrieking at you so loudly they give you no peace? Or do they merge together so agreeably that you are rested and happy?

There is no such thing as a bad color, per se. But there can be a bad use of color. A color can be surrounded with other colors so it seems bad. Or it can be used in too generous proportions, if it is a strong, violent color.

There are styles in the way we use color. These styles last 15 or 20 years, and are always tied to bigger movements in taste. When the taste for 18th Century English decorating was in its ascendency we used 18th Century color, proportioned and combined in an 18th Century manner, using large areas of dark greens and dark reds, smaller areas of gold, etc. in the traditional schemes of that time. Now those same colors are still being used, but in a different, untraditional manner. Styles in color combinations change, but good colors go on forever.

It is clear beyond question that we are presently drawn to colors of Nature, used in the manner Nature uses them. Landscape colors, and schemes that combine landscape colors the way Nature does, are the "best-sellers" in all types of merchandise which have large-area use—paints, floor coverings, wallpapers, curtains, upholsteries, etc. Small-area merchandise (such as towels, accessories) may be brilliantly colored, since these small things will look right against the quieter or grayed colors of the large areas. Use these principles and you will like to live with the result for a long time.

GREENS

The dark shadows of the deep woods produce a different family of greens from those seen in open sunlight. They are greens with a bluish cast, or greens with a pronounced leaning toward gray, like the grayed greens of spruce needles.

DECORATING SCHEMES How the textures, of the landscape translate into decorating materials

GRASS AND GROUND-COVER

GREENS

The greens that grow out in open sunlight are yellow greens, and are lighter and more transparent than is commonly realized. Consequently, they compose wonderfully with the yellows and golds, make wonderfully restful rooms to live in.

BARK AND STONE

GRAYS

The grays found in rocks and stones and tree barks are rich, warm, and luxurious. These grays range all the way from the purplish grays to the brownish and charcoal grays. They seem richest when used monochromatically. They are also ideal when used as big backgrounds for tiny areas of sparkling, contrasting color. When you are out walking, look close up at the colors in these things. You'll see how to make lovely decorating schemes.

BROWNS

OF DRIED LEAVES AND GRASS

The browns that come in the winter, or in the dry season when nature is at rest, make wonderful colors to live with. They are restful, easy to housekeep, and flattering to possessions and people. They combine with almost every flower color. Look around this winter and see how many wonderful browns there are in nature.

LOOK OUTSIDE YOUR WINDOWS FOR

GRAYS

The grays found in Nature are a warm, rich, versatile family of colors. They can hint at all the other colors in the rainbow—mauves, plums, browns, yellows, reds, greens—yet still be gray. The grays in stones and rocks are usually interestingly flecked with other colors. The grays are wonderful decorating colors.

The new style in furniture finishes

The trend is away from opaque finishes and stains that conceal and minimize the natural variations of wood. The trend is toward finishes that capitalize on natural variations inherent in materials. Watch also for brand new materials, with real or apparent textures

This house shows American attitudes toward living in its inviting and unpretentious exterior and in its generous, easily-cared-for approach via the motor court. This house, so different in function and in form, has a strong family resemblance to the house on the opposite page. The California house, designed for year-round living, has the same unpretentious appearance as its Eastern counterpart, which consists of a single room intended for entertaining. Both houses use simple, natural materials. Both show the same ready acceptance of the conditions of the site. Both are superb examples of the American Style.

What the American Style

As charming and as easily cared for as the motor court on opposite page is the unassuming foot path leading to the door of this house. "Brookhouse," a playhouse on the Frederick Beckmans' farm, near Princeton, N. J. Architect, Kenneth Kassler. Landscape Designer, Daniel U. Kiley.

This building, at once playhouse and retreat, reflects new patterns of living which are now spreading from West to East, and are beginning to supplement the patterns of the nineteenth-century houses which were built until about the 1930's. Although the form of this building takes us into the past, the long lines and the big windows belong to the present. They serve as a reminder that the American Style is an evolving thing.

house looks like

These two houses have the look of "Pace-Setters"—the look that is spreading all through America. Whether it is built in the East or West, it has certain common characteristics that mark it as a new thing, peculiar to our country and our times

WEST

Each of these houses is designed to make the most of its relationship to the outdoors and especially to the water. Here, the glass gable end of the living room looks out over a man-made pool, fed by springs far up the canyon. The terrace of the living room cantilevers out over the water.

The character of the American Style shows in boldness of design, in the sturdy, natural materials of both house and furniture, in the large uncluttered living space and in the picture window expanded into a wall. The exposed framing, the wide board walls, contrasting with the changing pattern of sky, water, and foliage, make the decoration of the room.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

A masterpiece of landscape design, this garden recreates the world of nature, a place of peace and a sanctuary for the spirit. The architectural look of this house epitomizes a very pronounced trend in the development of our native indigenous American architectural styling, which will continue strongly into the foreseeable future.

EAST

"Brookhouse" is built on the site of an old ice house at the side of a pond, which was formed by damming up a small brook. The glass walls of the house look out over the pool, while the balcony hangs out over the water. The designing of both houses is based on a desire to achieve extreme openness.

Exposed roof trusses and open walls give the same effect as the beamed ceiling and glass gable end in the Western house. Each of these houses displays the same nostalgia for the pioneer cabin. In spite of different furniture, each house has the same open, easy, comfortable look that invites you to relax. Both of them are very sophisticated houses.

"Brookhouse" seems an inevitable outgrowth of its situation, belonging both to nature and to man. Its characteristics derive from our American attitudes about what is good and true, lasting and valuable in life. This is what always shapes architectural styles. The new styles: handmaidens to economy

If you want to see how, in architecture, these new trends blend the forms of nature with those of engineering, study the details of this inexpensive house

This is the Fitches' own house. We built it the way we wanted, of materials we could afford, in the most economical manner I could devise. Because—just like everyone else—we wanted a lot of house for our money.

The other editors on the staff of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL tell me that our finished house has important style significance. Maybe so. I wouldn't know about that, for I was not trying to prove anything, stylistically, when I designed it. I was merely using every bit of "know-how" at my disposal to gain more space for our money. I used inexpensive structural materials and tried to use them in a straightforward manner so that, without finicky cabinet work or expensive finishes, they would give a pleasing result.

Indoors and out—all of one piece

Our dining room and kitchen are one, separated only by an old wrought-iron screen, parchment-backed. Everywhere, exposed wood has been lightly buffed with a hand sander, then waxed. Glass walls opening onto a planted terrace of old weathered brick make this room optically bigger than it is. And its colors and textures mesh with the landscape, winter and summer.

The merits of doing the sensible thing as simply as possible

The form of the living room came from accepting necessities of site and climate. A simple rectangle sunk into hillside along the west (see bottom of facing page), it is open to sun and view on east and south. The size was determined by the length of the ceiling beams. The color scheme was based on values of old brick and old wood. Fabric colors and textures were selected accordingly. A fireplace is this room's one extravagance—placed so that we can enjoy fire and view simultaneously. Brick floor was sanded and is waxed and maintained like wood.

By all sorts of economies, we were able to hold costs down to $11 a sq. ft., while standard costs in our area were running at least $15 to $17 a sq. ft. Yet it was these very economies which produced the qualities of style which the rest of our staff find significant.

This is reasonable enough, for all basic styles (as opposed to fads and fashions) are produced by social and economic forces. And it stands to reason that today's rising building costs are bound to lead to new concepts of what is good and beautiful in architecture. Necessity is the mother of invention, stylistically as well as mechanically.

Another factor governed this design. Any house like ours, with whole walls of glass, must fit companionably into its surroundings. It has to, since the landscape becomes the wall itself. This fact led us to carry the textures, colors, and forms of the landscape into the house itself. But this is not a private discovery, for thousands of other homeowners must have come to the same conclusion. How else (Continued on page 302)

Bedroom and bath combine old and new Floor, walls, and ceiling of the bedroom are all panel materials. Douglas Fir plywood floors are stained and varnished; walls are hung in Fabricona, a processed burlap; Cemesto ceiling is painted. All wood is waxed, including slab-sawn walnut planks in bench and headboard. Bathroom walls and counter-tops are Panelyte plastic panels. Floor is Kennedy's plastic tile laid on plywood.

We have summer all year round

This sunken indoor garden gives our bedroom a pleasant outlook, winter and summer. It faces south across a brick-paved terrace. Plants are all potted, so they can be rotated to avoid lop-sided growth and changed for bloom. Pots are sunk in soil to hold moisture and soil is top-dressed with multi-colored gravels. In this picture, glass doors are open, sliding insect screens removed and Raytox bass wood "curtains" pulled back to left of the opening.

There is no such thing as a "common" material. Old wood, old brick, polished plate glass—each is beautiful in its own way.

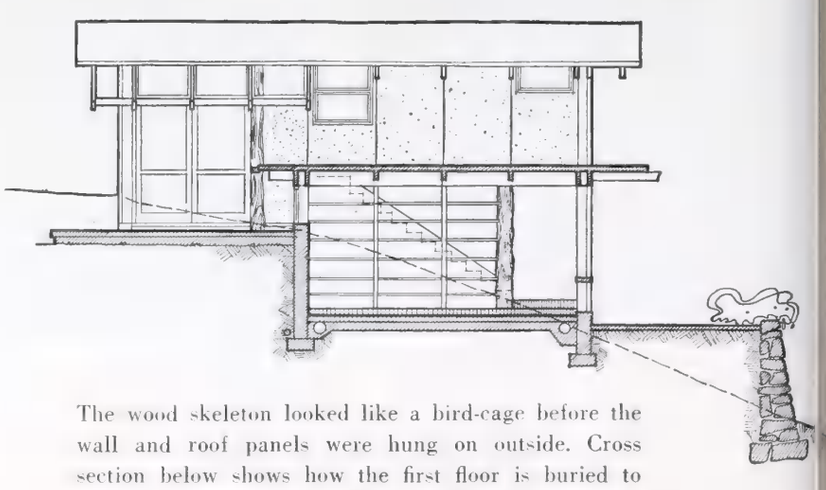
Grass cloth and fern-patterned linen combine easily with waxed wood and cast iron. Textures and colors of all are distinctly naturalistic.

Honest structure pays handsome dividends

Radiantly heated for comfort, this brick floor has been sanded and waxed for easy maintenance. It is easily washed or vacuumed, and shows no foot tracks.

The integral textures of these interiors are not rustic affectations but the direct expression of the materials and their method of assembly. They are the result of an effort to economize on finish, i.e., all the moldings, casings, trim, etc., used in conventional construction. By and large, these materials also happen to be easier to clean (and harder to soil or damage) than conventional finishes. These assets would not be decisive, of course, unless they also produced interiors which were aesthetically satisfactory. For us, the owners, they do just that, offering us a pleasant yet unobtrusive background. Equally important, their subdued colors and simplified forms make a happy frame for the landscapes beyond the glass walls as they change with the seasons.

One of the most satisfactory aspects of contemporary design trends is the freedom they give. You can combine natural and synthetic materials, old and new art forms, so long as you observe the simplest basic laws of color, proportion, and form.

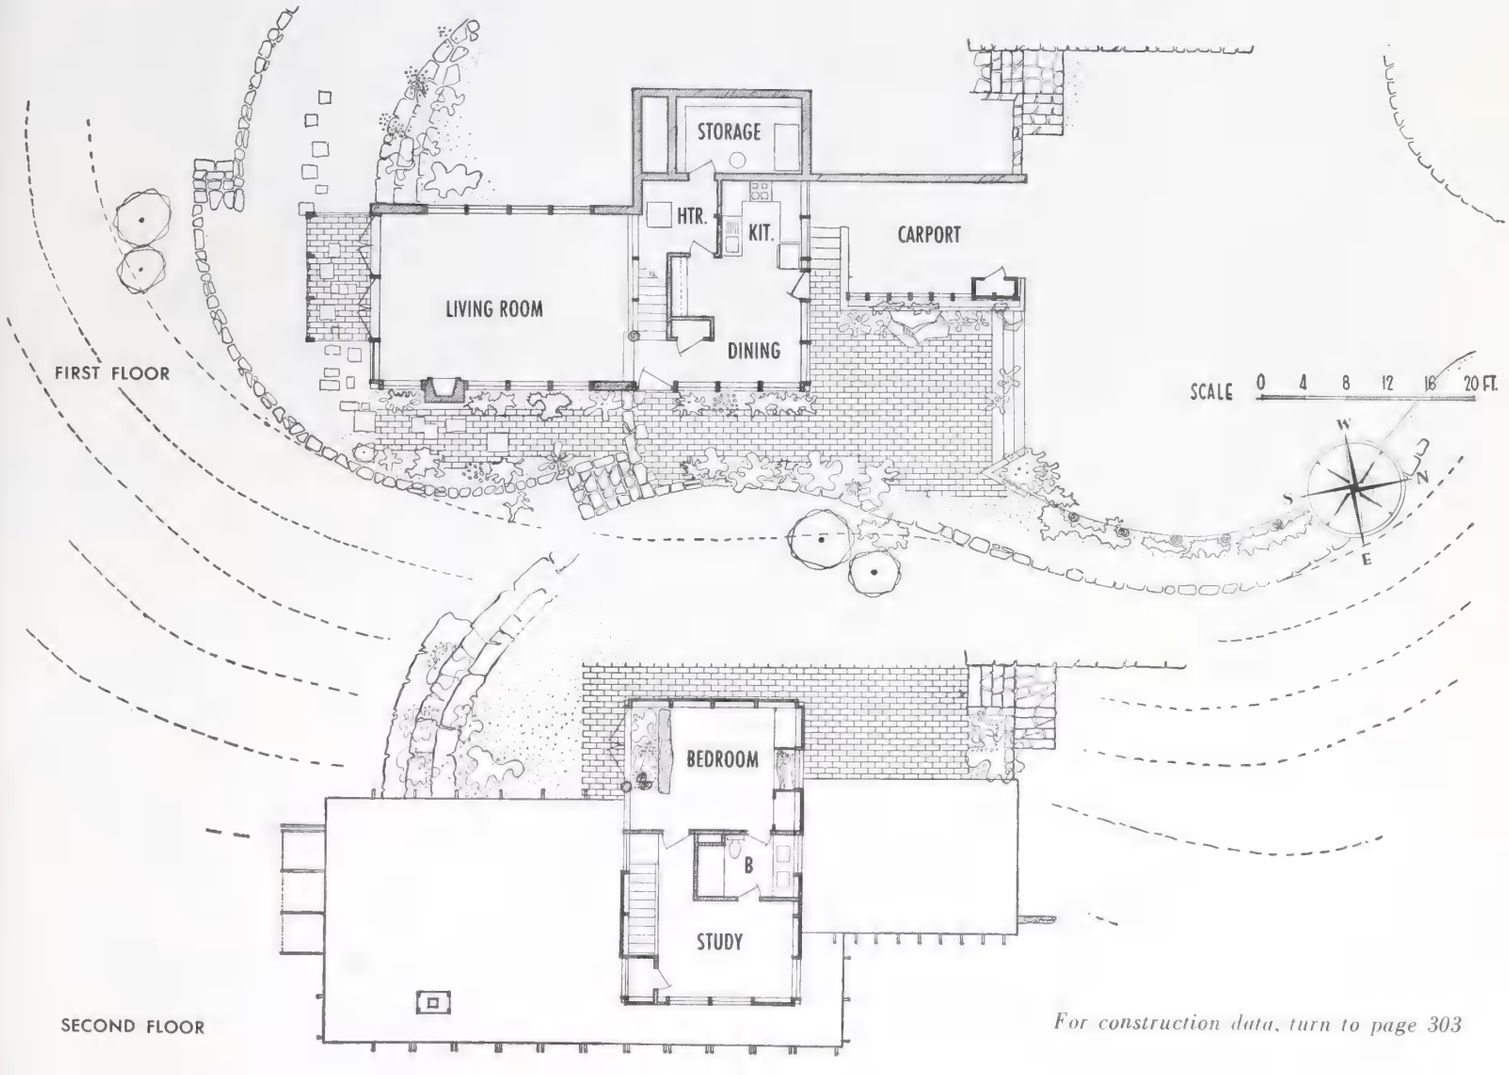


WEST WALL is 95% closed to minimize chilling effect of prevailing winter winds and heat of summer afternoon sun.

Site and climate shaped our plan

Building on a hill has obvious advantages. This southern slope, for example, has a fine panoramic view from east to west. On a bright spring day it all looks wonderful. Not until you've studied it in all weathers do you discover that it's not all equally usable. Prevailing northwest winter winds and hot summer afternoon sun combine to make the western view difficult. East and south, conditions are more genial, though summer sun, driving rains, and sky-glare make wide overhangs mandatory. Hot summers call for ventilation, but cold winters dictate minimum openings. Wind storms imply sturdy construction.

Such considerations led to the plans shown at right. The first floor is set into a notch bulldozed out of the hill. The second floor presents a minimum wall area to the west, doubly insulated and free of windows. To make the most of the view and to exploit the sun's heat in winter, south and east walls are largely glass, one-third of it openable for summer ventilation. This glass is protected from direct sun, driving rain, and sky-glare by overhangs 4 ft. wide along the east, 8 ft. along the south. Even this is not too much: an outside basswood screen shades the dining room on summer mornings; glass curtains are necessary for certain sky- and snow-glare conditions. And to resist wind storms, the wood frame is bolted together.



The wood skeleton looked like a bird-cage before the wall and roof panels were hung on outside. Cross section below shows how the first floor is buried to benefit from stabilizing effect of soil temperatures.

EAST WALL is 25% closed. Large glass areas are practical because of heat-gain from morning sun in winter.

For construction data, turn to page 303

Portrait of a comfortable floor —summer-cool and winter-warm

Masonry floors have a lot in their favor—good looks, long life, easy care. But in cold climates they must be heated. And when used in conjunction with a glass wall, as in this house, heated masonry floors present their problems. They lag behind weather changes, being slow to heat up and cool off. The perimeter system shown above largely overcomes this drawback, by warming floors and air inside house at the same time. Details on how it works on page 277.

Your home is one of the battlefields where the big controversy of our times is being fought out. The direction your taste takes during the next ten years can influence the course of human progress

By Joseph Wood Krutch

Today the grandest of all disputes is that between those who are determined to manipulate man as though he were a machine and those who hope, on the contrary, to let him grow like an organism."

Whether our future is to be totalitarian or free depends entirely upon which side wins the dispute. Nearly every thought we think and nearly every taste we cultivate is part of the choice that we are making.

The houses we live in, the gardens we do or do not cultivate, the very decoration of our walls, proclaim where our own sympathies lie and subtly influence our own convictions.

Do they suggest the world which lives and grows, or the world which obeys the laws of the machine? Do they remind us of the natural universe in which every individual leads its own individual, unique, and rebellious life? Of the universe where nothing, not even one of two leaves, is quite like anything else? Or do they accustom us, instead, to feel more at home in surroundings where everything suggests only machines and machine parts, that do as they are told and could never have known either joy or desire?

It is certainly no accident that the totalitarian philosophies are those which want to make mechanistic theories the official philosophy of the state. If man is nothing but a machine, if there are laws of psychology precisely analogous to the laws of physics, then he can be "conditioned" to do and to want whatever his masters decide. Society is then a machine composed of standard parts, and men can be ordered to become whatever cogs and levers the machine happens to require.

If man is to be made to act dependably, as though he were a mechanical contraption, then he must be made to feel like one. Even if he has time for contemplation, then everything which he contemplates, even the very pictures on (Continued on page 270)

THE DAILY ART OF GOOD LIVIN

BIG SOUPS and how to make a meal out of them

Meals based on big, hearty soups are one of the best ways to cope with high prices and the one-woman kitchen. By "big soups" I mean soups in which meat, vegetables, and broth are all eaten together in one dish and which supply both the bulk and the nutritive values to serve as the main part of the meal. If their nature is understood and they are made really interesting, the rest of the meal need be only a mixed green salad, a good tasty bread, and a light dessert of fruit, cheese, or sweet.

One-dish meals are very much in the spirit of the times. Simple meals built around one big interesting dish are born of the same attitudes and social conditions as our little houses, built around one big glamorous room. They both spell easy, informal living.

Much has been said already about the one-dish meal revolving around the casserole, which is cooked in the oven. But the casserole has a twin, the hearty peasant soup, cooked in a pot on the top of the stove. Both are interchangeable in the menu. Often the soupy casserole and the big hearty soup are very hard to tell apart if you want to be strict in your classification. They are alike in that they are easy to make and easy to serve.

Too little attention has been paid to the "big soup" which requires the knife, fork, and spoon. Perhaps this neglect is due to the fact that such soups were originally peasant soups, requiring all sorts of laborious preparation and long slow simmering. And we have not fully realized how we could achieve the same results using the short-cuts of modern, processed foods that are already partially prepared.

Meals based on hearty soups have a long and colorful history. In the days before stoves. (Continued on page 263)

DRAWING AND PLAN BY SIGMAN-WARD

Mid-century traditions are reflected in the taste and economy of this small suburban home

In a day of high building costs, space becomes at once the most costly and most desirable quality in a house. So, to be really good, a plan must handle what space you can afford with maximum efficiency. Moreover, a good design will proportion the rooms, scale and organize the windows, use textures and colors to make this space seem even larger, visually, than it really is. This house does both admirably, and, what's more, does it at moderate cost: less than $20.000. The bedrooms are admittedly small: but the L-shaped living-dining-play area, wrapped around a big southern balcony, manages a surprising sense of spaciousness and repose.

The style we have been calling Modern is passing out of its adolescence. Its characteristics have become so familiar you probably no longer remember when they were rare. That's what happens when a style becomes a classic. And classics rarely go "out of style."

PHOTOGRAPH BY GOTTSCHO-SCHLEISNER

A perfect example of the texture produced by different kinds of foliages combined with rocks and house masonry. Photographed in the garden of one of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's Pace-Setter houses. Ethelbert Furlong, landscape architect.

Garden styles are changing too. It could not be otherwise, now that gardens are merging with indoor rooms, or are turning into roofless living rooms. New requirements emerge as these new situations and our new wants crystallize in our minds.

One of the new requirements is that we want our gardens to be just as beautiful in winter as in summer. When the garden is practically in our laps in the living room we cannot tolerate an "off-season." When the garden is inches away from our dinner plate or the book we are reading, it is no pleasure to be confronted with dying flower stalks.

So different practices are developing about how to plant a garden. We have new goals. We strive for permanence and low maintenance. We get our effects through foliage compositions that produce interesting contrasts in textures. We use trees and shrubs whose trunks and stem patterns are exciting the year round. We lean heavily on broad-leaf evergreens because they are so satisfactory for winter gardens. We play up conifers for the same reason.

In short the trend is to "foliage gardening," whereas it used to be "flower gardening." We still grow flowers, but more about that another time.

What is foliage gardening? It is the getting of exciting (and permanent) textural effects through the juxtaposition of different kinds of leaves as they are seen against other natural landscape materials—rocks, bark, fencing, paving, etc. The possibilities are limitless, for there are so many hundreds of basic elements that can be manipulated.

There are the ground cover materials: grass, ivy, pachysandra, dichondra, myrtle, and the like. Then there are the tree and shrub foliages, which range in texture from fine to coarse, and which also include the deciduous and herbaceous materials that have exciting seasonal variations. In addition there are hundreds of textures available in the inanimate structural materials used for the architectural part of the house and garden.

Trees and shrubs have a relatively coarse or fine texture, depending mainly on the size and shape of the individual leaf. A shrub with large leaves produces a coarse textured effect in the mass. One with small leaves has a fine textured effect. Similarly, the shape of the individual leaf and the way it is arranged on the branch gives definite pattern to the mass. Just as the size of the leaf gives texture to the mass, the shape of the leaf gives pattern to the mass. It is important to maintain a relationship or sequence of both size and shape, texture and pattern.

Compare the texture of two different leaves—camellia and buddleia, for example. One is leathery, smooth, and glossy, and the other hairy, rough, and dull. One has a smooth, fine texture, and the other a rough coarse texture. That is a microscopic close-up view of two tiny spots in a garden. When you consider a garden as (Continued on page 318)

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S CLIMATE CONTROL PROJECT

How to Live with the western sun

By James M. Fitch

In many parts of America there are fine west views which are pretty tough to enjoy. Not that people don't try. Along Florida's west coast, in Denver and the High Plains, all along the Pacific Coast, people buy "view lots" and build picture windows—and find that for part of the day they are a menace. To keep out the low, hot, western sun, they swathe the glass with awnings, blinds, shades, and curtains. In so doing, they lose the view for roughly a third of every day. Yet it is possible to open up a house to a west view and still protect it from the blistering afternoon sun. The house you see on these pages proves it. It was built to take advantage of a magnificent view out over the Pacific from the pine-clad hills near Carmel, California. This view, obviously, is due west. Due west here means hot, glary sunshine or cold, foggy winds off the ocean. How to filter out the bad climatic aspects of this wonderful view was the problem. The answer: an eight-foot overhang and a second "wall" of pivoting translucent screens, ten feet out from the house on the outer edge of the terrace. See how they work on the opposite page.

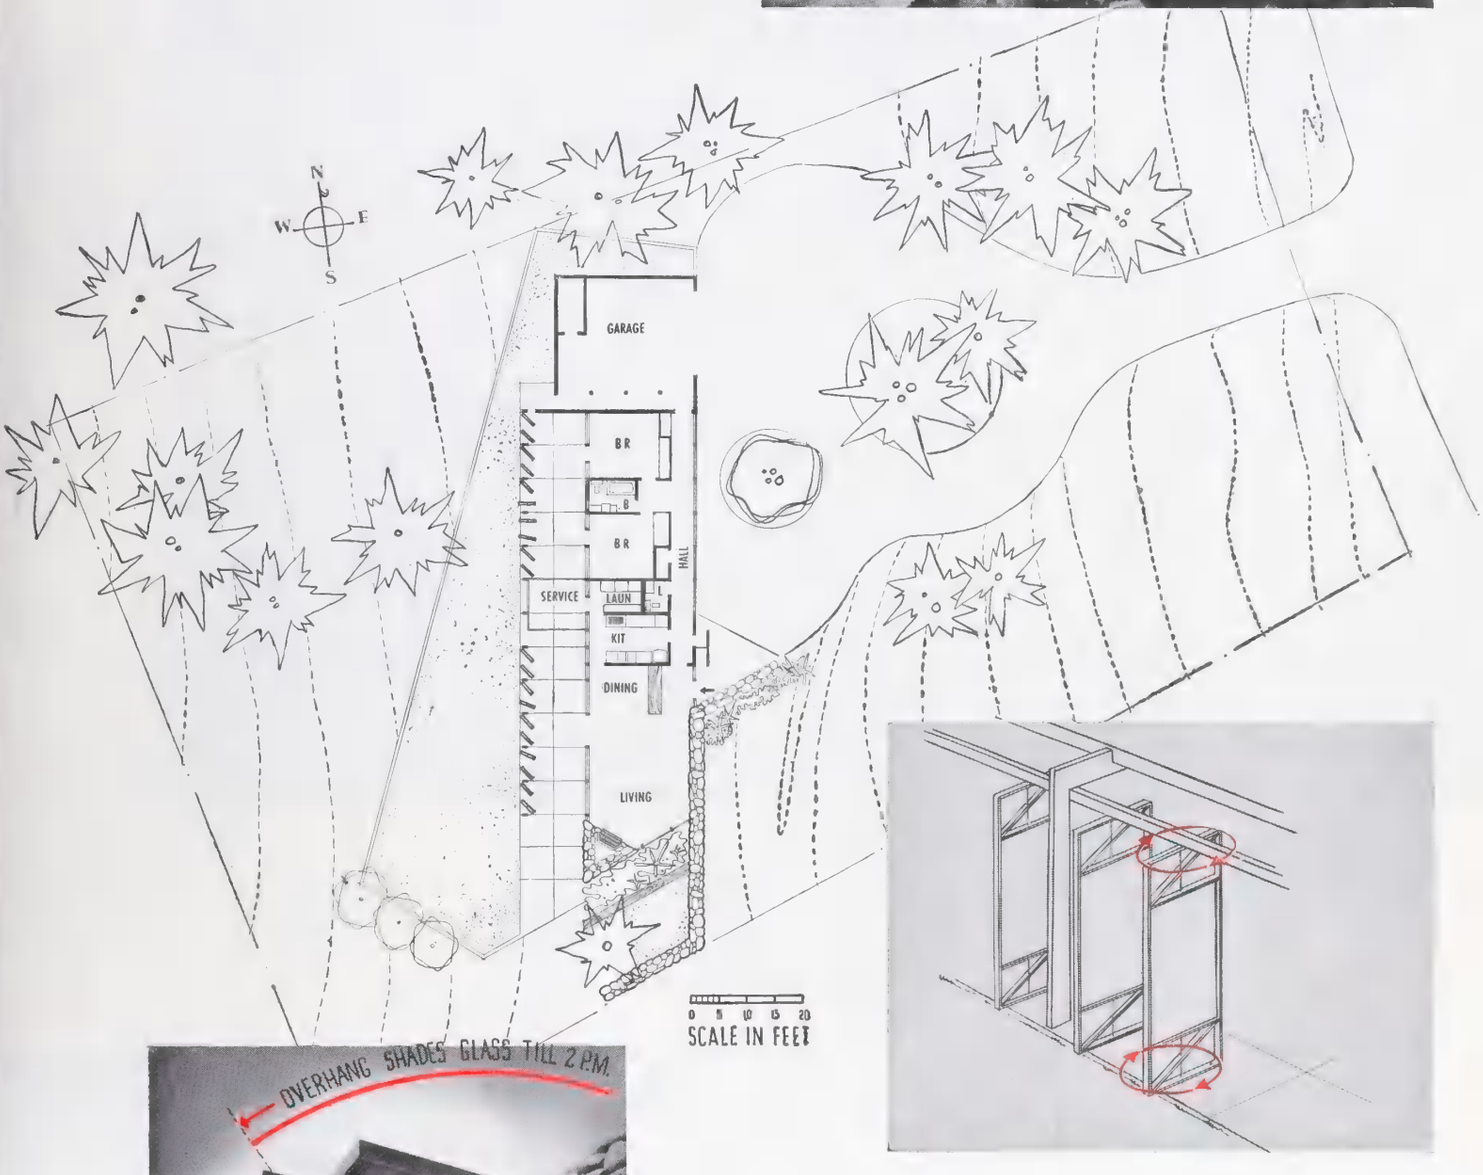
A wall of pivoting plastic screens filters the sting out of this western exposure. Closed, they act as a windbreak or a sunshade. Open (below) they admit full view of ocean and sun when wanted.

Laminated "Polyhemp" is rigid, weatherproof, and fire-resistant.

How to live with the western sun (continued)

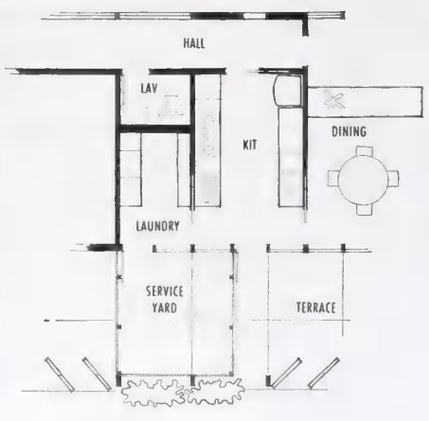
These flexible screens make a west-facing glass wall comfortable to live behind as well as pleasant to look at. They make the dining room and terrace beyond equally comfortable all day long. Screens operate separately, and can be arranged differently for different rooms to suit all whims.



Openness of west wall is balanced by strong, powerfully textured stone wall along east. Built of water-worn boulders from the beach below, this wall goes on through the wall of glass to make a snug little garden at south end of living room. Living room thus gets winter sun and privacy from near-by lot line.

They tamed a western exposure to get an ocean view

The east wall, seen here from motor court, is closed for privacy.



No matter where you live, you have the summer problem of the west wall to some degree. If your house opens to the west, you can learn an important lesson from this one. As you can see from the plan above, every room has glass walls on the west to take advantage of a magnificent view. To keep this outlook pleasant all day long, the glass is protected by a lavish roof overhang, plus a line of rotating, sun-stopping screens. These pivot vertically (above), are operated individually, and can be stopped in any desired position. Thus, when the view is pleasant visually and thermally (such as in the morning when the sun is in the east or south), the blinds are open. As the sun lowers into the west, the blinds are closed, admitting light and air, but not heat and glare.

This living room should convince you that natural forms and textures do not necessarily lead to rusticity. A wall of water-worn boulders and a ceiling of exposed, unfinished timbers are quite at home with the rich textures and suave sophistication of the furnishings. Nor has the builder sacrified convenience to appearance —as witness, the well-equipped kitchen (right, below) and laundry (left, below) with its walled service yard.

Custom designed for site and climate, it sells for a ready-made price

Many people feel that you can't solve problems of local climate without being either a mechanical genius or a millionaire. This house should convince you that neither is necessarily true. It was built by the Carmel Riviera Properties Company as the first unit in a new subdivision. It stands on a landscaped plot 125′ x 200′, and can be bought complete for $29,500. When you consider that, for this price, you get 2,100 sq. ft. of space (including garage), a completely equipped kitchen and laundry, one and one-half baths, a 72-ft. terrace, and perimeter floor heating, you can see that good houses are still possible, even in 1951.

This house proves two things. Climate-wise houses, good to look at and good to live in, need cost no more than bad ones. And the merchant builder can, if he wants to, give you just about the best buy on the market.

Naturally, not all communities have ocean views. Nor do all towns have architects and builders as willing and able as this Carmel combination. But you have every right to expect—indeed, to demand—houses as well suited to your site and climate as this one is to its.

Nor is Carmel's mild climate the explanation for this moderate price. It's true, in colder climates, you'd have to increase roof and wall insulation and you should have double insulating glass. But the heating system (described on page 277) would be adequate for much colder climates, with a furnace of one-third greater heat capacity than required. So, even with these extras, this house should be duplicatable elsewhere for $33,000 to $34,000 or thereabouts.

For complete information on how this house is furnished, and what it's built of, turn to page 292.

Bedrooms have both view and privacy. Though not large themselves, the protected terrace beyond their glass walls gives bedrooms a sense of space unprecedented in small houses. And, thanks to the sun-screens, it's livable space. Since Carmel summer nights are cool, ventilation is of minor importance and most of the glass can be fixed. With hotter summers, more of it would have to open. Note, however, the ventilating unit in door (left, below).

Try the most spectacular winter flower–

AMARYLLIS*

PAINTING BY BRIAN CONNELLY

By Dr. Joseph E. Howland
House Beautiful's Garden Editor

Nature may drain the color out of your landscape in winter, but she doesn't let you down altogether—not when you can grow indoors plants like Amaryllis. For here is a bold statuesque flower that will brighten any room in your house with buxom blooms of brilliant color.

Amaryllis grows very slowly, from seed, so buy the large flowering-size bulbs. These big bulbs are sure to bloom the first year, but you never know when — unless you get the special, heat-treated, imported bulbs that bloom six to eight weeks after planting. These are called "Herald Amaryllis." They will unfold their (Continued on page 324)

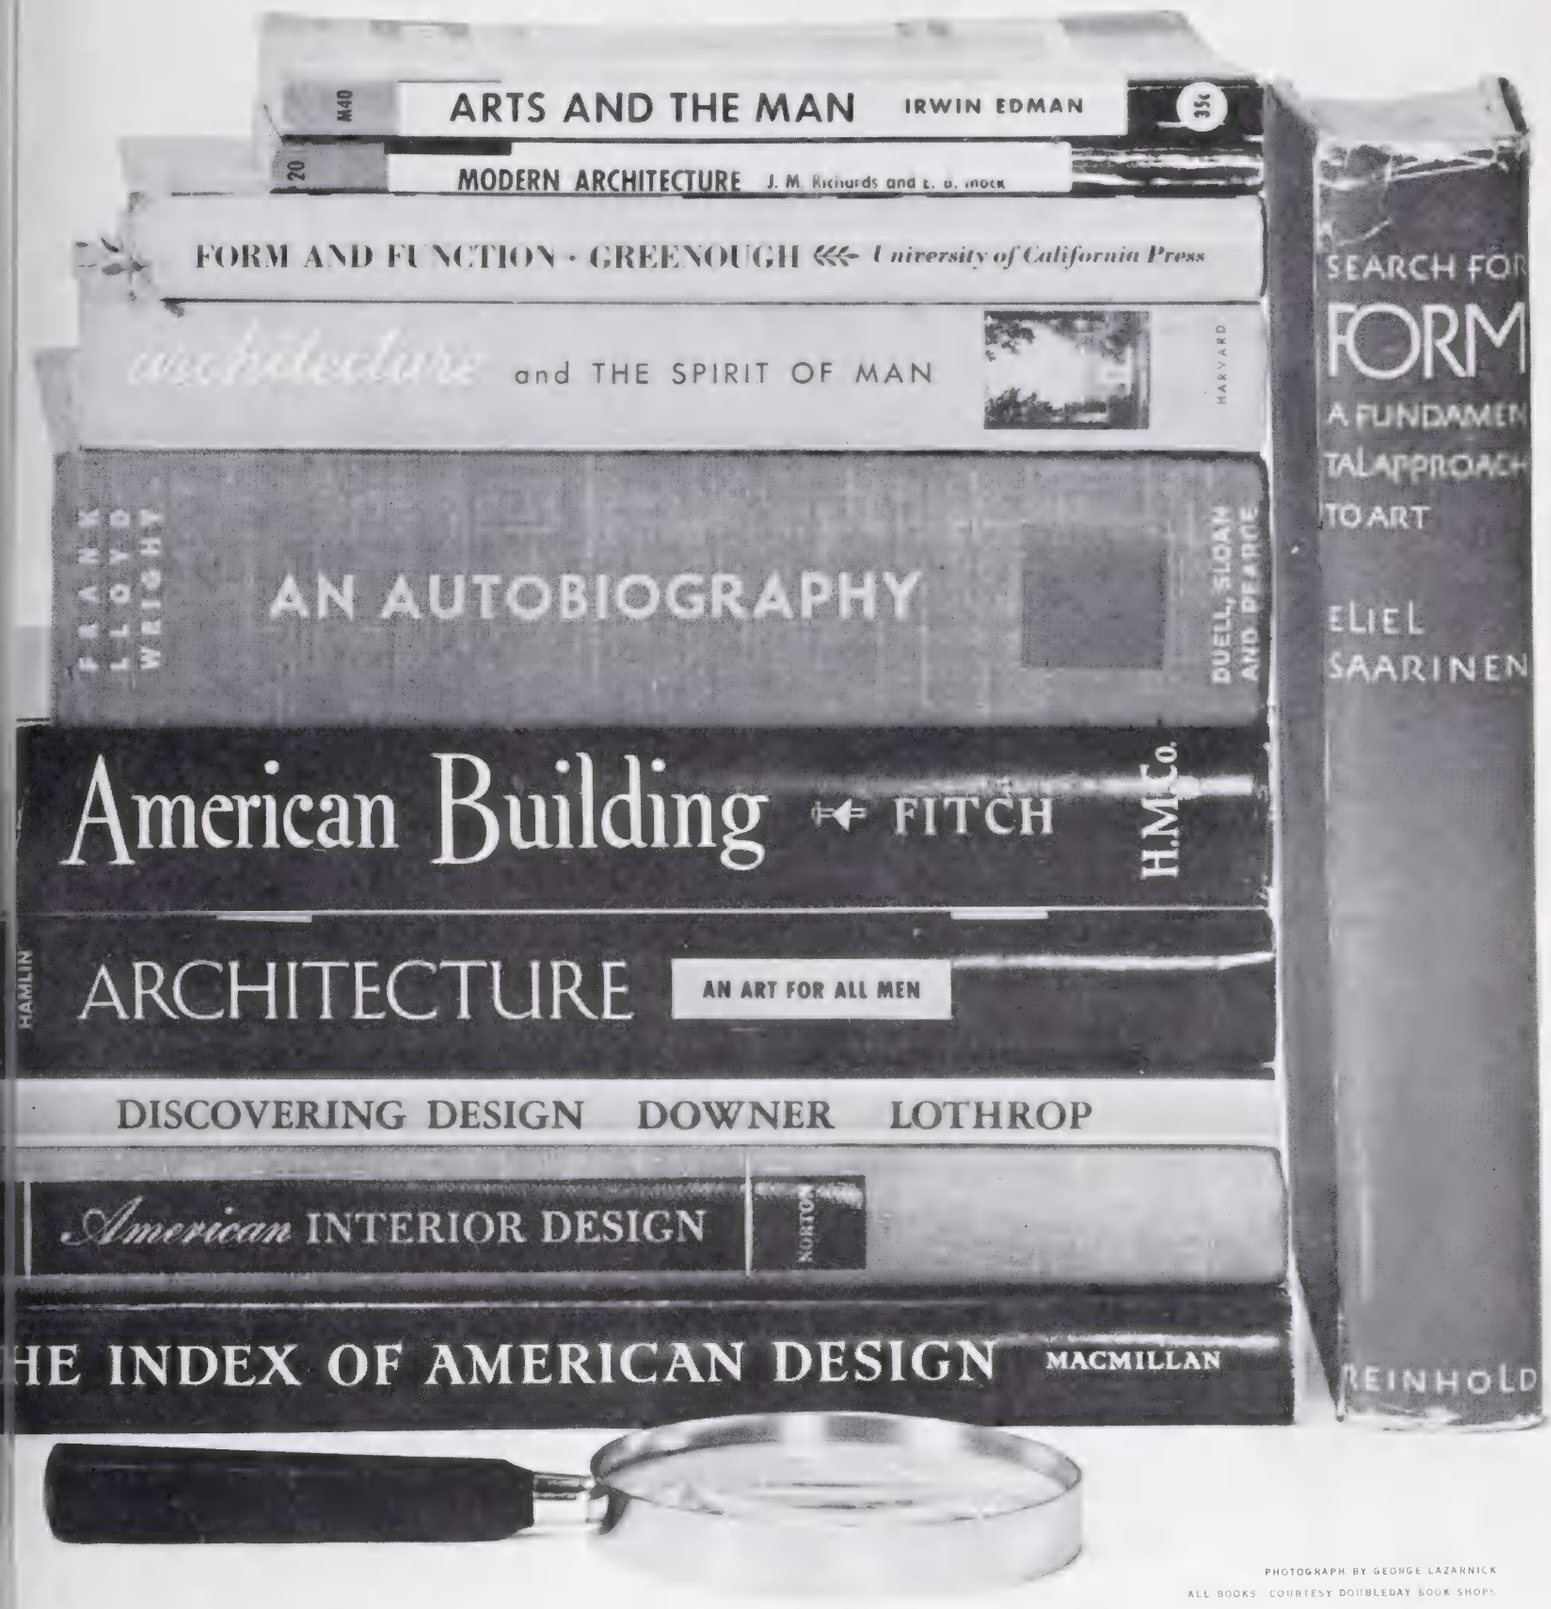
The Library of a connoisseur of Good Living



If you want to be discriminating in matters of good living you need a broad background of philosophy and knowledge. Here are two reading lists—one to broaden and deepen your understanding, the other to give you facts

There's a big difference between a true connoisseur of good living and a homemaker with fitful curiosity and the irrational biases that spring from ignorance.

To be a connoisseur you have to know a good deal more than a handful of truisms such as that north rooms should be decorated in warm colors, or that red wine goes with red meat. You have to have a broad understanding of principles, a sound base on which you can judge things for yourself. A connoisseur should be able to discriminate.

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL aims to help you achieve this goal. But we do not presume to say: "Read HOUSE BEAUTIFUL and you will know all." To become a true connoisseur, you need to read books, too. To this end we give you two book lists, totaling 40 titles. If that number scares you, take heart! It is the first eleven that count the most. You don't need to plow through any five-foot shelf or check off a list of "100 best" in order to acquire a rounded cultural background in good living. Read HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's Eleven—ranging from a slim 104-page volume to an adventure yarn that spins to 560 pages—and you will have covered the best thinking on the subject by some of the top minds of our era. You will find them well worth your time.

PHOTOGRAPH BY GEORGE LAZARNICK

ALL BOOKS COURTESY DOUBLEDAY BOOK SHOPS

There are no dusty textbooks here to be left on the library table for the purpose of impressing intellectual guests. HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's Eleven is reading to enjoy—books to come back to again and again until they get faded and dog-eared. You will find good writing, satisfying humor, and at least one tale of high adventure. You will find the experience of reading them an adventure in itself which will keep on going long after the last cover is closed. For they will open your eyes to a new set of values; they will teach you a kind of game you can play wherever you live, wherever you may travel.

Underlying the main themes of all these books is the age-old search for standards of beauty. They will help you form your own yardstick for beauty, help you crystallize your own tastes. You will realize the important relationship between the quality of our man-made environment and the other aspects of our civilization—politics, economics, fundamental social trends. You will see the interplay between aesthetic satisfaction on the one hand, and physical health and technological progress on the other. In most of these books the story of the present is intertwined with the story of the past. But there (Continued on page 307)

New Rules help home building

By Miles Colean

You can build a house of any size or cost. But how much metal you can use is limited. There are, however, many ingenious ways to build within this limitation

The federal government has changed its house-building rules for a third time in a year. No longer is there any limitation as to the cost of houses that may be built under the regulations of the National Production Authority: nor is there any longer a restriction on square feet of floor area as we told you in our July issue.

All this is out the window. A completely new system has been substituted. According to the new plan, which went fully into effect the first of October, no one may begin any kind of construction that requires critical metal materials (steel, copper, aluminum) without a specific authorization from NPA. However, for certain limited amounts of steel and copper, the builder of a single-family house may submit his "self-authorization" and automatically receive his allotment. This means a big saving in delay and red tape. It also means more freedom in building.

Forms for the "self-authorization" may be obtained from your nearest Federal Housing Administration office and all applications must be submitted to that office. If you employ a general contractor, he should attend to this matter. But make sure he does so, because if he doesn't, you may find yourself subject to serious delay.

Here is the new rule in detail: You may build a house of any cost or size you may dare to undertake, provided that you do not use steel or copper in excess of the amounts given in the following formulas: (1) If you use steel water pipe, you may obtain 1,800 pounds of the steel products and 35 pounds of copper products as described below. (2) If you use copper for your water system, you may obtain 1,450 pounds of steel and 160 pounds of copper.

The allowance of steel covers such products as nails, reinforcing steel, steel pipe for water, gas, and heating, rigid conduit for electric wire, flashing, termite shields. It does not include such manufactured steel products as ducts for a heating system, hardware, windows, basement areaways, septic tanks, gutters, downspouts, reinforcing mesh, and all kinds of equipment—steel plumbing fixtures, kitchen cabinets, furnaces, ranges, and so forth. You are free to buy any of these manufactured items that you can find in the market. Some of these items may be hard to find, since they are subject to an over-all limitation of almost half the quantity produced a year ago.

The order does not limit the use of cast iron. You may, therefore, include any quantity of cast iron products (soil pipe, radiators, plumbing fixtures, etc.) that you may require. You cannot, however, use structural steel for columns, beams, lintels over doors and windows, or for any other purpose. Wood, masonry, or reinforced concrete must be used instead.

★ Two new methods of home heating which require no piping and little or no duct work are described in this issue on pages 277 and 280.

No matter how you figure it, the allowance for copper will not go much farther than what is needed for water piping (if copper is used for this purpose) and wiring. There may be a little poundage (Continued on page 315)

Contempora

a Bigelow Masterweave

How American it is to want the finest . . . and to get it! And Contempora is a triumphant example of how fine a carpet can be! Truly a modern American classic, skillfully woven of the finest yarns the world's markets afford.

Contempora can be yours (lucky you) in Silver Green as shown above, or Pewter Grey or Champagne. All have a style you'll be proud to live with and a texture you love to touch.

Of course, Contempora is a Bigelow, famous for beauty you can see . . . quality you can trust . . . since 1825.

Old and new are combined in easy-to-look-at, easy-to-clean interiors in the Fitches' new home

How the sofas are made of carpentered frames and slip-covered mattresses.

Cantilevered and integrated end tables are surfaced in walnut.

These two sofas, built by a local carpenter to the architect's drawings, give over 12 feet of comfortable seating, with integral tables at either end. The white oak frames are 7′ 8″ long (including tables) 2′ 6″ wide and 11″ high. The bottom is of ¾-inch fir plywood, recessed to hold mattresses in place. Oak frame extends beyond sofa end to carry cigarette- and alcohol-resistant table tops in real walnut Formica Realwood.

Foam rubber mattresses are 30 inches wide. Together with the tapered bolsters, which are 9 inches deep at the bottom, this yields comfortable seating. At the same time, the sofas are long enough to make first-rate beds for overnight guests.

Slip covers for bolsters and mattresses are made from bed-spreads, "Betsy Bates-1810" pattern, dyed a grape-blue. Oak frames are sanded, lightly glazed in white, then waxed.

The materials used in furnishing the Fitch house came from the following sources:

Family Florida

Florida has a persistent reputation for glamour, grandiose hotels, and sophisticated goings-on in its name resorts. But a little probing will disclose that Florida is also amazingly well heeled with areas in which simpler folk and their children can come in for their share of the famous sunshine.

Daytona Beach, of oceanside auto-racing fame, is especially family-minded. A solid-citizen town of thirty thousand, it's well equipped with the churches, schools, libraries, and standards that are the backbone of constructive year-around family living anywhere. In addition, it has an unusual number of visitor accommodations in which you can carry on much as you would at home, with privacy and the needed controls over hours and diet. To enter your children in Daytona schools, any time, you need only buy a Florida auto license. And this city's long experience in making visitors like it has led to many special arrangements for the younger set: roped-off beach areas to protect toddlers at play, others set aside to permit the very young safe experiment with the midget powered cars so much in evidence hereabouts; a tennis training program famous for producing child stars; a fishing pier for children only; and, for teen-agers, a Youth Council, which maintains a boardwalk Patio providing supervision and inexpensive refreshments for dances and games.

When you write the Daytona Chamber of Commerce, ask specifically about the Cottage Colony, some two thousand self-contained dwellings, cottages, motor courts, apartments, along four miles of protected beach. Many are brand new and zig-zagged to give everybody a view of the ocean at the front yard. Inquire about Ellinor Village, too. Here you can occupy your own completely equipped pastel villa, the shopping center has a supermarket and a launderette, and there are playgrounds, a day nursery, baby-sitting services.

Look Before You Leave

The romantic and too optimistically publicized possibility of driving all through Mexico and then going right on, through Central, into South America—just how good is it? For a frank answer, get the American Automobile Association's latest survey of the Pan American Highway south, called Motoring in Central and South America. This is available to members of affiliated clubs at their club offices, or by sending 15 cents to the International Travel Department, AAA, 250 Park Avenue, New York 17.

In spite of completion of the highway to the Mexico-Guatemala border, it seems there are still four important reasons not to start out without some preliminary investigation. First is the gap in the Highway just over the Mexico-Guatemala border. This usually has to be circumvented by shipping your car by railroad flat car from an interior Mexican town like Arriaga or Tonala to Tapachula at the border. From here a gravel road permits access to Guatemala City and beyond. Second gap occurs at the Nicaragua-Costa Rica border. To overcome this, you again ship your car, first by railroad to Managua, Nicaragua, north to Corinto, and thence by steamer to Puntarenas, Costa Rica, from which you can drive to San Jose. Third is a gap at the Costa Rica-Panama border, requiring that you drive back to Puntarenas to take a steamer to Panama. And, fourth, is the two hundred miles of still impenetrable jungle beginning below Panama City, leaving you no choice but to ship by steamer from Cristobal to a South American port such as Buenaventura, Colombia.

It can be done. But you will find the booklet's detailed analysis of road, weather, and other conditions, shipping schedules and costs invaluable in determining whether this is your dish. If you go philosophically prepared to accept the delays and headaches involved, you will probably have a high old time and a corner on the kind of adventure stories travelers always like to bring home.

Desert Bright Lights

Free and easy, that's Las Vegas, Nevada, and mighty proud of it, podner! If that's for you, you'll really like this carnival city in the desert. Las Vegas's neons blaze all night over the determinedly gay 90's gambling halls of old Fremont Street. Its first luxury hotels out on the Strip boast spectacular pools, headline floor shows, lush casinos. Facilities encompass golf courses, a race track, a Little Church of the West, a typical Frontier Village, rodeos, and the usual riding routines in the trackless desert all around.

But to a surprising number Las Vegas is also well-cushioned and comparatively inexpensive headquarters for more serious and staid pursuits. Rates at even the luxury hotels are from around $8 double without meals. Only 35 miles away is Hoover Dam, where National Park Service guided tours initiate you into the dam's mysteries. Adjacent Lake Mead, busy at times with boat races and water skiing, is also good for longer cruises in and out of quiet, awesome polychrome canyons. Black bass bite the year around here, and rainbow trout await you in the Colorado River just below the dam. Only an hour's drive from your sun-drenched Las Vegas pool, high Mount Charleston co-operatively gathers snow in season for skiing. And within only a day's journey lies the primeval solitude of Death Valley, the poignant remnants of little ghost towns, and the splendors of Grand, Zion, and Bryce Canyons.

You'll find the Dominican Re-...blic gloating over the latest in ... string of luxury hotels, the Boca ...ica Casino-Hotel at Boca Chica ...each, 30 miles out of Ciudad Tru-jillo. This is luxury on four levels, with a circular bar swung out over the water, parking facilities for small craft at the door, a casino, and shops. Its architecture is modern, similar to that of the fabulous Jaragua Hotel in Ciudad Trujillo and the Montana, high in the mountains overlooking La Vega Real.

More surprising, you'll find that Haiti too has added modern luxury to its picturesque scene. Among its latest hotels, El Rancho, 1,200 feet above Port au Prince in the leafy-cool suburb of Petionville, sports an illuminated pool, a night club with South American entertainment and both meringue and rumba orchestras, and Haiti's only gambling casino.

Like the clothes you wear or the phrases you use, your home should express you. The starting point in room character is good basic furniture design. For the modern man and woman, fussy styles won't do. Rather a design like the one shown here—sophisticated, simple, direct—to express the twentieth century you.

News for Dudes

When you pack for Wickenburg this winter, put in the usual riding, sunning, and swimming togs. But don't forget your golf clubs. For Wickenburg's choice nine-hole, all-grass golf course—just a little matter of six miles of pipe, plenty of water, daily sunshine—has in less than two years wrought changes in Arizona's "Ranch Capital" for which you should be prepared.

If you're after ranch life only, six Wickenburg ranches will still be offering some of the best. An accommodations list available from the Roundup Club, Wickenburg, Arizona, discloses typical rates to be around $14 a day up, including meals, ranch activities and, in most cases, horses. And it details those little variations in size, luxury, activities, and provisions for children, which enable you to select headquarters exactly to your liking. You can choose between the intimacy of elegant little Slash Bar K, for instance, accommodating only 22, and Los Caballeros, Wickenburg's newest and most lavish. The increasing popularity of this place has required two more radiant-floor-heat and private-sun-patio guest cottages this year, bringing the guest list up to 80. You'll learn that the Kay El Bar will not stretch its limited facilities to include children, but that others provide counselors, playrooms, dining rooms, and riding instructions for youngsters only. Remuda, the area's oldest, has also a credited ranch school, with grade-school curriculum integrated to schools back home, and coaching for older boys and girls.

The rare inter-ranch relations of Wickenburg will enrich your stay as usual. For instance, everybody, from every ranch, square dances in the Flying E's barn, leans on the fence at the rodeo at the M Bar V, or gets acquainted at the Cattle Rustlers' Ball. All hands participate in the spring desert rides put on for men by the Desert Caballeros, for women by Las Damas. And now they're all matching scores on the golf course, or over Cokes in its cool little club house. So important is this golf course that the Triangle W, although closed this winter, promises to reopen in 1952 with its acres on the golf-course side converted to an enlarged resort or to winter home sites for golf enthusiasts only.

Unfortunately, the Dixie-Dame family of relishes, pickles, jams, and jellies is far too large to present as a group. One and all are so outstanding that it's hard to decide which I shall cull from their ranks, which would hold the greatest interest to you. But, inasmuch as such a choice must be made, the Dixie-Dame group of stuffed gherkin creations is particularly apt. These delectable tidbits are truly unique. The artistic creations are originatively conceived to delight the eye and palate, and so handsomely arranged in their graceful array that you hate to disturb them. Yet, burr-gherkin halves provide the "cups" that hold the stuffings. I mention this to help you visualize each variety as I call its name and describe its stuffing.

Acorn is almond-stuffed, with half the almond peering over the top. It really looks like an acorn. Red Bud merges its cherry content with the holder in such a manner that it resembles a moss rosebud. Fluffy Dill, as its name implies, is dill-flavored, and the combination of gherkin shell and crystallized orange peel suggests the daffodil. Cornstone is centered with a cocktail onion. Olive style offers you a delicate pimento nugget. Cherry Blossom lets the rounded tops of a whole red cherry peek out. Lemon Fluff derives its name from the crystallized lemon-peel content.

Whole burr-gherkins provide the shells for two other creations that are even more unusual than what's gone before. One is Porcupine, lavishly stuffed with a superb relish given special delight by its crystallized-fruit content. Red picks are inserted through the stuffed shell to create the illusion of a porcupine and give you a way to hold on while you nibble. Or if you prefer, they can be served sliced. May-Pop has a piccalilli content and uses white picks that affix a garnish of wee, whole onions to the stuffed gherkin.

The flavorsome sauce that gives the stuffed gherkin shells their savor plays a mighty important part, whatever the stuffing. Just enough sweetness, the right amount of vinegar to give the sweetened gherkins zesty tang and subtle spicing for sparkle. Dixie-Dame even raises its own gherkins to assure their excellence.

Can't resist a postscript to bring Polka Dot into the picture, even though it doesn't belong to the gherkin group. Rather, it's an ever-so-crisp pickled artichoke, fashioned into a ball and studded with green capers and red pimento. Crunchy nibbling with a peppery verve that creeps up on you. Too delicious a morsel to be overlooked.

One and all of these creations, as well as Polka Dots, cost 80 cents for a 9½ ounce jar. If you can't find them in your local food shops, they can be ordered directly from Dixie-Dame Co., Statesville, N. C. Well-nigh impossible to choose between the delectable varieties. Dixie-Dame's samplers (three or six 5½-ounce jars) are one solution. Beautifully boxed, should you want to use them as gifts.

The patrons of the famous Colonial Inn in Plainville, Massachusetts, are responsible for the availability of one of the finest salad dressings I've ever encountered.

Before its recent arrival on the open market, patron after patron asked if they could have a bottle of the dressing served them to take away or to have mailed to a friend.

Mr. Gundlach, the Inn's genial proprietor, drafted into service whatever containers were available, to accommodate his guests. He told me that a request for two gallons of the dressing, no less, from a frequent patron who wouldn't take "no" for an answer, finally made him decide that he might as well make a business of it. In the short time that has ensued since then, his dressing venture has grown by leaps and bounds. When you taste Gundlach's French Herb Dressing for yourself, you'll know why.

Although it's been put on a commercial basis so far as the bottling is concerned, Mr. Gundlach and his wife prepare the dressing themselves. For one thing, the recipe (28 different ingredients are involved) is a family secret; for another, he is unwilling to entrust the formulation to anyone else. He's afraid they won't handle the herbs and the blending of the various ingredients properly. This much of its content he reveals: the finest grade of Spanish olive oil, fresh lemon juice, egg yolks incorporated as a stabilizer and to enhance the adherence of the dressing to the salad greens, imported Roquefort cheese (incorporated in such a manner that you don't see it or get its flavor as a separate entity). These, and whatever other ingredients are present, merge so superbly that they become a scintillating, rich-flavored bouquet, delicate, yet with great zest and a peppery undertone that you're not aware of on first taste. A faint breath of sweetness to mellow the lemon, and a touch of garlic, I'd say. I'll leave further sleuthing up to you. Anyway, the delectable end result — not the ingredients — is what really matters.

Several of the Inn's salad recipes accompany the dressing. In their own kitchens, aside from its salad roles (a lobster salad dressed with it is one of the Inn's stellar attractions), the dressing serves as a marinade and sauce for meats, seafood, and fish; even as a flavoring agent for sauces and gravies. Not inexpensive, but what we have told you above makes obvious the reason for its cost of $1.50 for the 16-ounce bottle. From Charles & Co., 340 Madison Ave., New York.

gional cakes of entirely differ-character hail from Blue Hill,
ine. Actually, regional is not an Continental delicacies like these rees Pavilion, a creative-arts ld famed for their beautiful tery and hand-woven creations.

Although a different sort of arry is involved in the execution their delectable Paradise Bars, ndy Cake, and Danish Cardamon
Cake, it's artistry no less. Truly delectable creations. Paradise Bar is an Austrian torte, filled with caramelized brown sugar, based with a short-as-can-be pastry. My very special pet of the group, I frankly admit: perhaps, because I have such a sweet-tooth. Rich-as-rich, and so captivating you want to consume it wholesale but find that its richness soon precludes that desire. The box contains 16 giant bars that go a long way, as you've surmised from what I've said. $1.85 for the box.

Candy Cake is Armenian in origin, a traditional festival cake. A thin, torte-like cake, like Paradise Bars, but spicier in flavor, with a candy-like crust. Not as rich as Paradise Bars, but no less unusual or delicious. The box contains the same number of bars, and it, too, costs $1.85.

Danish Cardamon Cake is a type of pound cake, richly stocked with currants and grated orange, and fortified to perfection with the cardamon's bouquet. Delicious toasted or spread with orange marmalade, cream cheese, or whatever, sandwich-fashion as a tea accompaniment. The 1½-pound loaf costs $2.50.

A French pound cake, Fruit Bread, Pain d'Epice, and Coronation Fruit Cake are also available from Rowantrees Pavilion, Blue Hill, Maine, but unfortunately, at this writing I haven't made their personal acquaintance. Chances are, however, that they're no less outstanding than the others.

As truly typical of regional New England food, as the foregoing is untypical, is Wood's Clam Bisque. It's a rich-flavored concentrate, formulated from a recipe created by Sidney Wood, the founder of Skipper's Deck, a shore-dinner wharf in Noank, Connecticut, that's widely known for its seafood delicacies. Chopped clams, clam juice, salt pork, dairy butter, and a hint of spicing unite to create its delicious flavor. You simply add a quart of milk per can, simmer the merger for 15 minutes or so in a double boiler. You wouldn't believe that the end result hadn't started from scratch right on your own range. A mighty apt midnight snack or main dish for Sunday-night supper. Contents of can plus milk yields 6 servings of hearty, wonderfully flavored soup. Three of the cans cost $1.50, from The Krebs, Westerly, Rhode Island.

Obtainable from the same source, is an offering, very far removed from regional foods, for this one hails from England. How things get around! It's a group of exceptionally fine canapé pastes: shrimp, lobster, anchovy, kipper. Two of the 4-jar sets cost $2.35.

Although Claridge Meat Balls with Spaghetti Sauce have been around for a while, somehow I caught up with them only recently. Glad that I did, too, not only for broadcasting but for personal reasons. Spaghetti sauces can be had, but if the added attraction of meat balls is wanted, you have to supply them on your own, normally; and often there isn't time to get involved with that project when there's need to whip up a fast meal. These are so tasty and feathery, it's scarcely worth bothering to make your own, even when there's time. The savory sauce is flavored to perfection, too. Spaghetti of your choice, cooked to the degree you like best, and dressed with the can's contents (8 meat balls in the sauce), and a dousing of Parmesan, speedily yields a tasty main-course. Anyone partaking of it would think he had started with the raw ingredients. 11½-ounce can affords two generous servings. The cost is 53 cents, and you should be able to find it in your local markets.

It's only right in sleuthing for foods that all can enjoy to keep an eye out for specialized ones that help in some small measure to give eating pleasure to those who must subsist on foods low on, or free of, sugar or salt, as the case may be.

The Ocean Spray Cranberry Association of Hanson, Massachusetts, has made a contribution on that score in the form of Dietetic Cranberry Sauce, specially formulated to provide a cranberry sauce for those who cannot have sugar or sodium. The absence of sugar from its make-up makes it equally a for those on low-calorie diets. T sweetening agent is Abbott's s caryl Calcium. It's a semi-flu sauce with the crushed cranberr in it. There's a slight dimming the cranberry's fruity flavor. I otherwise you'd hardly know from conventional cranberry sau The fact that its consumption limited to the dieter makes t 5½-ounce size of the can a ve good feature.

Having singled out a food vised especially for dieters, it see to be a fitting moment to sin out one especially created for t menfolk—an unusual, and very fi Indian smoked salmon, to be exa There's no reason in the wo why the womenfolk can't get on the act, or why their enjoym of the tasty eating it affords w be any less than that of the m culine contingent. However, seems that Sportsmen's Canne which prepares the smoked-f chunks, aren't too much interes in whether females approve of or its packing.

When I say chunks, I mean j that. You are instructed to sl it at an angle. I hasten to add, I you've summarily decided that Cannery expects you to chaw at chunks. Slice it and eat it, just is, although if you like smok salmon more soft and moist th the one in question, marinating briefly in oil does the tri It's browner than conventio smoked-salmon because it is l kory-smoked over real hickory lo The smoking makes it quite usual in flavor. Gets my vote. T fish keeps almost indefinitely. T chunks average about 14 oun and come to you in cellopha envelopes. Six of them cost from Sportsmen's Cannery, Ya Harbor, Berkeley, California.

You can stinguish three main types among ese filling soups:

Soups that are based on meat ck, with meat that can be en along with the soup. The ench pot au feu is the best ex-ple of this type. Our old-fash-ed chicken pot pie really belongs this group.

Vegetable soups, built on an or salt pork base, plus a mix-e of chopped vegetables, such onions, carrots, and celery owned in the pot. This type of p belongs to Italian cookery. A od example of which is the Tus-n minestrone.

Fish soups that are complete food dishes. The best example the Provencal bouillabaisse, de famous in Marseilles. Our w England fish chowders belong der this classification.

These three were practically the ly types of soup used until ite modern times. Then the idea se that a meal should consist of series of dishes aimed at the ogressive satisfaction of the appe-e, instead of being the hodge-dge of unrelated dishes which de up the Medieval meal. In the w set-up, soups are an introduc-n or overture to the meal, some-ing to whet the appetite and at same time give a hint as to at is coming. Obviously, a soup signed for such a function could t be a whole meal in itself.

As a result of this evolving of the nu as we know it, the French ute cuisine developed two types soups for opening courses: thin ups and thick soups. Thin soups e all based on stock or broth, ich when clarified is called either bouillon or consommé. (These terms can be used interchangeably.) In French cookery stock is composed of meat juice and water. The haute cuisine did not recognize vegetable juice and water as a stock, although French peasant cooks do and so do we Americans.

The thick soups created by the haute cuisine are divided into three classes: purées, which are self-explanatory, veloutés and crèmes.

Veloutés are based on white stock (made of chicken and veal) thickened with cream and egg yolks.

Crèmes are based on white stock, milk, and cream. They contain no egg yolks. Many soups are combinations of these three types. Although they are called thick soups, they should never be thicker than thin cream, for they are designed to be the opening of a course dinner, not to be the main course themselves. If you use them in a soup-salad-dessert combination, all you will succeed in doing is create a meal with a beginning and an end, but from which the middle appears to have dropped out.

If you want a big soup to be the main part of your meal, you can disregard these haute cuisine practices for the most part. But never discard the principles they developed for making good stock. For, if a hearty soup is to please us moderns, it must be based on a rich stock, regardless of whether it be meat, fowl, or fish, or a combination thereof. But in addition to the richness of the stock, we moderns want a filling soup to be loaded with solids which have not been cooked to death. This really indicates a departure from old-fashioned cooking methods.

In old-fashioned recipes, the soup meat has generally had most of the flavor cooked out into the stock. If you are making a meal of the soup, this leaves you with a "watered down" meat course. So if your aim is a filling soup in which the solids are as delicious as the liquids, your course is quite clear. The flavor of the liquid must not be "stolen" from the flavor of the solids.

How to get rich stock without stealing it from the rest of the ingredients? There are ways to get it:

1. The first obvious one is to make it yourself by buying soup

WHAT THE AMERICAN STYLE HOUSE LOOKS LIKE

WEST

The fireplace has risen in our affections in almost the same proportions as modern heating equipment has made it thermally obsolete. In this house, it is the characteristic focus around which the whole room revolves—not as the tidy, axial dictator of Victorian days but as a big, generous echo of mountain cabins or Western ranches.

WEST

Vertical board-and-batten walls are as old in American houses as the first sawmills. They were such a quick, efficient method of exterior sheathing that they were adopted from coast to coast, wherever the wood was available. They established a vigorous vertical pattern which is still a basic part of our architectural vernacular.

EAST

Here, as in the western house, the fireplace is on an inner wall to suggest security, enclosure. But here, as in the skylight opposite, the glazed gable end permits a glimpse of sun and sky. Here also you see big expanses of polished floor. These introduce a note of elegance never found in their mud or hand-hewn plank prototypes.

EAST

This front door is like its western counterpart in several important respects—it is ample in size, unpretentious in conception, simplicity itself in the materials it uses. Here again rough-sawn batten walls, this time combined with brick paving, echo the past without in any sense trying to recreate or imitate it.

meat and soup bones. But that is slow, hard, time-consuming, and too much trouble for many people, though it will probably always be a good way to get what you want.

2. Use a canned stock. There are countless broths and bouillons made of beef, chicken, and fancy fowl. Campbell's Beef Bouillon, used diluted or undiluted is an example. There are a number of chicken soups (without rice) which make ideal soup stock. And there are fancy ones made of pheasant and mallard duck, which can do wonders for turning ordinary ingredients into super-gastronomic experiences.

You need to experiment and try a number of brands in order to find the one with the richest stock. For, if you are buying canned soup as an ingredient in making another recipe, you have to be aware of its strength, though they list the ingredients. Since the proportion of the meat to the water is the essential thing, shopping for a brand with richness is quite worth the trouble. Or you can add a little raw meat, chopped to cook quickly, if you don't find a canned stock rich enough to suit you.

3. Add a concentrate. We are not talking about a condensed soup but a real concentrate. The most commonly known are chicken and beef concentrate. It's one way to step up and enrich a too-thin and watery stock.

4. Mix 2 or more canned soups to fortify and enrich each other and to make the stock to which you can add tasty solids.

Assuming that you can make or find or combine a good stock, the next step is adding what the French call the "garnishes," which is everything else that goes in. If you are using canned ingredients, the trick

WHY ONE MAN GARDENS

"I get more kick out of growing things than from any hobby I've tried—golf, fishing, hunting. There's real adventure in gardening. You always feel young when you watch a seed grow," says Gene Pfister.

Gene Pfister is a rotund, affable fellow. He is one of the two partners of the big Hankel-Pfister Printing Company in Chicago. He's also America's best-known amateur gardener.

Pfister gardens simply because it is fun. Consistent with his philosophy that gardening is for fun, Pfister admits to being quick to let power tools do the real work in his garden. He owns a power mower, a small garden tractor with all of its attachments, and a power sprayer. He also has a tool-house full of gadgets. He expects to add a power lawn edger, a soil shredder, and a leaf grinder.

And he adds, "I've never been able to convince myself that there is any fun in mowing grass. It's just a chore to me, so why include it in your gardening? I hire a couple of high school kids and turn them loose with the power mower."

Pfister also refuses to devote any time to trimming hedges. He substituted fences for privacy when he planned the present garden. "I've trimmed my last hedge!" he says.

This same philosophy makes the Pfister garden expand—or contract—as his interest in gardening changes from year to year. When any plant gets to be a boring care to him he discards it in favor of something new.

Fortunately, Mrs. Pfister, who likes to have a yard full of flowers, doesn't care what kinds the flowers are. She also enjoys working in the garden, but the scientific angles that fascinate her husband do not appeal to her. She can and does talk about gardening before garden clubs when her husband's business prevents him from keeping a speaking engagement, but it is an acquired achievement rather than the thoroughly enjoyable experience Pfister finds it. He usually meets with some garden group every week. He's rated as one of the most enthusiastic and helpful speakers.

Pfister usually spends at least a few minutes in his own garden any night that he is at home, but he denies that he is a perfectionist. As far as he is concerned there's always a tomorrow for gardening, because he's gardening strictly for fun. He always stops before his gardening becomes work.

Pfister finds he has a much more objective attitude toward business problems when he thinks about them while gardening. At other times he lets himself get completely engrossed in thinking about the garden and the miracle of the seed. He refuses to worry about garden troubles. There's always another year if pests get ahead of him on some bed of flowers. And where is the fun if you worry about the weather?

But he is rarely alone in the garden for long. The Pfister's granddaughter, Judy, is intrigued by gardening, too

Pfister garden in Mundelein, Illinois, is a mecca for amateur gardeners from all over America. Each year more than 2,000 people visit it. They come to ask questions, to say hello again, or just to look. No one goes away without a greeting from one of the Pfisters.

"Visitors are wonderful. They let me proudly display my best—or rationalize my failures. Visitors help make gardening more fun."

The Pfister garden is worth driving miles to see. It contains 2,000 rose plants of some 600 varieties, plus remarkable collections of lilies, dahlias, chrysanthemums, delphiniums, gladiolus, and tuberous begonias.

Visitors often think it peculiar that with these hundreds of flowers around him, it rarely occurs to Pfister to pick any. His family is amused that, when he does pick a flower for a visitor, it is usually on the verge of fading. When kidded about this idiosyncracy, Pfister laughs and says he must keep the best flowers on the plants for tomorrow's visitors. Actually, it hurts Pfister to see any flower cut. It is only when the thrill of competition at a rose show lures him that he can cut flowers without pain.

Mrs. Pfister defers to her husband by having only a single rosebud in the house. She gladly gives flowers for community affairs, cut when her husband isn't around.

Asked why he specializes in roses, Pfister replies simply, "Because I love them best." He thinks they are the most adaptable flower that man grows. His fondest dream in gardening is some day to create the ideal rose, one with great resistance to climate and pests, an interesting bush shape, and a breath-taking beauty of bloom. He has such a rose in the "almost good enough" stage, but it has too many thorns. He believes so thoroughly that gardening should be fun that he is not willing to introduce a badly thorned rose. Growing roses is no fun if you can't get near your plants for the thorns, he will tell you.

His interest in breeding a new super rose led Pfister to want a greenhouse. So seven years ago the family agreed to move out from suburban Highland Park to three acres in Mundelein, Illinois. It was undeveloped except for trees and a lawn close to the old house. Much of the lawn was solid quack grass. It was a low area needing hundreds of feet of drain tile.

his wall, must suggest the machinery with which his whole life is to be concerned. His housing should be standardized, and the ant-like community in which he is living should be glorified by stressing supposed aesthetic delights of the machine and the art which initiates it. Anything which imitates a natural object—a blossom, a tendril or a butterfly—is dangerous. It might suggest to him that his real kinship is with such things. It might even inspire him to insist that he, too, should lead a life, instead of merely going around and around between the cogs on either side.

There are not many simple, direct things which we can do to protect ourselves against the forces which are conspiring to rob us of our humanity. Insofar as they are political and economic they are not immediately or visibly affected by our arguments or our votes. But in our private lives—or at least in what is left of them—we can assert and cultivate our sympathy with what is alive rather than with what is lifeless. We can live in houses which co-operate with the landscape instead of defying it. dress ourselves in fabrics whose colors and patterns announce the fact that natural objects are pleasing to us. And when we choose a picture for the wall or an object for the mantelpiece or table, we can ask ourselves whether or not it expresses our true taste or is merely an acquiescent nod in the direction of a fashion that is subtly if not consciously attempting to deny that we are organisms rather than machines.

IN OUR culture we are still, lingeringly at least, children of the Renaissance: and the art, as well as the philosophy of the Renaissance, was a declaration of the fact that man is, above everything else, a part of nature. This is the most significant meaning of its particular kind of artistic realism. It glorified, first of all, the form of the human body and after that, all other natural forms, whether of plant or animal or landscape. The question now is whether we shall continue that tradition, or whether we shall turn our backs upon it and attempt to use, as the elements of our expression, forms which were not created by the forces of life and growth.

The question, moreover, is not merely an aesthetic one. It is also the question where our heart The answer which we give to an affirmation of our belief we are essentially an organis the one hand or a machine o other. Neither the totalitarian losophy nor the mechanistic of man will have triumphed pletely as long as either is d even in art. The time may when the choice of a pictu recognized to be what the t tarians like to call "a pol act." Perhaps, though we hardly aware of it yet, it is already.

OUR forefathers were in no ger of forgetting that they dependent upon nature and w part of it. No man who clears ests, grows crops, and tends c is. He sees his food coming u of the ground and when he w travel farther than he can wall calls upon a living four-footed ture for aid. But unless our ci ation should be destroyed as pletely as the gloomiest pro of the atomic age sometimes dict, we shall never again be dominantly a rural people an would not want to be. What can give us is very much w having, and the machinery o industrial society is merely a lection of tools. Nevertheless, physical as well as our spir dependence upon nature is m obscured not abolished, and t unaware of that fact is to b naively obtuse as the child supposes that cows are no lo necessary because we now get from bottles.

In the early stages of mec ized civilization no one though mechanics as a threat to the of man. The machine was too viously an alien, though a us contrivance. The threat did arise until we began to be awed by the lifeless things w we had created and to wors rather than merely to use, tools. Science and psychology gan to talk about the "body chine" and the "brain mach just about the time when we gan to be more and more awar the artificial rather than the ural environment.

reau would call a "natural life." And since not every man has the temperament of a camper, it is not likely that most people will periodically take to the woods. But there are other ways in which even the urban dweller, not fortunate enough to have his country home, can remain aware, at least in the important back of his mind, of the fact that his true place is somewhere in nature.

THE more complicated life becomes the more important is the part that symbols play, and all the arts, including the arts of architecture and decoration, are the products of symbolic acts. To plant a garden, a window box, or even to cultivate a house plant is to perform a sort of ritual and thereby to acknowledge, even in the middle of a city, one's awareness that our real kinship is with life, not with mechanism. To hang a picture or to choose a design or a color may be, only a little more remotely, the same thing.

It may be upon such rituals that our fate will ultimately depend. Organisms are rebellious, individual, and self-determining. It is the machine which is manageable and obedient, which always does the expected and behaves as it is told to behave. You can "plan" for it as you cannot plan for anything which is endowed with a life of its own, because nothing which is alive ever wholly surrenders its liberties. Man will not surrender his unless he forgets that he, too, belongs among the living things.

Have it elegant. Have it feminine. Don't crowd it. Ninety per cent of the people who visit you will be women. They always bring a lot of stuff to spread about."

Perhaps she was right. I took her advice anyway for I was paying her good money for it. It sort of worried me, though, the way she talked about all the different

An example of organic design in furniture is this drop-leaf table in which a structural element—the wooden hinge—also forms the decoration. Designed by George Nelson for Herman Miller Furniture Co.

When the form, color, texture of an object are derived from the materials out of which it is made, without applied ornament or concealing finish—with no attempts to make the material look like what it isn't—then you call the design organic. (Famous big bridges are organic in design because their beautiful webs of steel cables are a direct expression of structural necessity. The Windsor chair is organic for the same reason. The houses of Frank Lloyd Wright are organic constructions because their modeling, color, and texture come directly from the structural elements themselves.)

Obviously the objective of organic designing is to produce beauty—simple, honest, straightforward, functional beauty. You will find this in many forms of Modern.

Thus, you will like some forms of Modern. But not all Modern designs could be said to be organic, for many designers are motivated by a desire to design within narrow stylistic dogmas—trying harder to satisfy preconceived sets of ideas about how a thing should look, than to achieve a perfect marriage between good looks and function.

Common sense is your best tool for discriminating between these two types of design. And to further aid you in developing a critical style sense, read "How to Develop a Critical Style Sense" on page 286. And read "Have You Caught on Yet?" by Joseph Wood Krutch on page 221.

Perimeter system is used with concrete floor slabs. Here warmed air is discharged from furnace bottom into network of ducts imbedded in concrete. Air flows out to perimeter, warming slab in process, then flows up into room through floor registers. Exhaust system is identical to that of plenum system.

Plenum system is ideal for frame houses. Centrally placed down-flow furnace discharges heated air into sealed excavation under floor. Air spreads out toward insulated foundations, warming floor in process, then flows up into rooms through floor registers. Cooled air is sucked back into furnace top for re-heating.

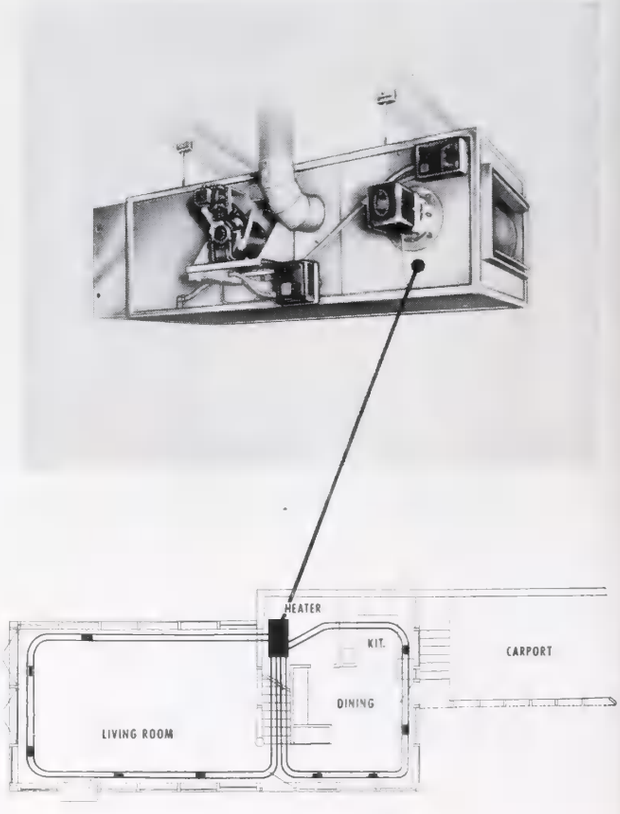
outer edge of the whole house and are therefore called perimeter heating. Both the Fitch house (pages 210 to 220) and the Carmel house (pages 234 to 239) use this type of heating.

In the second case, floor construction is conventional wood plank on wood joists, with a 2-ft. crawl space below. By sealing the bottom of this space and insulating all outside walls, a dry, dustproof cavity is created. Heated air from the furnace is blown into this space, called a plenum by heating engineers. It warms the whole floor and converts it into a radiant panel for the room above.



But in both the perimeter and plenum systems only a portion of the house-heating job is done by these warmed floors. The rest is accomplished by discharging this warmed air into the rooms themselves through floor registers all around the outside walls. And it is this double-action heating—first the floor, then the room air itself—which makes these two systems so attractive.

They are much quicker to respond to abrupt weather changes than the more familiar hot-water coils. Here's why: It takes a l time to heat up or cool dow concrete slab. So the less h you have to put in it, the quic it will respond to your thermos Since the perimeter system mer warms the floor and does the m of the heating job with room itself, it is more flexible than radiant systems using hot water.

There are other advantages perimeter and plenum heati however. They're less expens than systems using hot water steam. They are no more expens than ordinary forced warm ai and give more even temperat distribution.

Finally—and this is import in the light of new government strictions described by Mr. Col on page 241 of this issue—t use a minimum of metal. Inste of the now severely-limited st wrought-iron, or copper pipes quired by all hot-water and ste systems, they use a minimum light sheet metal ducts. Have Tomorrow's Heat—Today

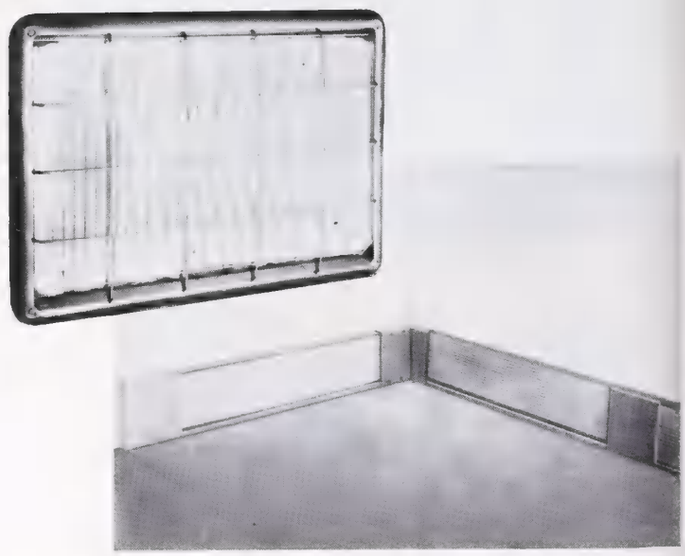
Called by some the heat of the future, electricity is already a practical heating medium for many parts of the country

SEEMS like every time you turn around these days, somebody's sounding off about a revolutionary new kind of heating. Electric heating, for instance. So how does a homeowner, who can't tell an ampere from a degree day, make head or tail out of all this?

Well . . .



Everybody knows the portable electric heater, used in bathrooms the country over. These have always been handy things for the cold spot in the house. But what we're talking about here are new electric heating systems for your entire house—no other fuel but electricity. Generally speaking, there are three types of systems for you to consider:

1. Large radiant panels—to form ceilings and occasionally sections of wall. These come as structural panels much like wall board, or as paper-thin metal sheets that go up just like wallpaper. They give you gentle radiant heat. Surface temperatures vary from around 105° F. to 120° F. or so. The panels, being thin, respond very quickly to a call for heat. Slowness here is the biggest advantage of older radiant tems, like hot water pipes in a crete slab floor.

2. Glass panels—these smaller, hotter, more concentr heat sources that give a somev smaller percentage of radiant (heating the air somewhat mo They are handy in new const tion, and are eminently suit for remodeling.

3. Electric heating cables build into floors, walls, or ings. Installations may be desig to give somewhat faster respo than hot water, but are perh still best suited to temperate mates like the Pacific Northw where temperatures neither sl up nor drop suddenly. You arrange to have these surface t peratures: floors from 80° 85° F.; ceilings up to 125°

There are already many adv tages to heating by electricity any form: You don't need a nace or a basement or uti room to hide the contraption No pipes. No chimney. No o flame. You don't have to wo

Let's face it, though: The cost of electric heating is still pretty painful in most areas. Installation costs should logically be very moderate. With the glass heaters you should have no trouble. They're easy to install anywhere. But the new panels may be expensive. This depends upon who wins the jurisdictional dispute in your area over who installs the system—electrician or heating man—and just how logical he wants to be about your pocketbook. Improbable as it may seem.

The A B C's of Hydro-Flo* Heating

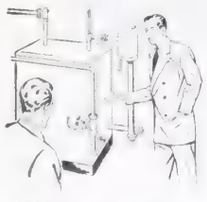
A simple explanation of why this forced hot water system can provide so much comfort on so little fuel

RADIANT WARMTH AS SOOTHING AS SUNSHINE

B & G Hydro-Flo Heating requires just three basic units. They can be installed on any hot water heating boiler, new or old.

First, the Booster Pump. When the thermostat calls for heat, the Booster rushes hot water through the system. Heat is supplied instantly and smoothly modulated to meet every change in outdoor temperature!

That's why B & G Hydro-Flo Heating costs so little to operate. It matches fuel consumption to weather conditions.



YEAR 'ROUND HOT WATER

Next, the Flo-Control Valve. It shuts off circulation when there is no call for heat. This prevents overheating—helps keep your home at a uniform temperature.

And finally, the Water Heater—heated by the same boiler that heats the house. It provides all the hot water you can use for kitchen, laundry and bath—winter and summer!

With B & G Hydro-Flo Heating you have a choice of baseboard panels, convectors, radiators, or concealed radiant panels. Ask your architect or heating contractor.

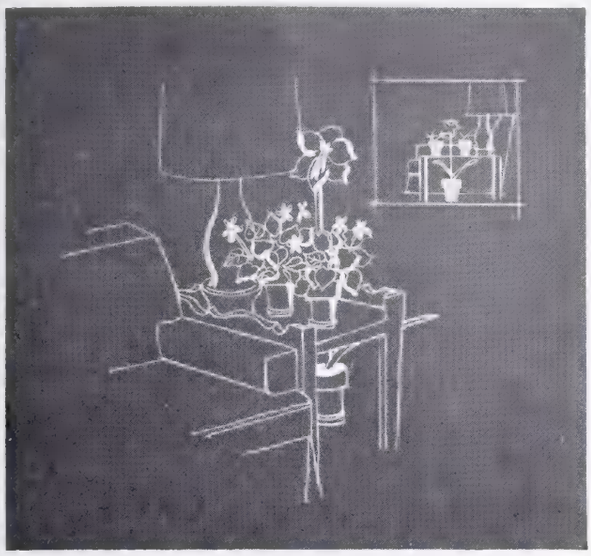
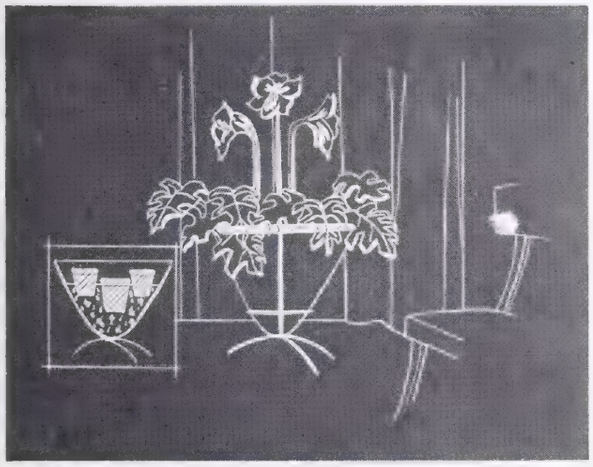
How to decorate your home with AMARYLLIS

The trick is to reduce apparent height of the amaryllis flower stalk so that it seems less ungainly. You hide the pot to conceal the big, half-exposed bulb

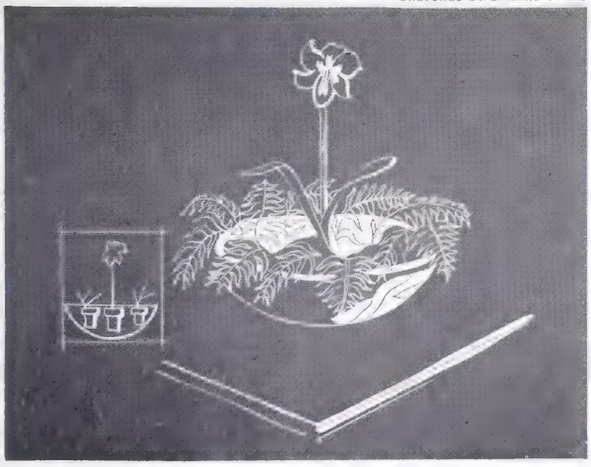


See Pages 240 and 241



Slip your amaryllis down into the planting well of a low table and surround it with pots of African violets set on the table. Choose African violets with thick, upstanding leaves prominently notched along their edges for the most dramatic display.

Any plant looks shorter when viewed from above. So place your amaryllis on the floor. Surround them with potted ferns to further cut their apparent height. Amaryllis need sunlight to bloom, but do well away from windows once blossoms open.



Sometimes your amaryllis shoot up so tall that your best showmanship idea is to set the pot on the floor behind an end table to make the amaryllis appear to grow from a pot on the table. Cluster around it pots of a small plant, such as African violet.

Now that handsome large architectural clay pots are available, you can create flower shows that capitalize on the scale of your biggest amaryllis. Partially fill the container with sand and arrange the amaryllis pots as suggested. Add potted ferns.

SKETCHES BY EDWARD VOLZE

Your large wooden salad bowl provides a striking way to show off your prize amaryllis. Line the bowl with green waxed paper. Set your amaryllis, still in its pot, in the center. Add potted ferns to get the proper scale of greenery for the arrangement.

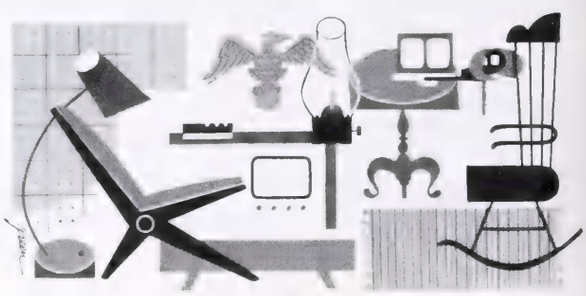
How to develop a Critical Style Sense

You can develop taste and judgment if you know from what these things are compounded. This brief statement tries to tell you. We hope you'll read it several times

By The House Beautiful Staff

There are two ways of judging any object. First, from the standpoint of use: the way it works, how it functions. This is social criticism. The second way is from the point of view of design. This deals with its looks, its form. This is art criticism. Operating together, these two kinds of judgment combine to give us the concept of style.

For style is that form which expresses the innate character of the thing. Style is the total result of many elements integrated together. Style is the form taken by all the innate characteristics of a thing. Style is the expression of all the characteristics of an object: the materials, the fabrication, the colors, the plan, the elevation, the performance. Style is the result of the perfect integration of all these. A principle, working in a particular situation, develops a characteristic form which is style.



If a thing has even a few characteristics which are out of character, then it cannot be said to have style.

In nature use and design, function and form are so closely interwoven as to be one thing. The markings in a leopard's coat are designed to camouflage his attack: those of a zebra, to camouflag escape. In both cases, form function are inseparable. In made objects, this is seldom case. We come closest to it, ably, in airplanes and ships, a very high degree of integr has been achieved, and they be said to have style to a very and marked degree. But in machines, there is no "margi error." They simply have to form well and we have to a our ideas of how they should accordingly.

From the standpoint of use criticize a table's strength, h surface qualities, such as ea cleaning; suitability of surfa functions performed, such as ing or writing; lightness; ea getting your legs under it; o other quality needed for the ticular use to which the tal to be put.

The odd thing is that it ca fill all these and yet still be from the standpoint of looks.

From the standpoint of you criticize its proportion of to whole, and the proportio the mass. You see the size legs in relation to the top y the relation of its size to the of the room in which it is to laced and the size of the peo- who are to use it. You analyze elation of the ornament to the ornamented, and the relation- of the ornamented part to parts which are plain. You to see whether the ornament asizes a structural feature of able or hides it, or negates it. look at it from the structural point, whether the structure lden, emphasized or disguised. look at it from the standpoint xture, of color, of the relation een colors and textures.

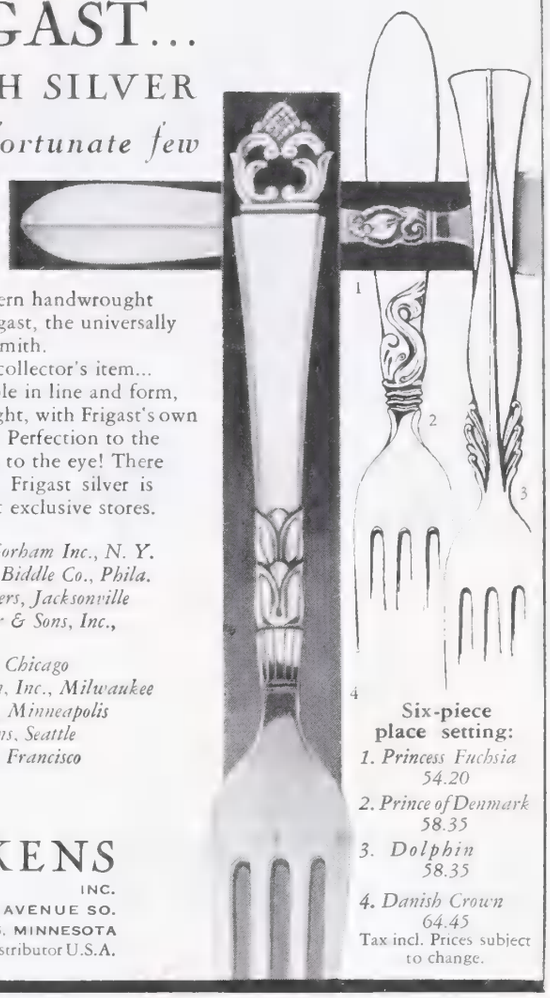
the visual qualities of the are the result of the innate ities of the structure, the ma- l, or the use, you say the table style.

COURSE, this too is ultimately social criticism, since each re has its own ideas of how a should look. The old Chinese, example, lived on or near the Hence, their eating tables low and lightweight for easy ng. But they had another t for wall tables and these, they were not moved very , were much heavier.



e striving of all art is to unite the form and the function the way they're united in nature, to make one expressive of the other. This integration is the mark of true style.

In a house, style is the way we want to use it, the things we want it to do for us, and the way in which we want them done, the way we want it to function—that is the use part of it. If we can make these use attributes take an expressive form, then we have a style. Our architects are beginning to succeed in giving expressive form to the attitudes underlying the American house, so consequently there is emerging an American Style in houses.

Most people do not understand the difference between the form and use aspects of a thing. They do not realize that an architect (or designer) works FORWARD from the use to the form—or that a critic works BACKWARD from the form to the use—that is, that he can look at a finished form and deduce the ideas which were behind it.

In architectural and design criticism it is necessary to clearly keep in mind the difference between form and use, and not make the mistake of using form words to describe use attributes.

CHOOSE LANDSCAPE PATTERNS

The new designs reflect nature as it comes.

The patterns themselves may be literal renderings or quite impressionistic sketches. But in either case they show a new realism of spirit, because they give you a sense of actually seeing, smelling, and feeling the plants as they really grow in the fields, the woods, or the backdoor garden.

Thus they have a closer affinity to the real scene beyond your glass walls than would any prize blossoms which few of us, after all, see more than half-a-dozen times in a lifetime.

The patterns shown on this page and on pages 194 and 195 are:

1. "April," a Saison Happily Married fabric, Charles Bloom, Inc., New York, New York.
2. "Leaf Shadow," a Waverly fabric, F. Schumacher & Co., New York, New York.
3. "Still Trees" hand-print Taffetique, designed by William Pahlmann, F. Schumacher & Company.
4. "Ming Tree," Kandell, Inc., New York, New York.
5. "Queen Anne's Lace," Cheney Bros., New York, New York.
6. "Bread Fruit," Goodall Fabrics, Inc., New York, New York.
7. "Fern," a Durafaille fabric, Mead & Montague, New York.
8. "Mushrooms," Cheney Brothers New York, N. Y.
9. "Autumn Leaves," Everfast Fabrics, Inc., New York, New York
10. "Bamboo" hand-print, Goldin Decorative Fabrics, New York.
11. "Hyacinth," Cyrus Clark Co. Inc., New York, New York.
12. "Botanica," Cheney Bros., New York, New York.
13. "Sunshine Flower" hand-print F. Schumacher & Co., New York
14. "Yellow Driftwood," a Jud Williams fabric, designed by Mario Dorn, Mitchell-David Co., Chicago Illinois.
15. "Staccato" linen, F. Schumacher & Co., New York.
16. "Dancing Leaves," a Berinoff & Bruflodt fabric, Stoffel's Decorative Fabrics, New York, New York
17. "Hawaii," Golding Decorativ Fabrics, New York, New York.
18. "Good Morning" screen-print Quaintance Fabrics, Inc., New York.
19. "Clover," Cheney Bros., New York, New York.
20. "Anderson," everglaze washable chintz, Kandell, Inc., New York, New York.
21. "Thor" cotton, Arundell Clarke New York, New York.
22. "Forest Line" by Dietrich Silkar Studios, Inc., New York.

kinds of people who visited us. I couldn't remember any guests we'd had for years except my mother and mother-in-law and one of my husband's salesmen, Joe Gascoyne, who couldn't get a reservation at a hotel.

"Maybe we should have more guests," I said to my husband one evening, not long after the paper hangers had left. "Our guest room is going to be lovely."

He stopped working on a clock case he was refinishing. "I wish you'd let me put this clock in your room. It's foolish for you to say you can't sleep where there's a clock."

"What about taking it to the guest room? Of course, it has personality, but—"

"Personality? I'll say it has personality. It's way over a hundred years old. But you've got an idea. I'll set it up in the guest room. We didn't have any timepiece in there when Joe Gascoyne spent the night with us and he almost missed his train."

The clock looked pretty big when we got it on the clock shelf in there, but I figured maybe other people wouldn't notice it so much.

As I look back on it, I believ that Hazel Sharpnack and I woul have had comparatively little tro ble getting the effect we wante in the guest room if it hadn't bee for my husband. He is a great or for going around to antique shop and sometimes he is so carrie away with a piece that he can resist buying it even though w don't need such an article at al That was the way it was with th whale oil lamps. We had whale o lamps in every room upstairs, b they were of a size where it wa impossible to get light bulbs j them that were large enough t read by. I had one on my bedsid table for a long time. When it g to the point where I was afraid was going to have to wear glasse for reading in bed. I took it t the guest room and told Hazel t order me a good reading lamp. M husband said most women woul appreciate old things like wha oil lamps.

In the meantime, my husband an I were having a little troubl arranging our pictures downstai because with the new paper the didn't look right the way we ha them before. There were a goo many left over when we finishe but we didn't want to give the up. We were looking at the pi tures that we couldn't find a pla for, and Amos was feeling a litt low-spirited (for one of the lef overs was an engraving of "Joh Gilpin's Ride"), when I thought something Hazel had told me.

"I'm not going to let you han those large maps of the world o the mantelpiece again." I sai "Hazel says the mantel is too hig anyway, and that we draw atte tion to its height with the maps

"If that's the case," my husban replied, "they'll have to go in th guest room."

"Oh, Amos, you can't put thos big, ugly things in the guest room.

"I like to see how the worl used to look. And I like to thin of Uncle Steve poring over thos same maps. You needn't try sneak them to the attic, for I wa them handy. Men have sentime about old things."

"Yes, but 90 per cent of ou guests are women and they don want a crowded room. We're goin to have so many different colo in there that Hazel will never b able to tie the room together."

"Tie it together? Why do w want to tie the room together?

"That's just an expression. Yo don't want a lot of unrelated o jects. You get two or three thing of one color in a room and th ties it together. You can have accents like the red French prints."

"Silliest thing I ever heard of."

"Well, maybe Hazel can tie the room together with the rug, if it ever comes. It's to be the color of the bedspread. Ceil blue."

BUT it was some time, maybe six weeks or longer, before Hazel Sharpnack came with the rug. I suppose in the meanwhile I had become used to the guest room and, of course, Hazel hadn't. She didn't say anything for a few minutes. Finally she put the rug, which was done up in heavy brown paper, on the floor and said: "You've added some things."

"Yes," I said. "A few." There was no use in denying it or trying to hide them for there she was, walking from one object to another, with me following her. We bumped into each other a good deal so I sat down on the bed. She looked at the framed sampler of "God Bless Our Home" that Amos had picked up in Ironton, Ohio, and smiled. "It's been a thousand years since I've seen one of those."

It made me nervous the way she was looking around, for after all she was our decorator and maybe I should have consulted her. She measured with a practiced eye the size of the marble-top table which we had placed under one of the windows so that a gaunt sanseviera plant could get the sun. She took in at a glance a modernistic table with a linoleum surface, decorated by an inlaid A. C., which an amateur woodworker friend had recently presented to Amos.

"Look," I said, "at this cute old walnut towel rack that Amos found in Chillicothe. Isn't it a dear?"

"Yes," she replied, "it is. But I'm afraid this picture of the signers of the Declaration of Independence sort of kills your French prints, being so close to them."

"You know how Amos is," I said. "He wouldn't let me take it to the attic. Nor the maps. Does it seem to you that 'Lee and His Generals' is too close to 'John Gilpin's Ride?' Or too low?"

She didn't seem to hear me because she was looking at the six bone dishes we had put around for ash trays and the sea shell with the seaweed growing out of it that Margarita Emmons had brought us from Seaside Park. She smiled a little as she fingered a couple of green china figures of boys in tri-

Our appreciation of nature is reflected in our homes in many different ways. It may appear in unique shapes like this driftwood used as a base for a free-form glass table in the apartment of Michael Taylor of Robert M. Kasper, San Francisco, Calif.

NATURE—
more than a style source

By Dr. Ralph Linton

Sterling Professor of Anthropology, Yale University

No one who studies the current trends in American living can doubt that a universal return to nature is under way.

It is reflected in more and more devotion to open-air living, in simpler clothing, in house planning and interior decoration and, above all, in an exodus from the cities. It is a movement which has been slowly gathering force ever since the turn of the century. While it owes something to European movements, its form is as American as pumpkin pie. Its emergence is a sign that we are coming of age.

The American pioneers did not love nature. They saw in it only a challenging enemy which called for all their skill and endurance. If they admired it, it was in the way that a matador admires a good bull. The men who pushed their way across the Alleghenies carried on a bitter feud with the trees and rocks. The settlers who followed them had been, for the most part, city workers and small shopkeepers. They had already lost the true peasant's love of the soil and his sense of kinship with growing things. They mined the land without thought of later generations and boasted of how many farms they had worn out before moving on.

In spite of occasional drought or tornadoes, nature had become from an enemy to a victim and they despised it accordingly. Their ablest sons went to the cities and in old age, they settled in towns by preference. To them the country meant labor and loneliness, the city leisure and entertainment.

When the return to nature came it was a purely American growth. The romantic European movement of the later Nineteenth Century which turned to nature as escape from the increasing complexity of modern civilization, never were able to take root here. These movements originated with urban intelligentsia who knew nothing of the discomforts of really living close to nature.

The pioneer period was still close enough for most Americans to have these clearly in mind. Americans began to love nature only when it could be done without serious loss of comfort. Their return to nature has been a return with mechanical improvements. It has been stimulated more by the utomobile and rural electrification than by authors' rhapsodies bout the birds and flowers, or doctors' treatises on the benefits of resh air and sunlight.

If one casts about for the beginnings of the present back to ature movement, the trail leads oward the summer cottage. This vas instituted as a hot-weather efuge for women and children. Good husbands packed their families off to the seaside or mountains t the beginning of the hot weather while they themselves went on working in the city. Their only iew of the great open spaces came when they arrived, grimy and wilted, on the Saturday afternoon pecial to spend Sunday taking are of the various chores which had been saved up for them and o return cityward in the gray dawn of Monday. As vacations became longer, so did husband's sojourns, but in the American return o nature, it was very definitely women and children first.

THIS fact has played a dominant role in shaping the whole movement. The changes which have accompanied it have been almost entirely in the women's and children's spheres of activity. Men are spending more time outdoors today than they did a generation ago, due largely to the popularity of golf, but they are doing it with a minimum of change in costume and in living habits off the links.

In the woman's world, on the other hand, the movement has taken modern mechanized housekeeping into the country, has changed manners and costume and has brought in new styles in interior decoration and housing. The last might be considered a part of the male domain since nearly all architects, builders, and carriers of mortgages are men. But few American husbands have the temerity to build without submitting every detail of the blueprints for their wives' approval.

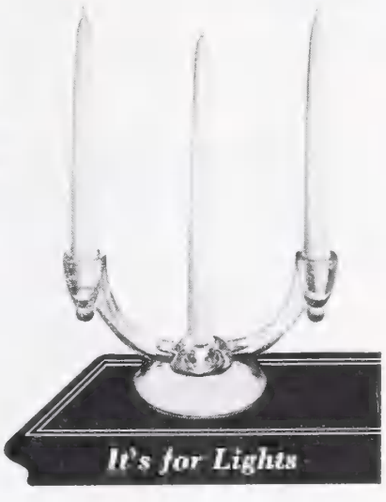
Farmers' wives accepted the inconveniences of wood stoves, pumps, lamps, and outdoor toilets as a matter of course. If anything, they were thankful that they no longer had to use candles and carry water from the spring. City women might be willing to put up with these things for three months in the year for the sake of cool nights and play space for the children, but they did not like them and wanted something done about it.

The first market for country conveniences and the strongest stimulus toward their continued improvement did not come from the year round country dwellers on the farms, but from the "summer people." The modern country house with independent power plant and array of mechanical aids to living stems from the summer cottage, not the farm house.

The summer cottage period also marked the beginning of the breakdown of nineteenth-century formal patterns of dress and manners. Although a few die-hards in the early summer colonies tried to retain the corsets and gloves of city respectability and to maintain the pattern of formal calls and afternoons at home, most women found it too much trouble. It was much simpler for neighbors to drop in casually on the way to the store or post office.

The earlier pattern of "dressing up" was more and more replaced by one of having clothes that were comfortable for work or for play and at the same time looked well. This has set a new problem for dress designers and one which is still imperfectly solved. Answers range from the play suit, with its minimal coverage and maximum freedom of movement, through slacks, still better adjusted to activity than to the normal female figure, to such recent developments as patio clothes with their full, loose skirts and romantic blouses and wide opportunities for the expression of individual taste.

To realize how much more women have been involved in the back-to-nature movement than men have, one need only contrast these changes with the timid masculine concessions of sport shirts and, rarely, shorts. For children, the clothing problem during the cottage period was usually solved by old dresses for the girls and overalls for the boys, with the laundry problem indicating that the fewer clothes, the better.



CLOSELY related to these revisions in patterns of dress and contributing to them in no small degree was a new attitude toward the sun. Pioneers and farmers got more than their share of sunlight and open air and, if they could not go into the house to rest, at least they sought a patch of shade.

The sun cult seems to have originated in Northern Europe where warm, sunny days are so rare that when they do occur, the natives long to throw off their clothes and gambol on the green. In the continental United States, most of which lies opposite North Africa, two or three hours a day outdoors and in ordinary costume will provide the average white person with all the actinic rays his system needs. A few doctors are already suggesting timidly that it is possible to get too much sun, but they go unheeded in a society which has made a coat of tan a symbol of prestige.

NATURE— MORE THAN A STYLE SOURCE

Since the turn of the century, Americans have been transformed from a nation of farmers into a nation of managers and mechanics. Most of the Americans who are gainfully employed today are employed indoors. The delicate complexion which our grandmothers admired and guarded has become a normal accompaniment of working behind a counter. A deep tan indicates that its wearer has been able to spend much time in the open, and presumably does not have to work for a living. A winter tan, since it usually costs more to acquire, is even more valued than a summer one.

REGARDLESS of the reason for our present worship of sun and open air, it has brought far-reaching changes in house design in its train. To the pioneer and farmer, a house was a place into which one retreated to get away from nature. Having spent the day outdoors in all too vigorous contact with sun and wind, he wanted to shut all that out when he crossed the threshold. Windows were small, for protection against cold, and in placing a house, the builder paid far more attention to shelter than to view.

Today, with nature thoroughly tamed and the open converted from a work area to a playground, there is an increasing desire to blend the house and the outdoors into a single coherent unit. Houses are designed to fit into their settings, their shape adjusted to the flowing patterns of hills and streams. Terraces, galleries, and picture windows blend inside and outside so that it is hard to tell where one begins and the other ends.

This sort of return to nature can exist in most parts of the United States, thanks to ever-improving insulation, heating systems and scientifically-planned Climate Control. But it is also, psychologically, a response to the desire of modern Americans to establish contact with the peace and certainty of changing seasons and growing thin

Our awakening awareness of t beauties of nature causes us to fi more beauty in natural concreti and sand-sculptured driftwood th in alabaster cupids or enamel glass. The Chinese and Japane discovered the fascination of su natural objects long ago. It is o more thing which we owe to t "summer people" with their i provised decoration and their c lecting instincts which made th hate to return from any str empty handed.

The people who set the stan ards for American living no long regard nature as an enemy or ev a source of income. Part of t attitude can certainly be traced the "summer people" pattern whi has bred in America a whole ge eration which associates natu with vacationing. Many America look back on summer childhoo spent in woods and fields or at t seashore as the happiest part their lives. At the same time, t actual conditions under which m of us have to live today make think of the country as a haven refuge.

In a time of widely advertis atom bombs and potential revol tions, and with memories of t last depression still vivid, people thoughts turn insistently towa some place of refuge. They drea of a country house to which th can retire if trouble begins in t city or if the current economic sy tem breaks down. They even a ticipate raising their own food wi the blithe optimism of those who agricultural experience has be limited to window boxes.

MORE realistically, the count house offers an opportunity f the rootless generation of city dwe lers to feel that they belong som where. The modern American e joys a degree of spatial and soci mobility unparalleled in any oth time or place, but he must pay f it in psychological insecurity an isolation.

The country house offers him a opportunity to sink roots into t soil. On his own land, he can fin relief from nervous tensions whi beset him equally in the office an in the night club. Watching t slow procession of suns and se sons, he can find peace in t thought that, whether or not w have inflation and no matter wh gets that advertising contract, ear and sky will endure. This attitud shapes his tastes, and will continu to do so as long as our prese social phase endures.

"Virtuoso of style"

writes Rachel Crothers about Jan Peerce

"If Peerce were a poet, he'd write like Keats; if he were an essayist, like Pater; if a novelist, like Conrad. Everything—no matter what—comes through with true style, as if he were born to it. Whether it is the bel canto of Mozart, the fervid devotion of a Hebrew cantor, or the charming sentiment of the Bluebird of Happiness, Peerce gives it out as if that song were made for him and he for the song. That's style!"

A BOOK FOR GARDENERS

Fun With Flowers by Julia Clements. My Garden, Ltd., and Guildford, Surrey, and Arthur Pearson, Ltd., London, W.C. 2. 1950. 144 pp.

America's art of flower arrangement still is a novelty in England. When Julia Clements of the English magazine, My Garden, visited the International Flower Show in New York a few years ago, her imagination was fired, and now she is imparting her enthusiasm to the women of England, who find in flower arrangement a needed relief from the rigors of their postwar life.

Her book should find a welcome among American women, too, for it is a friendly and encouraging volume which makes the artistic assembling of flowers not a baffling problem, even to a beginner, but a natural art and a rewarding pastime.

No rules are given, only three simple basic principles, and Miss Clements' own results, as shown in nearly 100 splendid photographs, are a delight to the eye. Additional pictures illustrate arrangements created by nine American women and by eight women who have exhibited in British shows.—C. H. W.

By accepting limitations such as these, we were led to the finished house you see here. They showed us that limitations are often assets, that aesthetic problems are often best solved at a down-to-earth practical level. And this is a most encouraging aspect of American design today—that it allows us really to see materials, old or new, natural or synthetic. And it permits us to select those that are most appropriate, not merely those that are most expensive.

But let me tell you how our economies were actually achieved. The first—and most significant—economy proved to be the fact that I didn't insist on conventional solutions. Prejudices and pre-conceived ideas are expensive, in architecture as elsewhere. Rigid ideas of how a wall should look, how a roof should slope, or how a window should be shaped may c you more. If you start at the otl end, as I did, by asking what wall or a window should do, yo get surprising answers as to wl it should look like.

Conventional walls and roo for example, have textures we all familiar with and fond of. I they are fairly expensive asse blies of many elements. There other ways of building, howev and I decided to try one of them the so-called "curtain wall" of skyscrapers. This consists of structural skeleton with the s facing stretched like a skin on outside. In my house, the ske ton is wood and the skin c sists of factory-made panels: p wood, plate glass, Celotex, Panel plastic panels, and "Cemesto"- weatherproof "sandwich" boa consisting of two sheets of ceme asbestos bonded to either side an insulating core of cane fib Since they all come in 4-f widths, the skeleton had to framed on a module: that is, vertical and horizontal memb had to be evenly spaced at 4 fe And since the panels were plac outside, to protect the skelet from the weather, an exposed sk eton inside resulted.

The skeleton is framed of richly weathered wood—not any romantic reason but becaus had a chance to salvage it and brick at a good price from an building near by.

This combination of old and r materials was thus dictated marily by economic necessity. A for reasons of economy, aga each material was left pretty mu as it came on the site. The wood was lightly sanded a waxed. Brick walls were mer washed down with diluted ac brick floors sanded and wax Wall panels were painted or pered only where color was quired: plywood was mostly wax Plastic panel boards were u where waterproofness and wa ability were required.

20TH CENTURY TRADITIONAL

It is made primarily of wood, though the makers of 20th Century Traditional have no prejudice against using metal wherever there's a good reason for it. But a significant element of this style is that its designers have shown more reverence for the natural beauties and properties of wood than their predecessors of some decades back. a design feature out of the grain of the wood.

These new "traditional" designs reveal no prejudice against the construction devices of the past if they serve the purpose as well as, or better than, recent inventions. There is nothing new about spindles, for instance, or about sawbuck legs or rush seats. But there has been no hesitancy about combining these with newer, simpler lines, and with new materials like foam rubber, new types of construction hardware, or the new synthetic finishes.

The essence of the 20th-century style is that it came into being, not through attempts to be different, but from efforts to make furniture that would do a better job for 20th-century living than anything that previously existed.

Not only the house and the furniture shown on pages 224 through 227, but also the fabrics, the floor coverings, and the accessories are typical of the "period" style of our times. Following is a list of all the 20th Century Traditional furnishings which appear in the photographs as well as the older pieces which harmonize with them:

are no dry chronological accounts of historical styles and periods. Instead, there are lucid explanations of the cultural influences that produced the styles and standards of the past, and of their relationship to modern living.

This is the kind of reading that helps you judge a style by its spirit rather than by its academic detail. It will make you realize that many of the ideas we call modern didn't originate this year.

None of these books preaches the gospel of any "school" of aesthetics. Nor will any of them teach you how to make a slipcover or give you a ready-made color scheme for your living room. They will give you basic principles. They will equip you with the ability to discriminate.

Once you have acquired the cultural background it takes to make a connoisseur, you will want to accumulate facts. You will want to consult "service" books that supply you with definitions and directions. That is the function of HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S reference list of 29 titles. They represent only a small fraction of all the books published during the last decade on the subjects of architecture, building, interior design, gardening, cooking and music. We have selected only those which reveal a comprehensive understanding of the whole subject of good living as well as of the specific aspects they treat.

You will probably want to add to this list, since we could not, for lack of space, cover every branch of the subject individually. We have not, for instance, included books on regional architecture, or special types of furniture design like that of the Shakers. Nor have we listed separate books on all the various furnishings materials like

House Beautiful's Eleven

EDMAN, IRWIN. Arts and the Man: a Short Introduction to Aesthetics. 144 pp. (a Mentor Book) New York: The New American Library of World Literature, Inc., 1949.

This "primer," by a distinguished contemporary philosopher, is the shortest route we know to an understanding of what delights us. Takes the arts—all of them from architecture to music—off their pedestal and treats them as experiences in daily living.

RICHARDS, J. M. An Introduction to Modern Architecture, revised and edited with new material by Elizabeth Mock. 128 pp. (a Pelican Book) Harmondsworth, Middlesex, England: Penguin Books Ltd., 1947.

The best short summary of what modern architecture is, and what it is not. Explains differences between today's manner of building and that of historical periods in terms of social forces and technologies, rather than style motifs. The only work of its type which adequately covers the contributions made by American architects, and the differences between contemporary expressions of various nations. (Copies are scarce at the moment, but patience to wait for additional shipments from England will prove well worth-while.)

GREENOUGH, HORATIO. Form and Function: Remarks on Art by Horatio Greenough, ed. Harold A. Small. With an Introduction by Erle Loran. 134 pp. Berkely and Los Angeles: University of California Press, 1947.

Eight essays by a 19th-century sculptor who is repeatedly cited as the philosophical grandfather of contemporary design in America. He predated modern "functionalists" by almost a century.

HUDNUT, JOSEPH. Architecture and the Spirit of Man. 301 pp. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1949.

A witty but highly rational evaluation of the place of architecture in our contemporary civilization. The Dean of Harvard's Faculty of Design soundly trounces the li tic fringes of both traditional and modernism.

WRIGHT, FRANK LLOYD. An Aut ography. 560 pp. New York: Du Sloan and Pearce, 1943.

The fiery, first-person-sing story of America's most fam architect. Traces the growth of idea from its birth in the n teenth century to its full flowe in the mid-twentieth.

FITCH, JAMES MARSTON. Ameri Building: The Forces That Sh It. 372 pp. 177 plates. Bost Houghton Mifflin Co., 1947.

The story of the cultural, nomic, and technological fo which have shaped our archi ture from the days of Pocaho right up to the present. Conta most comprehensive account rently in print of the emergenc an indigenous American style the last decades of the N teenth Century. HOUSE BEAUTIFU Architectural Editor evaluates temporary building in terms modern scientific progress in vironmental control, as well as terms of aesthetics.

HAMLIN, TALBOT. Architecture: Art for All Men. 254 pp. 32 pla New York: Columbia Univer Press, 1947.

The best comprehensive outl of the whole subject for the man. Based on the premise t an understanding of architect should be as much a part of lives as is a basic understand of politics or economics.

DOWNER, MARION. Discovering sign. 104 pp. 86 plates. New Yo Lothrop, Lee and Shepard C pany, 1947.

A picture book that leads by the hand through fields, beac and city streets, and shows how to see when you look. Dr parallels between basic proper of design in nature, in every things and in art. Deserves peated study if you want to come conscious of all the des around you.

ROGERS, MEYRIC R. American terior Design: The Traditions Development of Domestic Des from Colonial Times to the P ent. 309 pp. 196 illustrations. plates. New York: W. W. Nor & Co., Inc., 1947.

Best cultural book on the Ameri- n tradition in houses, furniture, d household accessories. Does t shy away from its negative ects and explains without senti- ntality the significance of our st to modern living. 37 of the tes are photographs of the Amer- n Rooms in Miniature made by s. James Ward Thorne at the t Institute of Chicago.

RISTENSEN, ERWIN O. The Index American Design. With an In- duction by Holger Cahill. 229 . 378 plates. New York: Mac- llan Co., 1950.

The fullest presentation ever blished of America's rich herit- e of native design. Tells the ry of our folk art from the days the first settlers to the close of 19th century. Illustrations re- duce renderings in American lex of Design, National Gallery Art.

ARINEN, ELIEL. Search For Form: Fundamental Approach to Art. pp. 16 plates. New York: inhold Publishing Corp., 1948.

A philosophical discussion in y conversational style of all the ny aspects of design by the fa- us Finnish-born architect. He es right up to that old poser: 'hat is beauty?" and also ana- es the puzzling matter of taste.

House Beautiful's List of Reference Books

Architecture and Building

RE, DORA and BEATTY, BETTY. A ort Dictionary of Architecture. th an Introduction on the Study Architecture by John Gloag. 109 New York: Philosophical Li- ary, 1945.

f you are stumped by some of terms your architect or builder gs over his shoulder, you will d clear definitions and lucid dia- ms in this little reference book.

EPER, CATHERINE and HAROLD. e House For You: To Build, y or Rent. 313 pp. New York: n Wiley & Sons, Inc., 1948.

The adventure of buying or ilding a house will be consid- bly less hazardous to anyone ned with this volume. Dozens of grams and definitions clarify actically any problem from how read a blueprint, to how to get ng with a contractor.

LSON, GEORGE and WRIGHT. NRY. Tomorrow's House: A Complete Guide For The Home-Builder. 214 pp. 232 plates. New York: Simon & Schuster, Inc., 1946.

An excellent guide that shows you how to solve your own problems. Many proposals that seemed radical when this book was written at the close of World War II have since become accepted practice, while some others have been improved upon by more recent thinking and developments.

FRANKL, LEE. Home Repairs Made Easy: and 101 ways to increase the value of your home. 518 pp. Garden City, N. Y.: Garden City Books, 1949.

If you already have a house, this book will tell you how to take care of it. Written for the do-it-yourself enthusiast but also an excellent help to understanding the ways of hired workmen. Covers woodworking tools and their use, the elements of joinery, and materials and methods used for plumbing, heating, roofing, electrical work, and masonry.

MARKHAM, S.F. Climate and the Energy of Nations. 240 pp. New York, London and Toronto: Oxford University Press, 1947.

A sweeping survey that explains the vital importance to you and your family of living in a controlled climate.

Interior and furnishings design

ARONSON, JOSEPH. The Encyclopedia of Furniture. 202 pp. 1,115 plates. New York: Crown Publishers, 1938.

The quickest way to find the answer to questions about materials, styles, dates or puzzling terms is to look it up in this one sensibly sized volume. Definitions manage to condense important background information into remarkably short space.

WRIGHT, MARY and RUSSEL. Guide to Easier Living. 199 pp. New York: Simon & Schuster, 1950.

Applies the functional approach to practically every detail of your daily existence. Tells how to live efficiently, how to plan your house accordingly, how to clean, serve meals, get along with servants, work out household schedules. You may not want to swallow the whole prescription, but it should stimulate you to inventing your own remedies.

WINCHESTER, ALICE. How To Know American Antiques. 191 pp. New York: Dodd Mead & Co., 1951.

The best reference book for placing styles and dates of furniture, china, glass, pewter, and other accessories. Tells all you need to know unless you want to make a career of collecting.

COX, WARREN E. The Book of Pottery and Porcelain. 2 Vols. 1158 pp. 244 plates. New York: Crown Publishers, 1944.

If ceramics is your passion, this is the work that will tell you all. If your interest is only moderate, it is the best reference book for the identification of unfamiliar pieces of all ages, all countries.

MCKEARIN, HELEN and GEORGE. Two Hundred Years of American Blown Glass. 382 pp. 114 plates. Garden City, N. Y.: Doubleday & Co. Inc., 1950.

A fascinating story even if you are not one of the some 380,000 collectors of what is said to be America's oldest art.

BUHLER, KATHRYN C. American Silver. 64 pp. 45 plates. Cleveland and New York: The World Publishing Co. 1950.

A modest volume indeed compared to our recommended works on china and glass, but considered the best short survey for the layman.

Gardening

MCHATTON, THOMAS HUBBARD. Armchair Gardening: Some of the Spirit, Philosophy, and Psychology of the Art of Gardening. 130 pp. Athens: The University of Georgia Press, 1947.

Only because an active interest in gardening is prohibited to apartment dwellers, did we omit this slim volume from the essential list. It actually dissects the reasons why we garden into their basics, and relates them specifically to man's primary emotions. There's not a line in it on how to grow plants, but it shows you how to look beyond plants to appreciate not only through sight, but also through sound, taste, touch, and smell, the finest art that is gardening.

PRYOR, WILLIAM C. The Lazy Gardener. 221 pp. New York, London and Toronto: Longmans, Green & Co., 1947.

Another piece of philosophical thinking not to be missed by the intelligent gardener. All gardeners eventually get to the stage whe they wonder if the returns justi the effort. Few analyze the va ous gardening activities as cri cally as Mr. Pryor. He packs l philosophy, accompanied by not small bit of sound horticultural a vice, into a small book you will back to with profit each year.

TAYLOR, NORMAN (ed.) Taylo Encyclopedia of Gardening (2 ed.) 1,225 pp. Boston: The Ame can Garden Guild, Inc. and Houg ton Mifflin Co., 1948.

The most up to date and ma ageable of the numerous so-call "complete" garden encyclopedi None answers all your garden que tions, but this comes nearest. It woefully short on garden desig adequate on horticulture. Ameri still lacks a complete garden boo

POST, KENNETH. Plants and Flowe in the Home. 196 pp. 66 plat New York: Orange Judd Publis ing Co. Inc., 1946.

This is the one book which specific on just what to do to su ceed indoors with each of the co mon house plants. It neither a sumes you have a green thumb n that you are sure death to a plant you touch.

GRANT, JOHN and CAROL. Prunin is Simple: The "Whys" a "Wherefores" of Pruning Orn mental Trees and Shrubs. 59 p Seattle: Frank McCaffrey Publis ers, 1948.

Most books on this subject, ba fling to so many gardeners, off little concrete advice. They t to uphold the untenable idea th pruning is easy. It is not. It work. But it can be simple. T Grants show how. They tell wh to prune (plants listed by name and show you why you shou prune at all. Explains in deta what to cut off.

LAMSON, MARY DEPUTY. Gard Housekeeping. 167 pp. New Yor Oxford University Press, 1951.

Garden housekeeping is the mo neglected of the arts in daily li ing. This just-published book tel exactly what to do and when slash the time required for routi upkeep.

Success in insect control comes from prompt recognition of the invader and immediate counterattack. The Bug Book makes both easy.

Music

LANG, PAUL HENRY. Music In Western Civilization. 1107 pp. New York: W. W. Norton & Co., 1947.

Presents detailed information on a specific art and also, like the books that comprise HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S Eleven, relates it to a complete cultural background. Explains political, social, and religious forces that determined development of music. Helps you understand great works, not merely as pleasant musical compositions, but as expressions of the spirit of the times and countries in which they were written.

BROCKWAY, WALLACE and WEINSTOCK, HERBERT. Men of Music. 649 pp. New York: Simon & Schuster, 1950.

Quick reference source for "program notes" type of background on works to be heard over the radio or phonograph. Arranged according to composers. Contains wealth of personal anecdote since it treats music in terms of its creators.

BIANCOLLI, LOUIS and BAGAR, ROBERT. The Victor Book of Operas. (edited and revised). 596 pp. 286 plates. New York: Simon & Schuster, 1949.

know how to read the definitive cookbooks. Primarily a definition of food terms as they apply to well-known, established principles and recipes. Essential, also, for reading restaurant and hotel menus, as well as reading all the more famous and authoritative works on food. As necessary for gourmets as a guide book is to a traveler.

ESCOFFIER, A. The Escoffier Cook-Book: A Guide to the Fine Art of Cookery. 923 pp. New York: Crown Publishers, 1941.

Because Escoffier was the first person to systematize and organize cookery, this translation of his cookbook needs to be in the library of every food connoisseur. It is more important as a reading book, however, than as a cooking book because the Escoffier methods have become a kind of international standard against which all other cooking is measured—even though it is used as a standard from which to depart or vary. It is necessary to understand what the best standards are before you know how to simplify or change them. Not a book for the beginner or amateur.

EMBURY, DAVID A. The Fine Art of Mixing Drinks. 372 pp. Garden City, New York: Doubleday & Co., Inc., 1949.

A basic book about the making and imbibing of alcoholic drinks. Refreshing because the writer is really informed, and knows how to put his information in a direct easy-to-take manner. Also refreshing because he names brands and makes his tested recipes easy to follow.

MORPHY, COUNTESS. (Compiled and edited.) Recipes of All Nations. 822 pp. New York: Wm. H. Wise & Co., 1935.

It is impossible to be a real connoisseur of food without having an international point of view. This book gives recipes for the more famous national dishes of 28 countries, plus the regional, creole cookery of New Orleans. A good survey recipe book to get you started in exploring other national cuisines than our own.

MAZZA, IRMA GOODRICH. Herbs for the Kitchen. 359 pp. Boston: Little, Brown & Co., 1950.

The "number-one favorite" of devotees of herb cooking. There are many books about herb cook ery, but many seem not to hav been actually tested in practic use in the kitchen. This one, thoug not so burdened with theory, well laden with trustworthy recip for taking ordinary foods out the ordinary with herbs.

KNOPF, MILDRED O. The Perfe Hostess Cook Book. With an Intr duction by June Platt. 499 pp. Ne York: Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., 195

It is always dangerous to reco mend cookbooks that are compil tions of personal recipes, becau they completely reflect the tas and attitudes of the cook behin the recipes, which may not be yo taste and attitudes. This one, ho ever, is unique in that it reflec an unusual breadth of understan ing about the foods of many cou tries—translated for average Ame ican use and better-than-avera American palates. It offers pract cal, sophisticated cookery in t best sense of the word.

MARSH, DOROTHY B. The New Goo Housekeeping Cook Book. 1014 p 16 plates. New York and Toront Rinehart & Co., 1842.

Every household needs an enc clopedic reference work of recipe This one contains 2,250 kitche perfected recipes from the Goo Housekeeping Institute. Need w say more? color hats and knee breeches.

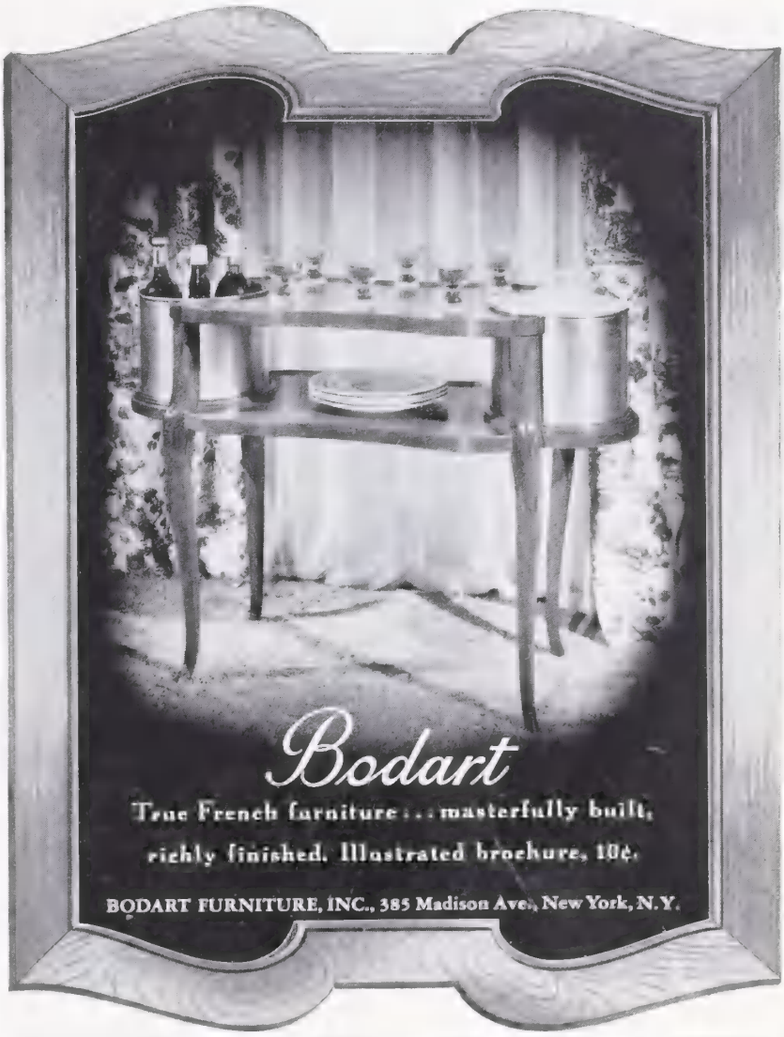
"I'm afraid I'm responsible for those being in here," I said. "A friend sent the pair to me thinking they were characters from Dickens. I didn't want them in my room, for my collection is all Dickens figurines."

Hazel sort of folded up into a Boston rocker that used to be in Amos's room. It was a comfortable chair and hadn't seemed massive where it was formerly.

"Where'd you get that mirror? That's just what I want for Luly Colvin's rococo room!"



I laughed sort of hysterically. It did look a little odd sitting on the dressing table in front of a hanging mirror and between two whale oil lamps. It was framed in warranted gold plate, oval shape, with mermaids on either side and two angels, kissing, over the top, with a garland of daisies and something that looked like watermelons all around, with two Neptune heads for the feet.

"I don't believe we could give that up," I said, "for Joe Gascoyne who works for Amos sent it to me after he'd spent the night here once. I thought it wouldn't be bad in here because it's—it's, well, feminine. Mermaids, you know. And angels."

It looked as though she had spotted the four whale oil lamps, so I said hurriedly: "Do let me see the new rug! We certainly need something to tie the room together, don't we?"

SHE took a pair of scissors from her bag and slowly cut the twine on the bundle, spreading on the floor a deep piled, fluffy chenille rug in ceil blue. We sat there looking at it for a long time, and then Hazel gave a sort of long-drawn-out sigh and wrapped it up again. "I just happened to think," she said finally, "about Mrs. Thompson's guest room. This is just what she needs to pick up the blue in her draperies. I believe you'll want something entirely different. I'll need a little time to think it over."

I offered Hazel a cup of tea, but she just walked out, shaking her head. It was sort of strange the way she left. I guess she had something on her mind. Interior decorators have to contend with a lot. But even I could see that the fluffy ceil blue chenille rug couldn't possibly have tied our guest room together.

left over for flashing, but not much for anything else. The use of copper for most other purposes is banned anyway. As with steel, however, a number of copper manufactured products are neither banned nor included in the allowance of self-authorization — weatherstrips, screening, hardware parts, and plumbing fittings being the most important.

WHAT does all this mean in terms of the kind of house you can actually build? The answer to this depends a great deal on the ingenuity of your architect. Certainly he can make the steel allowance go a long way, even for a fairly large house, providing all possible waste is eliminated. For instance, the average house will use from 400 to 600 pounds of nails. At least a quarter of this could be saved if careful nailing is insisted upon. It may be advisable to favor warm-air heating over steam or hot water systems if the pipe allowance is short. However, except in a fairly large and rambling house, it is probable that the allowance will be sufficient to provide pipe for both the water system and a simple heating system. By using copper for water supply, enough steel will ordinarily be available to permit ample choice in the heating system.

You can count on 23 to 35 pounds of the copper for electric wiring. The higher figure, however, will be enough for a house of around 2,500 square feet of floor space, or perhaps even somewhat larger, with a maximum of around 60 outlets. Again, with an efficient layout this might permit inclusion of the heavier wire needed for a range or laundry dryer.

If you chose the 160-pound copper allowance, the 125 to 135 pounds remaining after taking the weight of wiring out of the total allowance would (estimating one foot of tubing to weigh about one pound) permit two bathrooms, kitchen and laundry, and perhaps an additional lavatory, if the layout is extremely efficient. Unless you want to sacrifice a bathroom, you may have to give up the idea of copper flashing or any other uses of copper.

It is, of course, theoretically possible to obtain additional quantities of steel or copper by special request and authorization. But unless you can demonstrate some unusual hardship or some way in which the granting of your request will aid the defense build-up, you will get the cold and glassy stare. Better not try it. Be content with what can be had under the automatic formulas. They still give you a more generous allowance of metal and permit a wider choice of substitutes than are available anywhere else in the world.

We might as well face it—we're in for austerity construction so far as metal is concerned, probably, at the least, for the better part of next year. Unless we are unnecessarily to forego amenity, the houses we build will have to be compact in order to permit centralization of plumbing facilities and prevent an overextension of the heating system. Of course, it is always possible to omit the plumbing from a future bathroom or to leave a room temporarily without heat. But, so far as a complete job is concerned, the house of the mobilization era will favor a simple rectangular form, two stories high, with bathrooms as nearly as possible above the kitchen-laundry.

THERE'S one thing to be said for the new control system—it makes sense. Since metals are the things that are short, only the use of metal is restricted. No restrictions are placed upon the way you use the metal which you are allowed to have, or upon what may be done with other materials. This leaves room for ingenuity in making a little of the scarce materials go as far as possible and in making the dozens of easy-to-get materials—lumber, brick, gypsum products, cement, asbestos and asphalt products, and so forth—do some of the work for which you might otherwise look to metal.

HOW TO GET TEXTURE AND PATTERN IN YOUR GARDEN

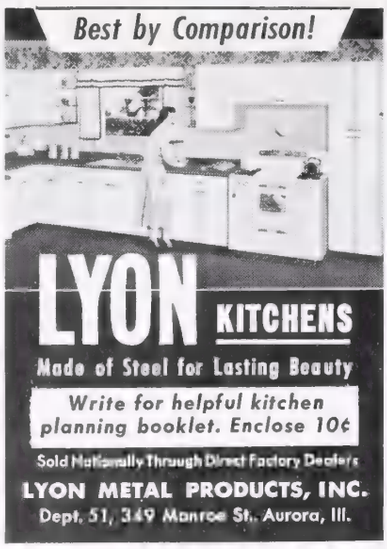
a whole, you find a more important texture effect. The surfaces of shrubs in the mass produce, in final analysis, a pattern of areas of different textures, related or unrelated depending on how the garden is planned.

Your selection of plant material may be made very largely upon what the texture and pattern of its surface in the mass will do for the garden picture as a whole. This particular analytical approach will do much to enable you to create an interesting and pleasing pattern and texture combination in your garden the year round.

Plant material may be classified into the following groups from the standpoint of texture:



1. The evergreen conifers, with their permanent year-round effect, are almost invariably a strong, dark, heavy element in the design. The leaf pattern is made up of a series of lines and the coarseness of the texture depends on the varying lengths of these lines. Note, for example, the coarse texture of pine with its long needles, compared to the short needles of the juniper.

2. The second group, giving permanent year-round effect, is the broadleaved evergreens. Their foliage is made up of a series of planes, which, however bold, are not as strong and dark as the conifers. The surface of the leaves is frequently glossy, and reflects more light than that of the needle type evergreens. There is the greatest possible variation within this group, ranging from the tiny leaves of heather to the huge leaves of some of the exotic rhododendrons, magnolias or English laurel. You will find that the coarsest (or large leaf) broadleaved evergreen is mo effective used next to a conife Then its bold pattern of planes co trasts against the conifer's patte of lines. Small-leaved, broadleav evergreens do not look as we directly next to a conifer.

3. The third group, composed deciduous plant material, produc one effect in summer and anoth in winter. Its pattern of plan although like the broadleav evergreens in summer, is mu softer and less sharply defined, a presents a less distinctly textur mass. In winter, when the folia is gone, a deciduous plant mak a pattern of lines instead of a pa tern of planes, which varies in te ture with the individual shrub.

The first step in a combination these three groups of materia is to decide on how coarse or bol textured an evergreen conifer y want, and to place it as a specim or accent. Then build around it sequence of foliages, using t coarsest or largest leaf next to t conifer, and diminishing the fo age size as you work away fro the conifer. The first basic prin ple in the design of these folia combinations is to use a compar tively small area of vigorous te ture set off by a large area of fi texture.

There is another way of stati the application of this basic pri ciple, which is really an elabor tion of it. You begin with using small quantity of coarsest textu —one plant of the largest-le broadleaved evergreen foliage y plan to use. Then with each d crease in foliage size you propo nately increase the quantity of liage of smaller size. Therefore, you progressively and rhythically decrease the coarseness of xture, the quantity of each shrub th finer texture rapidly increases. So you end up with practically same thing as stated in our st simple rule: you have a small ea of bold texture set off by a nparatively large area of fine xture, with a rhythmic sequence r gradation) of textures in beeen proportionately increasing quantity.

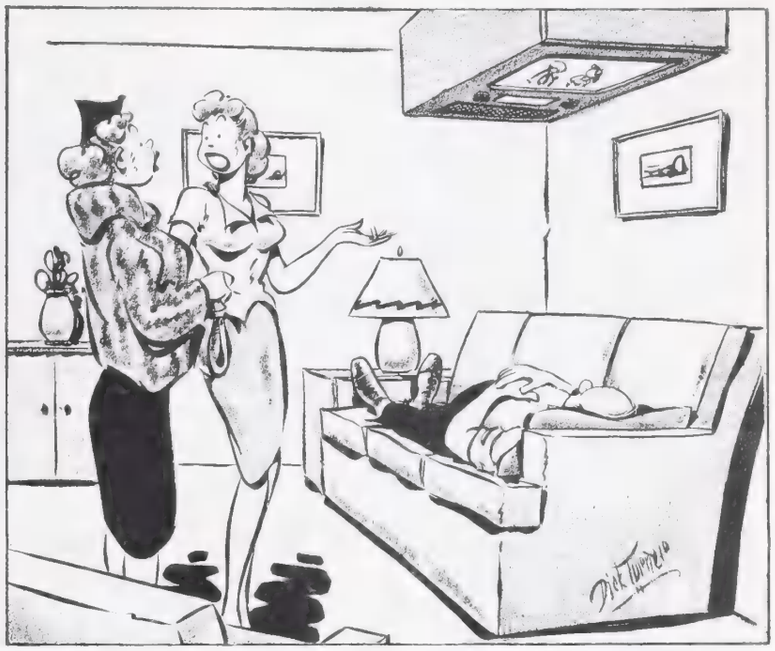
Note that even the largest-leaved ciduous shrubs are not as strong texture as the small-leaved oadleaved evergreens, such as panese holly or boxwood. So you y use a comparatively largeved deciduous shrub right next a small-leaved broadleaved ergreen, and the effect will still a progressively diminishing ength of foliage texture.

ne possible texture combination is to start with a pine and ce next to it a hybrid rhododenn which has a large leaf of nparatively coarse texture. Then, ou want to end up with heather, ich has a very small leaf and texture, you could use mahia, huckleberry, pernettya, and ther for a sequence. Another bination would be rhododenn, mahonia, pieris (or moun laurel), huckleberry, azalea, rcrantha, pernettya, heather. his gives an example of both tern and texture combinations which there is a gradual change in shape as well as a marked change in foliage sizes. Also, of course, all of these shrubs will thrive under the same cultural conditions. With either of these two illustrations, you would start out with a small quantity of your largest texture and end up with a large quantity of your finest texture.



In the first instance, where your step down in size is more rapid and there will be fewer steps in the transition, there should be a greater quantity increase with each step. Where there are more steppings, as in the second example, the quantity of each step would not as rapidly increase and the net result would show about the same large amount of heather in either case.

The proportionate increase is not something rigid and inflexible. You don't just arithmetically multiply the number of shrubs. The shrubs may vary in mature size (for example, pernettya grows to three of four times the size of winter flowering heather) so that one shrub might present three times as much foliage as another. Also, in the arrangement in the design, one shrub might tend to cover up another. You plan the increase so that there is a rhythmic increase in the amount of foliage which shows in the finished planting.

For instance, you might start with a hybrid rhododendron, such as Pink Pearl, a tall leggy variety,

Very Truly yours,

The distinguished writing reproduced above is from one of many letters in praise of our Bunny, which, as will be obvious from the photograph, is designed for bunion relief. Not one of our testimonials has been solicited.

The Bunny is made of ultraporous sponge rubber that flattens in the shoe and disguises bulge; it combines in one piece cushion and toe-straightener. Washable, of course, and lasts months.

Once in position under the stocking it "stays put" all day in perfect comfort. The elegant way without unpleasant plasters.

Our guarantee is "complete success or refund." The price of the Bunny is $2.00 or the pair $3.85 (plus either foot) postpaid, by mail only from the makers.

and group from 3 to 5 shrubs of mahonia around it. Then arrange from 3 to 5 plants of Pieris on either side, which gives you from 8 to 10 plants of Pieris. Next, come off on either side again with anywhere from 5 to 9 plants of evergreen huckleberry. Include several groups of 3 to 5 Pernettya. (Note that because they spread around you don't use many more plants of pernettya than evergreen huckleberry.)

As to the heather, you might use as many as 100 plants, depending on the variety. This is how heather should be used—in a related mass instead of a few scattered plants.

Finally, don't assume that a lawn is the only possible ground cover material to use. True, it is often the best practical solution as it can stand up to fairly heavy traffic. But where climate and soil conditions permit, it is sometimes very effective to use huge sheets of low-growing heather, which produce a large area of fine texture (the basic design requirement). Similarly, other materials are often better on a very steep bank, in dense shade, or in other soil and moisture conditions which are not ideal for grass.

This point is stressed because thinking on this subject is too frequently stereotyped, and it is often assumed that a lawn is the only ground cover material. Instead, consider the problem from the aspects of both practicality and design. If you need an area for useful living space, first decide whether you want lawn or paving. Then decide just how much of this space is needed for actual use. For the rest of the area, choose the material whose texture will best fit in with the design.

Until then, his wife and daughter had more or less indulged Pfister in his hobby. Now they took an active part in every phase of the new home and its garden. A niece, employed during the week, gave up her week ends to keep the Pfister lawn mowed. A younger niece still helps with the record keeping required for Pfister's work as Assistant Horticulturalist and National Rose Test Chief of the Men's Garden Club of America. Last year, when Pfister lost his high school help for two months, his brother and his wife helped every week end.

The greenhouse is another good example of how Pfister puts to work his philosophy about gardening being fun. It is a 14 by 25 foot affair, heated by its own automatic gas-fired hot-water system. Then, rather than have someone raise or lower the ventilators with each passing cloud, Pfister merely closes the ventilators in November and leaves them closed until March. Experts will tell you this can't be done. They seem to have good theoretical reasons why the plants won't grow. Pfister only knows that he follows his lazy man's system each winter with perfect results. His plants apparently don't know they are supposed to die.

An unexpected benefit of the unorthodox system is that Pfister rarely gets any mildew on his plants during the winter. He guesses that this is because his plants never get chilled by ventilators left open too long. He used to have a terrible time each winter when he followed the approved book method.

The Pfister horticultural library is one of the most complete in the country. It is being added to constantly. Pfister finds, though, that he refers most frequently to Bailey's Cyclopedia of Horticulture, Hortus II, and the yearbooks of the rose, lily, and gladiolus societies.

IN addition to his books, Pfister subscribes to all the leading garden magazines. He has time only to skim through most of them, but he always reads HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, House and Garden, Better Homes & Gardens, Flower Grower, Home Garden and Popular Gardening. He finds these especially useful in keeping his landscape up to date because they are geared to the times. He also looks in them for work-saving ideas.

Pfister admits he spends considerable money on his gardening, but asks how can you put a valuation on healthful fun. Today the chief expense of the Pfister garden is for the two high school helpers who come in each Saturday. "Gardening wouldn't be fun if I had to feel that I must do everything myself," he says. "I do only what, and as much as, I enjoy doing."

Each year sees new work-savers put into operation in the garden. Two years ago the grass paths were changed to gravel, for example. Some background plantings are scheduled to be replaced this year with construction materials which won't affect the beauty of Rosebrae (their home's name) but will release time for growing plants.

PFISTER, who travels extensively for his company, schedules his trips to allow time to visit gardens too. This gives him a chance to see private gardens in all parts of the country. They are the gardens of his friends in the American Rose Society and the Men's Garden Club of America.

He never misses a convention of the Men's Garden Clubs of America (he is a past President) or of the America Rose Society (he is now the President).

Pfister is a great fan of flower shows and an avid reader of seed and nursery catalogs. He admits that he can't resist trying just about every new plant he sees or reads about. Friends often send him new plants, knowing of his great enthusiasm for trying anything new. Many seed and nursery companies also send him samples of all new introductions. His observations are so succinct that many nurseries try to prevail upon him to accept plants of "tomorrow's varieties," often so new that even the plant breeder isn't sure yet whether or not he will ever introduce them. Visitors to the Pfister garden often get a preview of what will be new to the public five years in the future.

Currently Pfister is growing all the test chrysanthemums for the tester of the Chicago Men's Garden Club who hasn't the space. He is also growing a big collection of gladiolus seedlings given him by a friend who recently retired and sold his home.

Pfister gets many a chuckle from the visitors to his garden. Once a lady rose grower came from Oregon in late November, expecting to see the roses in bloom. They were nicely frosted and hilled up with soil for the Illinois winter.

A dowager from Chicago's Drake Hotel read about the Pfister rose garden in the newspaper. She loved roses. They were in bloom in all their glory when she arrived. B she guessed she wouldn't both getting out of her Cadillac to s them when informed the flowe were not for sale. She wanted bouquet for her suite.

Then there was the car full people. Could they see the garde They just loved flowers. They h driven 50 miles to see Rosebra They got out. They took pictur of each other for 15 minutes, arg ing constantly about the angle the sun. On the way out, one me ber of the party remarked cau tically that she really had expect to see more flowers. That almo floored Pfister. There were least 75 delphiniums in bloo none less than a spectacul eight feet in height, dozens a dozens of other flowers, plus 20 rose bushes completely laden wi bloom.

But what matter! Pfister doesn garden to please other people.

blossoms weeks ahead of the non-treated bulbs. Get them into pots by November 1st, for example, and you will enjoy a stalk of three or four big flowers on each plant at Christmas and on into January. Few people know they can be made to bloom for Christmas. February is the normal time for blossoms to appear. The special heat treatment is given the bulbs before you get them. Treatment advances the blooming time dramatically—but just this once. Expect flowers in subsequent years in February.

Any good garden soil keeps amaryllis thriving. If you don't happen to have any soil indoors at present, buy a little potting soil from your local florist. Put your bulbs in pots big enough to allow one inch of soil around the bulbs. Do not remove any of the many fleshy roots attached to the bulbs.

Amaryllis does just as well if all except the lower two inches of its bulb sticks up out of the soil. So plant this way. Then you have a bigger volume of soil below the bulb for its roots to penetrate. You won't have to water as often.

Amaryllis are big plants. They use a lot of water. But don't leave the pots standing in water. It's preferable to water enough each day to wet the soil thoroughly. Continue to add water until some runs out the drain hole in the pot.

Direct winter sun is best, but once plants are in bloom you can move them to any reasonably well-lighted display place. After the blooms fade, return the plant to the sunny location. A second flower stalk will push up from the bulb. Its flowers should open about six weeks after the first set opened.

AFTER the second set of blooms has faded, keep the plant growing as a green houseplant. You won't need to water nearly as heavily as when the blossoms were developing. After all danger of frost has passed, move the pots outdoors for the summer. Bring them indoors in September before the first frost is expected. Store in a frost-free place. The basement will do. Do not water. Eventually the leaves will die down. Then the bulb rests. During this resting period the flower buds develop. This is next winter's bloom. Bulbs need to rest about two months, but no harm occurs to them if they happen to be forgotten for as much as si months.

To start bulbs back into growth bring them into a warm room (60 F. or more). Thoroughly soak th soil. You won't have to water ver often until the leaves push up, bu never let the soil get dry afte growth starts. Drouth damages th new flower buds still hidden in th bulb at this time.

Amaryllis are giants in the bul world. Each is big enough to fi a six-inch flower pot. Beware small bulbs. Reputable dealers se bulbs that measure at least thre inches across (twelve-inch circu ference). The best bulbs are 3½ inches across or larger. The bigge the bulb, the more it is worth you. Small bulbs are no bargai

BULBS live for years. They g bigger and bigger—and so the flowers they produce. Not a varieties of amaryllis produc equally big flowers, of course, bu sturdy old bulbs of some kinds ha produced flowers in dinner-pla size. Eight-inch blooms are commo

Solid reds and red and whi striped predominate. Plant bree ers now produce an array of re that blend or accent with current popular interior color schem much better than did the old ga ish reds. New purity of color e tends to the whites too—althou their popularity falls far behi the reds, because they do less pep up the scarcity of color duri the winter months.

Amaryllis enthusiasts long ha hoped for a dwarf variety. Ma decorative uses are just impossil for amaryllis because of its heig (a 20-inch flower stalk is commo Just announced is a well-prop tioned little amaryllis, approp ately named "Graceful." int duced in America by bulbma George Alders. The flowers are s quite big—usually three to f inches across. They are a pu velvety red, and are carried thin, wiry stems quite unlike usual thick amaryllis stem. T plants are only 15 inches hi Bulbs are quite small. They scarce (and thus expensive) will be for a number of years.

These amaryllis can be trea for early flowering just as succe fully as the Herald Amaryllis. T growing method is the same for the large flowered amaryl

Take a high view of things

Some people instinctively set their sights high, and for them the ROADMASTER is custom built.

It is high in style and high in spirit—a thing of beauty and power that is yours to command, and it heeds your every whim as you wish it.

It is high in room and high in comfort—and high in the effortless ease of its Dynaflow Drive.

It is high, also, in the esteem of people who judge on merit, rather than price, for no other car of its pounds and prestige sells at such a modest figure.

Pride of Thomas Jefferson*

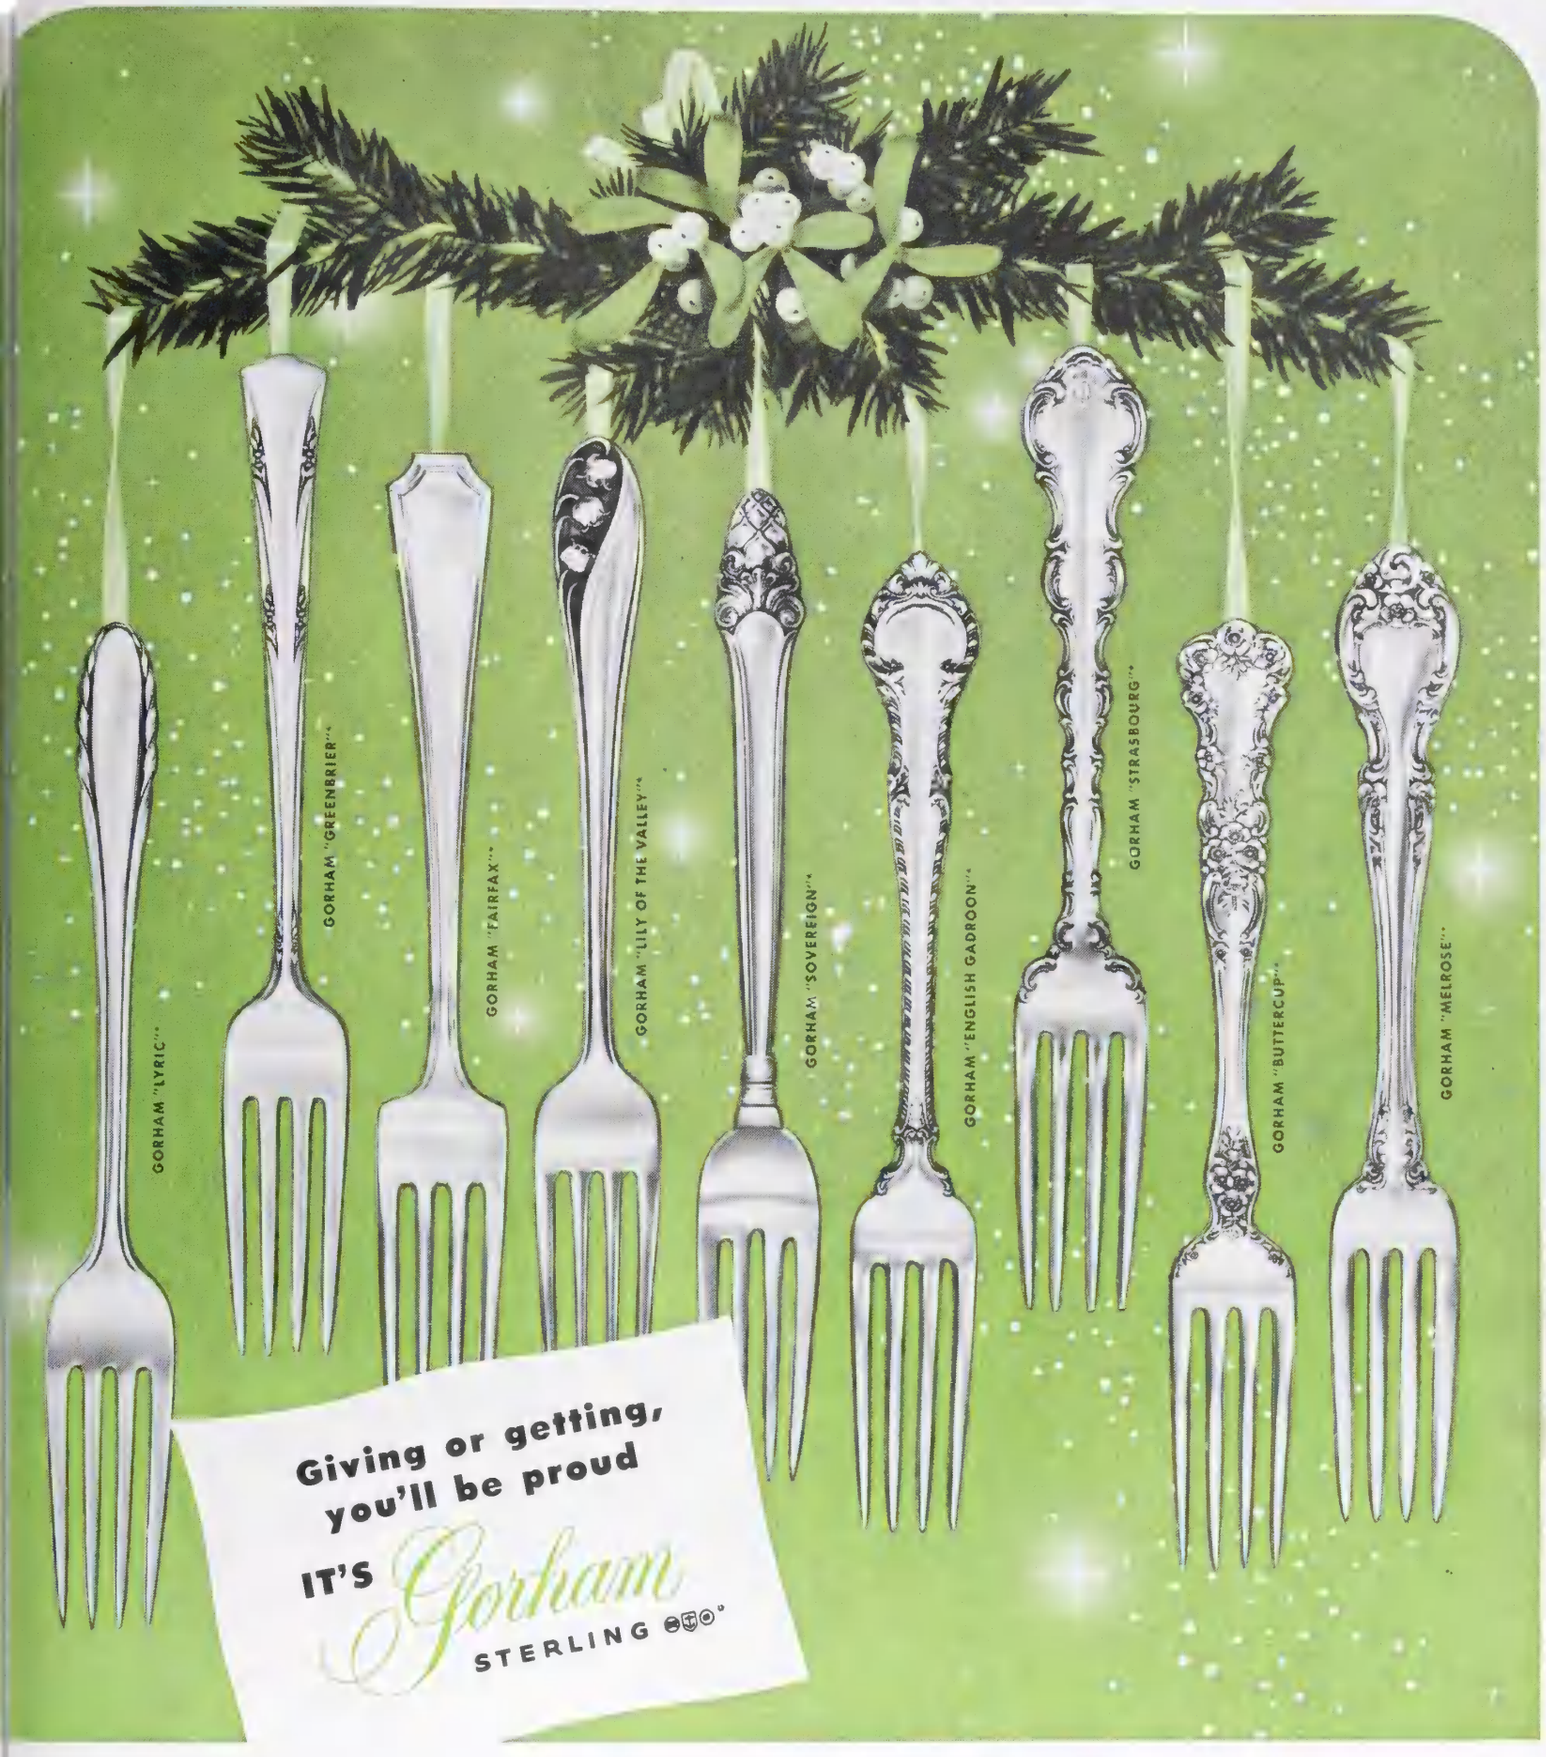
After years of diligent and patient research, we have succeeded in our efforts to create for the American public a bedspread that is truly the ultimate in an adaptation of an early American hand-woven, hand-embroidered bedspread. The Pride of Thomas Jefferson, with its authentic American history, is an artistic achievement not often found in this day and age.

FROM GENERATION

TO GENERATION

To execute the pattern itself, hours and hours of tedious, painstaking labor are required by a highly trained, highly skilled craftsman, working at the factory in Ellijay, situated in the beautiful mountains of North Georgia. The embroidery is done with a small, delicate punch needle, entirely hand-guided. Other LADY CHRISTINA Loom-Woven American Colonial Authentics are Pride of Mary Cushing and Pride of Georgetown.

These spreads are available at McCutchen's of New York City, Gimbel's, N.Y.— and at other fine stores from coast to coast.



*Adapted from the handmade bedspread in the Smit sonian Museum with history as follows:
U.S.N.M. T.8888 Hand-woven tufted counterpan Ribbed foundation fabric ornamented with an ela orate geometric and conventionalized flower pattern the 8 pointed star and chain of life are typical desig of this weave and are said to be old celtic characters made with long and short loops which are seen only the right side. Four or five tabby shots in fine cotton w are woven between the tufting shot of cotton rovi The coarser weft is picked up in loops over a wire the places where the tufts are required for the patte Owned by the donor's great-grandparents, Truem Tyler of Upper Marlboro, Md., and Grace Con Harrison, his wife, who were married January 4, 17 Color: All white.

HOLIDAY MUSIC

with the year's best records

To give or to ask for, here's one man's selection of the past year's records most likely to be loved by music lovers

By Richard Williams

As predictably as appears the expectant smile on the face of the elevator boy, appears our Christmas check list. This list represents—as I think any list must—a personal choice. All I can say for it is that I listened to a lot of records before I picked those listed below.

The year 1951 was marked by two characteristics: the release of complete operas and the re-release of past recordings.

The emphasis on the operatic repertoire is due to LP. The long-playing records make these works less expensive to buy and easy to handle. It might be interesting to speculate whether the popularity of operas is going to affect the repertoire of the Metropolitan and other opera houses. Certainly we are getting to hear some off-the-beaten-track operas, such as the early Verdi operas. Best bets among the recent recordings:

Note: (C) indicates Columbia, and (V) indicates Victor.

Leoncavallo: Pagliacci. Richard Tucker. Lucine Amara. Giuse Valdengo. Metropolitan Opera sociation Orchestra and Cho Fausto Cleva, conductor (C).

Bizet: Carmen. Principals. Ch and Orchestra of the Theatre tional de L'Opera-Comique Paris. André Cluytens, condu (C).

Bizet: Carmen. Risë Stevens, cia Albanese, Jan Peerce, Ro Merrill. Fritz Reiner, condu (C).

Verdi: La Traviata. Licia A nese. Jan Peerce. Robert Mer NBC Symphony Orchestra. Ar Toscanini, conductor (V). Thi an off-the-air recording of a un and unforgettable performance

Strauss: Die Fledermaus. Solo Chorus. Vienna Philharmonic chestra. Clemens Krauss, con tor (London).

Mozart: Marriage of Figaro. E pean cast (Cetra).

Strauss: Salome. European (Oceanic).

OLD ORIGINAL

Here is one gift you may safely describe as the Aristocrat of all fine Clocks. The Schatz 400 Day Clock is a masterpiece of age-old skill and artistry constructed of quality materials. With its fascinating, silently rotating 4 ball pendulum, it lends an air of old-world charm to every room it adorns. It's ideal for those seeking an exclusive gift for particular people for Christmas, Birthdays, Weddings, Anniversaries, and all gift occasions. Moreover, with production and imports limited, it's a gift less likely to be duplicated. Schatz, with a background of 70 years of fine clockmaking, is famous for precision workmanship. Insist on an original Schatz 400 Day Clock – it runs a full year on one winding and is imported and guaranteed by Remington Rand. Five interesting models, modestly priced, in finishes to match any décor, provide an attractive, useful decoration for table, console, or mantelpiece. At many fine stores or at Remington Rand Showrooms throughout the country, or write to: Remington Rand Inc., 60 Main Street, Bridgeport 2, Conn.

TIERFUL GOOD BUY for our house plants is this white metal plant stand. Put it in your breakfast nook or dining room, and even on those bleak January mornings you'll have a sunny disposition. Or get a pair to divide your dining and living areas. The three tiers hold 9 potted plants, have pierced galleries. 24″ x 19″ x 34″ high. $12.95 ppd. May Birn, Box 26B, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

SCOTCH TAPE DISAPPEARS in our house faster than fresh-baked cookies. And if we didn't have proof that it went to mend paper dolls and patch homework books, we'd think it went the way of all cookies. We hope the elegance of this leather folder with 2 rolls will intimidate certain people into keeping hands off. Red, green, mahogany, honey, pine, or blue, $3.50 ppd. Blach's, Birmingham, Ala.

SANTA'S LIT UP. And he looks so real, so wonderfully full of the old Nick, that you almost expect him to say, "Merry Christmas to all. And to all a Good Night." He's an illuminated wall plaque of weatherproof Vinylite, and if you hang him over the mantel or front door, the spirit of Christmas will shine in your house. With cord and plug, 15″ high, $3.95 ppd. The Fitzgeralds, 745 Fifth Ave., New York 17.

Fanciful faience for Christmas giving

Geometrics, teardrops, leaves and flowers spread their pastel charms over this delightful faience by Stig Lindberg from Gustavsberg, Sweden. Truly useful conversation pieces. Leaf Dish, $7.50; Covered Pitcher, $12; 12″ Platter, $40.

Plantation... the brilliant adaptation of the pineapple design to a complete new line of Heisey hand-wrought crystal. Because, for many years, the pineapple has symbolized hospitality at its highest, Heisey has selected this theme for your holiday entertaining... and for years to come! Amid much ceremony, the pineapple was first presented as a royal gift to Charles II of England in 1671. Today, exhibiting all the convivial charm of plantation living, PLANTATION is the summation of everything a hostess hopes to achieve. NEW — "DIFFERENT"
The UNIQUE Christmas Gift of the Year

Here, indeed is an excitingly "different" gift for those "have everything" friends — those "must-be-pleased" business acquaintances. They're sure to be delighted with this magnificent treat of treats . . a brace of Forst Catskill Mountain Smoked Pheasants. These are the most highly prized of all game-farm birds, superb, young, tender, carefully fed and fattened to make them plump, juicy, wonderfully delicious! Each one is U.S. inspected.

We Forsts season them according to a secret family recipe in rare, zesty spices and aromatic herbs. Then, we slowly, painstakingly smoke-cook them over fragrant applewood embers to a succulent, rich golden brown! Comes all ready to eat.

One brace of Forst Smoked Pheasants will provide bountifully for 5 or 6 people — make any meal a long-remembered feast. This year give a brace of Smoked Pheasants. Try them yourself, too, it's the most luxurious taste treat of them all. Mail the Order Coupon and your gift list TODAY!

Swedish made "Angel Chimes"

From Sweden comes this enchanting decorative innovation. Heat rising from the burning candles causes the Herald Angels to revolve lightly striking the bells with their wands. The resulting chime-like sound is as charming as church bells afar. (This is the original, one and only "Angel Chimes". It differs from other candelabra of its type in that (1) It is made of heavy gauge, highly polished brass instead of copper, (2) It has a tray base to catch possible drippings, (3) It has holders for four candles instead of the usual three, (4) It is imported from Sweden where it is precision made. Don't confuse the "Angel Chimes" with the trayless, 3-candle candelabra selling at about the same price. Buy the "Angel Chimes"—the original and best! 13" High, complete with 4 red or white candles.

(Extra candles—imported, hand-dipped, dripless 75c per doz.) $2.95 ppd.

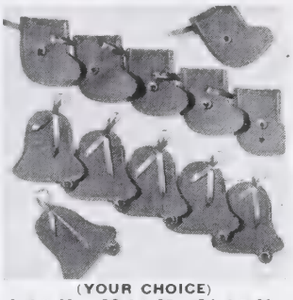
Miniature Christmas Tree Balls



Those who have grown tired of big, clumsy, always-in-the-way tree ornaments will welcome these dainty miniature Christmas Tree Balls. They are of blown glass—the size of a walnut—and they come in glorious, iridescent colors of green, red, blue, silver and gold. They will bring sparkle and beauty to your tree — no other ornaments will. They are amazingly inexpensive and may be used year after year.

with Diamothyst gem
1 carat $60.00
2 carats $84.00
3 carats $108.00

The greatest gem discovery in history, which is the result of experimentation of one of America's largest corporations, brings you Diamothyst, a gem with a refractory index higher than, and a dispersion factor greater than a diamond. Its refractory index is about 10% higher than diamonds. It may seem fantastic to you as it did to us, but now you can have a gem that looks like a diamond and is actually far more brilliant than a diamond, and even many jewelers have mistaken it for a real diamond. Yet you can have it at about 1/30 the cost of a genuine diamond. (Buy a Diamothyst instead of a diamond and save the difference.)

Only $24 a carat, tax included. The hundreds of dollars thus saved will go far toward buying a home. You need no longer invest large sums of money in a tiny stone, the value of which is determined largely by scarcity and control. YOU can enjoy the beauty and prestige and the envy of your friends with a stone that only an expert working under a good light can detect as not being a real diamond.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE WITH A 30-DAY TRIAL IN YOUR HOME.

A beautiful engagement ring made with a Diamothyst presented to any girl will inspire her devotion. You can buy many things with the hundreds of dollars thus saved. Each Diamothyst is perfectly cut, with full 58 facets per brilliant stone. Legally we cannot refer to the Diamothyst as a diamond, so we ask you to order in the 3 most popular diamond shapes—namely the round or BRILLIANT, the oblong or EMERALD and the oval or MARQUISE cuts.

FREE There is no charge for mounting Diamothysts in Your Jewelry—they will be mounted absolutely FREE!

Emily Post

uses Morgan-Jones' Minuet* on her own bed

Emily Post, foremost authority on the proprieties of nice living, says, "I can't imagine a more beautiful reproduction bedspread than the Morgan-Jones 'Minuet.' I have the 'Minuet' on my own bed in my house in Martha's Vineyard."

The incomparable 'Minuet' bedspread becomes young or old, traditional or modern, as your room requires. For this authentic reproduction of an antique dating from 1812 possesses not only the serene dignity of age but the fresh vitality of youth.

Here you see the 'Minuet' on Emily Post's own bed at her house in Martha's Vineyard, Massachusetts.

High-Fidelity

THE NEW MAGAZINE FOR AUDIO-PHILES*
*People Who Enjoy Fine Musical Entertainment at Home

An Inexhaustible Source of New Ideas for AUDIO ENTHUSIASTS

MOST FOR YOUR MONEY: If you are planning your first hi-fi FM-phonograph installation, be sure to read the feature article: "Budget Your High Fidelity." It explains how to make a well-balanced selection in choosing your amplifier, turntable, pick-up, and loudspeaker, so as to get maximum performance for whatever amount you plan to spend. (16 pages, 21 illustrations)

ABOUT TAPE RECORDING: With the new tape equipment, you can become a recording expert in a single evening. In your own home, you can make amazingly realistic recordings of everything from family conversations to instrumental music and singing, or make your own programs from radio shows (omitting commercials) by connecting the recorder to your radio receiver. (12 pages, 19 illustrations)

DECORATIVE APPEARANCE: When you walk in with an armful of hi-fi gear, if your wife greets you with, "Don't take that junk in the living room," get out HIGH-FIDELITY Magazine, and show her all the pictures of attractive installations in fine homes. Win her enthusiastic approval by getting her to help you plan a really beautiful FM-phonograph installation. (16 illustrations)

CHOOSING RECORDS: Maybe you like to sweat it out in music-shop listening booths, but you can save time, keep cool, and get a world of help in building your record library from "Schubert on Records," "Tops for the Juke Box," "The Music Between," and "Records in Review," by such leading critics and commentators as C. G. Burke, Carl Eaton, Edward Merritt, Jr., and John Indcox. (18 pages)

The Convertible Coffee Table

. . . that "twirls-up" to become a card, luncheon, or occasional table

Here is a table that will add a sparkling modern touch to any room. Beautifully proportioned in design, expertly built, and so useful that it is difficult to believe it could be so moderately priced. Because of our exclusive feature the table rises from nineteen inches to twenty-nine inches by twirling the top! Superior to any type of folding table, it is firm and steady at height, because the threaded steel support, which rises out of the pedestal, is precision tooled. Locks at any height. The blonde mahogany top is beautifully finished in stain-proof and alcohol-proof lacquer. A light wheat shade. The base is wrought iron, finished in scuff proof flat black lacquer. The blonde mahogany top measures 36"x36". When used as a low table only 19" in height. Twirls up to 29" when used as a card or luncheon table.

An ideal Christmas or wedding gift. The table in blonde mahogany delivers at only $47.50. If you desire a special finish—maple, ebony, brown mahogany, etc., add $2.00. Send check or money order.

THE MOST SPECTACULAR DOLL IN TOY HISTORY

Tintair Doll

The doll with plus "play value" makes every little girl a hair stylist.

With just a little help from her owner the Tintair Doll becomes a red head or a brunette—then goes back to lovely blonde, over and over again.

The coloring is absolutely harmless, washes out easily with warm water. The Tintair Doll's hair is a specially-treated synthetic fiber called Dynel. Every Tintair Doll has a doll home hair coloring kit. It includes "Carrot Top" coloring, "Glossy Chestnut" coloring, color applicators, plastic dish and plastic curlers.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

A decorator's notes to herself are your inside information about what's going on n the home furnishings market

ffee table. I always say, ought very good to look at, because ook at it so much. You look at ery time you flick your ashes the ash tray. You look at it you pick up your glass, and when you put the glass down. e same time its surface needs just about as hardy as the en sink. For somehow the best e, though they wouldn't spill mb at dinner, will walk off eave your coffee table decked puddles of liquid and finger- ings in oil (maybe you'd call ease). What a dilemma!

u can, of course, forego the er experiences in aesthetics ettle for a table top in one of naterials that are guaranteed ve armor-car toughness. But don't have to. I saw one at ica House that provides guest ance and beauty, too. Made of ut with sap streaks in it. Beau- grain. Beautiful shadings from to dark. The top is molded y upward toward the edge—

the kind of sculptured detail you want to feel with your fingers. But you won't leave finger marks—not unless you've dipped them in white paint first. And your wet glass won't leave a stubborn ring. Because the table has an oil finish. No see-yourself-in-it polish to show up every mark, but an invisible film that seems to let you look right down into the wood. If there's anybody who won't believe an oil finish is stout protection against almost anything wet, I'll tell them, go ask any oldtime bartender what he did to those miles of mahogany every Saturday night after closing.

It's not honest design, they say, to turn out by machine the kind of furniture that looks as if it were made by hand. Well, that depends. But how about furniture that looks as if it rolled right off a modern assembly line—all wires and rods and nuts and bolts—and turns out to have been put together largely by hand? And has to be sold at handmade prices? How about that?

Betty Barthel is the cuddly type. She's still young, and lissome enough to perch gracefully on the edge of a table or drop cross-legged to the floor. But give her another 15 years and I can see her breakfasting in bed, on hot chocolate with whipped cream probably, her toes insulated with an eiderdown quilt and her fluffy curls bouncing against half a dozen little pillows.

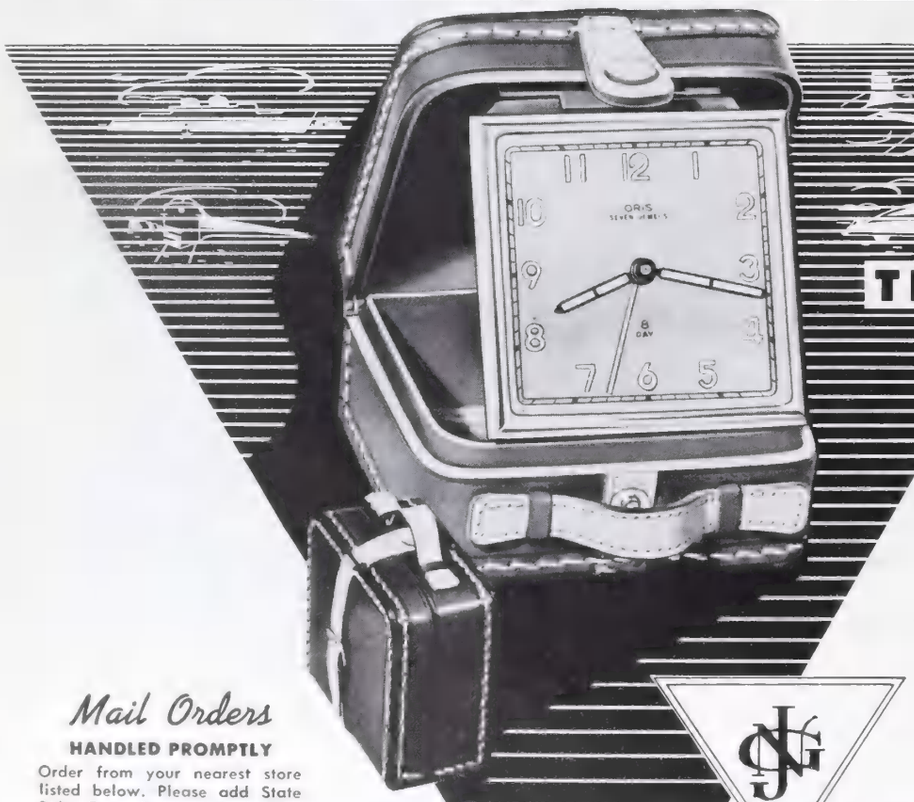
Already after 18 months of marriage, she's begun to reveal that yearning for well-upholstered comfort. She loves their apartment, she says, even if Bob did pick out everything in one of his sternest marble and steel-rod moods. But she'd like to have one more chair, a chair she can curl up in. It must be modern—very modern, to go with their other furniture.



This was a month ago and I drew a deep breath at the prospect of finding a chair that would meet those incompatible requirements. But I found one. At Vakassian & Sons. There's not a straight line in the seat and back. Looks like a scooped-out, form-fitting shell, though it's actually made of a wooden frame lavishly padded with foam rubber. There is an ottoma match, with a curved edge that the curved edge of the chair Betty is as happy as a lark, should say as a kitten. She p blissfully every time she curl in it. She's also happy about very straight, very hard iron Myself, I could do with woo ones, but it takes all kinds of to make a world.

Soft shell seating

Here come the holidays and I I could get a Christmas bonus cents would do) from every c who calls me and begs for a lampshade or a new slip cover fore the children get home" or fore a little party we're givin New Year's Eve." I'll battle way through the crowds as alw and try to co-operate. But I they'd realize that the time to t about how things will looks Christmas is October 1. The truth is you just can't run out buy a lamp or a table the you'd buy a new hat. Not eve you know exactly what you and where to get it. THE ORIGINAL STYRON WALL TILE

All the Miraplas wall tile for an average tub recess . . . $50.00

. . . completely installed

Or save money and do it yourself! MIRAPLAS is easily installed by the average "handyman." Thousands have done so with professional-looking results. All that's needed are a few simple instructions and tools—both are available from your dealer. Both professional and amateur should use MASTER MASTIC as the adhesive. It spreads easily, provides beautiful white grout lines and binds tile to wall in a vise-like grip.

No muss, no fuss—easily installed!

Installing MIRAPLAS is no more disturbing to a home than papering a room. It can be installed on any clean, level, sound wall without additional construction expense. And once installed you can enjoy it for many long years without consideration of replacement.

19 fascinating colors!

MIRAPLAS color goes all the way through to the back and cannot come off. There are 19 harmonious colors with 6 basic colors in feature strips and bull nose caps.

Kitchen equipment by [illegible], Division of AVCO

You'll never believe the magic that beautiful MIRAPLAS can work in a drab kitchen, bath, recreation or other room until you see it. Rich and lustrous looking, it transforms a room into a colorful pleasant place to live, work or play. It has a rugged, permanent appearance and indeed will give years of satisfying service with minimum care. Common household acids and alkalis have no effect upon MIRAPLAS. It withstands changes of temperature without harm to the tile. Write for name of nearest distributor and color folder.

When I was young and cocky, I used to think all clients over 50 had tastes as conventional as the First National Bank. But I've learned. Today it's the progressive young people I have to wrestle with, to inject a little individuality into their homes. If I say yes to all their notions, they invariably end up with carbon copies of the progressive homes of all their progressive young friends. It's more often the oldsters who come up with the kind of suggestions that make for freshness—the freshness you never find in copybook Modern.

Take Mrs. Masters' bedroom. I suppose you'd call it conservative, but it's certainly not conventional. We started out with a printed linen from Stoffel's, in a pattern called "Arrowhead." I explained it came in the pink I knew she liked, though the only sample I could lay my hands on at the moment was in a color called "pottery brown." Didn't seem very bedroomy.

"But it's a lovely color," Mrs. Masters said. "Why couldn't we use that for the draperies and have a pink linen bedspread?" Well, why couldn't we?

Now, about a slip cover for t chaise? Not the print. Not t solid pink. Too much of a go thing, either way.

"Maybe they have some simp fabric that would match—son thing with a tiny pattern that wo get soiled too quickly." Wh she said it, all I could think were those old-fashioned wove patterned reps we used to use yea

*Do next year's Christmas shopping on

THIS YEAR'S WINTER HOLIDAY

The one flaw in Christmas is that it sneaks up on you before you know it, and there you are at the last minute, trying to synchronize your shopping list, your budget, and the calendar. You can get the jump on all this, though, especially if you plan a trip to the American hot countries this winter. You can relax in the sun, see strange new things, meet new people, have the time of your life. And while you're enjoying the inevitable tourist shopping, you can be effortlessly checking off the names on next year's Christmas gift list. You can save money, too, for there are buys to be had the length of the hemisphere from Bermuda to Argentina. So it's feasible to lavish on your friends gifts that would be too costly at home, thanks to customs duties and shipping charges. And, of course, a gift from an exotic land bears an intriguing cachet of differentness.

You'll naturally get the best bargains where the exchange is in your favor, and if you concentrate on local specialties.

By Marion Gough

In the British, Dutch, and French islands, look for products of the home country. In a free port like St. Thomas and where import duties are low, as in Curaçao and Panama, expect pleasantly priced goods from all over the world.

The greatest bargains to the south of us are fine materials and workmanship. So eschew the shoddily put together souvenir and look for articles of importance, for here's where you get real value for your money. Bargains are relative anyhow. You don't seem to save much on a cashmere sweater if it's only a few dollars less than its American price tag. But if you're buying several, you're way ahead of the game. A llama rug or a mahogany chair may be dirt cheap until you hear the cost of shipping it home. Better weigh all sides before you make that $500 worth of duty-free purchases.

We are listing some of the sun-baked holiday places you're likely to head for, with their best buys, the rate of exchange, as of October 1951, and ways to get there. (See page 206)

*For instance: a Mexican silver holder for powdered coffee; Hindu earrings from Trinidad; a rawhide bag from Guatemala; wicker place mats from Dominica; Brazilian silver yerba maté sippers for iced tea; a Mexican tin candle-holding angel.

HOW TO LEAVE HOME and like it

By Louisa M. Comstock

Whether you're lining up your first or your tenth trip to Mexico, you should know about the many new and different accommodations which our neighbor republic is offering her visitors these days.

It's conventional to start your visit with a stay in Mexico City itself. But make a note of these innovations. At the luxurious new Continental Reforma, which offers suites only, you can luxuriate in a sitting room with a complete kitchen at your command, at rates from under ten dollars for one bedroom accommodating two, to less than fifty for three bedrooms accommodating six. Or take advantage of the fact that several of the smaller downtown hotels, like the Virreyes or the more modest Biltmore, which formerly catered to Mexicans only, now offer their more intimate, more Mexican facilities to tourists as well. And if you like quiet, you'll find it in an outlying hotel like the new Comee, which is out Chapultepec Park way but only a three-peso taxi ride from the heart of the city. This place has already earned a reputation for comfort with the niceties (Continued on page 214)

Dates and rates are changeable. Prospective tourists should confirm this information with their travel agents, transportation companies, or hotels.

You'll remember these magnificent commonplaces of Mexico—ubiquitous sombreros and vivid serapes against the ageless grandeur of carved stone.

The latchstring is out. It's Christmas — season of the glad hand, the red carpet, and the open door. So this month's pages concentrate on holiday hospitality. It's the kind you'll enjoy as freely as your guests. If you would play the relaxed, light-hearted host, read on

By Virginia Stanton
House Beautiful's Party Editor

Holiday hospitality

what is it?
what makes it?

Hospitality is the very warp of the glittering fabric of Christmas. For Christmas is implicitly the feast of fellowship, and who can feast and make merry alone? Under the heady influence of the season, few of us can escape the universal urge to throw open house and heart to all who will help us celebrate.

So, during this season of good will, there will be literally millions of parties given by millions of people who want expressly to regale their friends with their hospitality. Some of these parties will succeed brilliantly and be remembered happily for years to come. But, sad to reflect, others will be miserable failures, to be recalled as thumping bores by all who attend and rued by their baffled hostesses.

What makes this difference between success and failure? What is true hospitality?

The dictionary says it is "the entertainment of guests with liberality and kindness." That's a good enough statement so far as intention goes, but woefully inadequate if you want to know how to accomplish this aim.

Just how liberal is liberality? How far should you carry kindness? You can kill with kindness, you know. And liberality can turn into ostentation—and then into embarrassment. And when your guests are embarrassed, you're not being hospitable at all.

Successful entertaining has dozens of nuances—some so subtle that very few people recognize them. And, as you must certainly have noticed, styles in entertaining are changing, too. So that a formula that guaranteed a successful party 20 years ago is not necessarily a good formula to follow today—what with our lack of servants, more informal manners, and the faster tempo of our lives.

Now I dote on parties. I love to give them just as much as I love going to them. But over my many party-giving and party-going years (we won't say how many), I haven't been able to avoid becoming quite clinical about them, observing what succeeeds and what fails.

Here are some of my more important observations. Some look so obvious when seen in cold type, that you may wonder why I bring them up. Yet lots of people don't seem to know these things or they'd plan their parties differently.

Here are my eight guides to successful entertaining:

1. Don't attempt more than you can handle. Don't have more (Continued on next page)

Successful hostesses plan their very furnishings to adapt readily from family living to party-giving. Virginia Conner Dick designed this room and its Grosfeld House furniture people than your dishes, your seating, and your strength permit. "Throwing a big party" is a very chancy way to give a successful party. It is too often a symptom of a "duty party," the sign of someone who doesn't entertain very often and is trying to pay off a big backlog of accumulated obligations.

Dining area of the living room serves family meals. But its sideboard is always ready to become a warming surface for buffet party meals. An electrified glass panel does it.

You don't need space to entertain. These hospitality-packed rooms fit into a 3½-room floor plan. Secret is that furnishings of living room (page 126), its dining area (top), and foyer (opposite) have hidden extra use.

2. You have to have peace of mind. Your mental attitude that you are going to have fun has to be real and not fake. Don't ask me how, but this communicates itself to the guests. Your composure should radiate from you, just as you reveal genuine pleasure at seeing the people you have invited. If you don't have composure and a feeling of pleasure, it is sensed, just as a horse knows when the rider is afraid.

3. How do you get peace of mind? By being completely organized—at several levels. You have to know that your food is going to be superlative, that all your appointments are complete and in order and interesting to look at, that you will not run out of anything, that you have a quick alternative if an accident should spoil anything. To be organized you have to make a business of it and prepare an agenda just as a business man prepares for a conference. Practice (with real parties) is one way to be organized. But if you are new at party-giving, rehearse each detail in your mind. I am sure about this: you must not let the responsibility of being a hostess weigh you down, for it charges the air with something that is not conducive to pleasure. Blank out worry when the party begins. Be an "eager beaver" before —but not during—the party.

4. How do you blank out worry? I've got two answers for that. One way is to have furnishings that are geared for entertaining. The room shown on these pages (126-129) is a perfect example of what I mean. Much of the furniture does double duty at party time, smoothly changing back to its everyday role so that to look at it you'd never suspect its extra-curricular capabilities.

The other way to banish worry is to simplify. Serve fewer dishes, but have them divine. Reduce the amount of clutter and bric-a-brac. Have only one bouquet but have it big, overscale, gorgeous, and original. One simple dish, served dramatically and in a large quantity, produces more of an effect than many complicated recipes served in a mundane way. A big bowl of perfect peaches, sprinkled with fresh cocoanut, and covered with raspberry juice in a big glamorous bowl is simple to make. But it looks wonderful.

How do you operate as a hostess?

Do you give one vast, harrowing party a year, calling in everybody you "owe," to get it over and done with?

This is bad technique, netting you nothing but exhaustion and a houseful of ill-assorted guests. Better to entertain often, in smaller quantity.

Do you contrive to stay with the party instead of hibernating in the kitchen?

Good. Then you know how to plan party menus that need no last-minute pampering, and that's half the fight.

Do you worry your guests by insisting upon "waiting on" them?

They'll be much more at ease if you encourage them to help themselves.

Decorate for Christmas

Decorators show you how to sum up your Christmas welcome in one big, vivid center of interest. Here's holiday brilliance you can achieve for yourself with lights, glitter, and greenery

Isabel Barringer arranges it so that you'll see Christmas instead of yourself in a mantel mirror. Chicken wire is the base. On it are fastened pine boughs and ribbon bows, glistening with white tree lights and silver balls. It's spectacular room lighting for a holiday party, supplemented only by candlelight.

Melanie Kahane's greeting is a miniature candle-lit tree, hung like a wall sconce. Boughs of fireproofed, white-sprayed spruce and candle arms are inserted into a flat triangular block of styrofoam. Then this half-tree is punctuated with gleaming silvery stars.

Old-Fashioned Foods

By Jean Harris

One of the enjoyable parts of the Christmas season is that it encourages you to steep yourself in the traditions of the past. The Christmas legends, music, and decorating practices are all part of our inherited culture. We say they remind us of our childhood. But it goes deeper than that. These customs remind us of the racial and cultural pattern of the whole of western civilization.

If you enjoy this sense of kinship with the past, why not emphasize it even more than is your wont by exploring a few dishes that are as authentically traditional as holly and tinsel? You can heighten this appeal by looking at Christmas food in its original setting, learning how it happened to be the way it is.

Strangely enough, this approach to tradition will not only bring you closer to the past, but it will help you understand present-day food. You cannot be really knowledgeable about food until you realize that the cookery of any given period (that is, food developed at that period) is a reflection on the stage of civilization of that time.

Christmas dishes were not something invented especially for the occasion. They are the typical dishes of seventeenth-century England, which is the time and place where many of our Christmas customs were developed and crystallized. These holiday foods have remained unchanged for 300 years because of their association with the unchanging ritual of Christmas. Christmas foods are, then, historical foods, preserved almost untouched, yet existing in the middle of the living, changing present.

Some of the early dishes have almost disappeared. Even their names are strange: names like "frumenty," "brewis," "brawn" and "souse." As civilization and wealth increased, better food began to be served for the holidays. Boar's head and, later, turkey appeared on the Christmas table for exactly the same reason that the earlier dishes did. They were the best things available at that time.

This was due to the meat situation in the early days. We hardly realize it, but before the Eighteenth Century, not sufficient feed was grown to carry livestock over the winter. The early part of November was killing time, so by Christmas (Continued on page 190)

Here it's Christmas again, with rain, snow, slush, and too many parties. It must be "too many parties" because of the way you feel by January 2. It's a miserable time of the year to me—ideal to go off somewhere shooting and/or fishing—because I don't enjoy being slugged with strong drinks or made sick with sticky ones.

From a woman's standpoint, of course, it's the finest time of the year, with the mad whirl of holiday parties, cocktail parties, little dinners, the opera and concerts at which to wear new cocktail dresses, dinner suits, and lovely gowns. This is her chance to preen and primp her home as well as herself. She can make her home as festive and gay as she wants without the aid of decorators, painters, and paper hangers. With wonderful-smelling pine and firs and all the funny little doodads from the shops, she creates a holiday setting for gaiety with a smartness that no decorator could quite achieve for her.

But the part of this festive picture that galls me is that a woman may do an outstanding job on herself and her house, but when it comes to holiday drinks she too often turns to sticky Tom and Jerries, gooey Egg Nogs, or Hot Buttered Rums that leave rings on your upper lip and taste terrible.

You have probably left many a holiday party so full of sweet guck that you couldn't eat your dinner, your whole evening was ruined, and all you wanted to do was lie down quietly somewhere and die. Don't misunderstand me. In small doses, I'm not against these drinks. But I do believe they are overdone as traditional holiday drinks. There are a great many other old-time drinks of far greater charm, tradition, flavor—and digestibility. A few of them are worth reviving or overhauling to fit present-day living.

The Big Significance

Twenty-five years ago we couldn't have shown you a picture like this. Such stackable, foldable, space-saving tables are the peculiar product of our servantless, space-conscious times.

They are the offspring of the buffet meal, that most popular, modern method of putting out the latch-string, because it can be catered by the hostess alone, served by the guests themselves, eaten anywhere.

These tables indicate how far we have come from the lace-tablecloth thinking of our grandparents, to whom proper hospitality was a matter of servants, dining rooms, and finger bowls. They are, in fact, a new kind of dining table, dedicated to unstilted personal enjoyment instead of to protocol, a temporary eating surface for parties or family snacks which also serves between times as end table, coffee table,

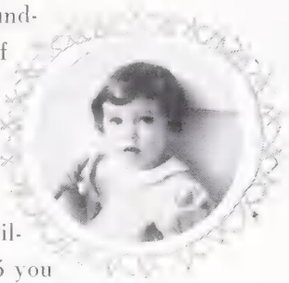
These are the guests of honor, the life of the wonderful party called Christmas

Meet the Guests of Honor



Tumbling, skipping, dancing, they come to the party. In dungarees, sleepers, or Sunday best—no matter, for they're the masters of the revels, monarchs of this realm of love and laughter which we call Christmas, Feast of the Child.

They are your happiness—these drum-beating, doll-cradling gourmets of sugarplums. But look at them, if you can, dispassionately. See their straight, firm little bodies, their brushed and shiny heads, their good, clean clothes. Observe how readily they smile, how clear and unafraid their eyes. These are the products of solicitude and safety. These are the children of America.

But Christmas is the feast of Everychild from pole to pole, and every child deserves to be a guest of honor. Yet those 13,000,000 abandoned little ones of Europe, frightened, hungry, homeless—how will they fare while your young people celebrate? Where is the bounty of candy canes and cookies for the sick and starving babies of the Orient? In the name of your fortunate children, for the future which the whole world's children face together, put these innocents on your guest list.

Contribute to UNICEF (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund), the first cooperative venture of the world's nations to improve the health and happiness of children everywhere with food, clothing, medical care, and social welfare services. $1 brings you 10 of their fund-raising Christmas cards—charming vignettes of childhood, designed by Denmark's Dagmar Starcke. Or give just for the giving. Address: U. S. Committee for the U. N. Children's Fund, New York 16.

Send CARE packages to orphanages and children's villages in Europe and Asia. For $18.75 you provide Christmas dinner for 12; for $10 a box of children's books. Write: CARE, 20 Broad Street, New York 5.

Become a foster parent, the important "somebody to love," to a child who has lost his home and the people who used to cherish him. This moral and financial adoption can mean more to you than giving merely $15 a month for support. Through correspondence you will learn to know this child and he will learn to know you. House Beautiful's Party Editor

I've discovered that nearly every woman's ambition is to give a dinner party without ever leaving the company of her guests. But since nearly every woman is also maidless, she considers this ambition a hopeless dream which she ought to put out of her mind. The trouble is she can't quite manage to forget such a desirable state of affairs.

Now I am no Elsa Maxwell, but I do dote on parties—giving them and going to them. And I can tell you this in no uncertain terms—the school of thought which maintains that a party can only mean a lavish damask tablecloth set with gleaming silver and crystal is made up of a dwindling little band of die-hards.

There are definitely other ways to have guests for dinner. And, if you must double as both cook and hostess, you had better loosen up your mental joints and investigate these other ways.

The only reason for giving a party is to have fun yourself. Somehow this simple fact has been lost sight of during the last few decades when fol-de-rol was stylish. If the thought of giving a party makes you heave a big sigh and say, "It's too much trouble to have guests," just remember this single idea: Your friends would rather come to your house and have a drink and a cracker than not to be asked at all. Parties are for the purpose of seeing and enjoying your friends—not impressing them.

Holiday time should mean lots of parties. Your house looks its gayest, and you are proud of all the clever trimmings you have thought up. Your Christmas decorations are sure to be a conversation item, and that gives any gathering a lift. So, ideally, Christmas should be your time to give lots of parties. But obviously you can't give lots of parties if you make them frightening productions.

The party technique for you, then, is to serve your meals on wheels. This kind of meal can be just as delicious as the more formal kind. In fact, it gives you a fine opportunity to show what a gourmet you are. Because menus for cart-serving must be simple and stripped of frills and side distractions, the two or (Continued on next page) three sophisticated recipes that compose the menu can shine in lustrous splendor and, consequently, be noticed and appreciated. I have found that the small, elegant menu is really a smarter way to honor my guests than the "groaning board"—which also makes me groan, though in a different way.

A meal on wheels is a thoroughly socially acceptable idea, especially now that the informal, serve-yourself buffet has become the rule rather than the exception in party-giving. And now there are so many well-designed serving carts on the market. The old-fashioned tea cart has made a big come-back, but is changed and modernized. You can find it these days in every material from Formica, bamboo, and stainless steel to fine woods, in every style of design from Modern to French Provincial, in every form from the fold-up-and-put-away type to the drop-leaf commode that looks like a chest-server.

It all works like this. You "set the table" (cart to you) in the kitchen, putting out on it all the dishes you will require for the buffet service of the whole meal, and, of course, providing space for the serving dishes that are to contain the food. Try to plan a menu which can be put on the cart in its entirety. If this crowds the cart too much, make a separate serving of the dessert course, since you will be returning to the kitchen anyway with the dishes used in the main course.

One friend of mine got so enthusiastic over this meals-on-wheels system that she had her regular dining room table put on wheels. She now keeps the table in the kitchen, having made her dining room into a library. She sets the table with the usual place settings in the kitchen and moves it with ease all over the house—into the living room, the new library, or out on (Continued on page 207)

Feasts for the Eye

Make your party centerpiece a feast for the eye, and you'll double the glamour of the food you serve. When the eye is gratified, the palate responds lustily and every party's a fete

As sparkly as the champagne under it, is this arrangement to hang from light over your New Year's Eve table. Designed by Patricia Easterbrook Roberts. Crystal from Baccarat, glitter balls courtesy Lord & Taylor. Inspiration for the dancing bubbles, none other than Piper Heidsieck Champagne.

Food and drink are major performers at Christmas galas. So when you bring in the tinsel and evergreens, and fill your house with forest fragrance and the sparkle of stars, don't spare the glamour on the festive board. The eye does half the eating, and a provocative centerpiece can be the life of the party.

It doesn't take masses of flowers or priceless garnitures to make a table memorable. Top-flight flower arrangers did these centerpieces, but see how simple they are. It's not their ingredients but their ideas that make them effective.

For a gay New Year's Eve celebration, contrive a conversation piece, all glitter and airiness, as giddy as the arrangement at left. It's practical, too, because it hangs above the table, leaving serving space free. See how few carnations and roses you need when combined with holly and pine. On the Ladies Day luncheon table, opposite, the roses-in-snowballs double later as fragrant favors. If your buffet is against the wall, keep your decorations tall and narrow, with the branches spraying out flat against the wall rather than crowding the food on the table. Try arrangements in wicker baskets, wood bowls, an old salt box, or any intriguing, unconventional container. And for that expansive Christmas dinner, mix holiday baubles with fruits and greens, highlighting the pineapple—that ancient, appropriately beautiful symbol of hospitality.

See how to make these centerpieces on page 184

How to give the Gifts you'd like to get

The gifts most likely to succeed are those useful but extravagant-seeming "extras" you've always wanted but never bought for yourself. So gift-choosing is a cinch if you're one hostess giving to another, for who knows better than you what the welcome "extras" are? They can be anything from a 25c package of food coloring on up. But whatever you give, make its wrapping a gift in itself, a piece of entertaining originality thrown in just for fun. The chief qualification you need is a willingness to forget convention and kick up your mental heels. You need be no bow-making genius. With cellophane tape and the simplest tying procedures, you can emulate these eight provocative gifts-for-a-hostess.

Hospitality hangs high, its shining symbols airily balanced in a Christmas mobile by Hi Williams. No holiday gewgaw could give you more versatile glitter. For a mobile never really stops moving. The lights and shadows of Christmas

The meaning of the mobile

Do you think of mobiles as occult "things," understandable only to the arty? Then look opposite. These suspended objects are familiar symbols of holiday hospitality. Yet this is just as authentic a mobile as the shadow-flashing abstraction below. Idea behind both is to fill empty space with something which pleases the eye with playful, changing motion as well as form. But objects on a mobile do not dangle haphazardly. Arrangement and balance are carefully calculated so the whole constantly moving composition is always good, seen from any angle. That's where the artistry comes in. Once you understand this, you know what mobiles are about. Photographer Hi Williams, spare-time mobilist, made both.

• Flood your glistening tree in a blaze of light, or shoot a dramatic ray down on your holiday table centerpiece. For this elegant stagecraft, bring the garden spotlight indoors. (If you don't own one, here's a fine pre-Christmas gift to give yourself.) For extra showmanship, get colored filters.

• And remember that filters on your outdoor spotlights can wash your garden with color in the wintry night. To add to the fantasy, string shrubs with multi-color outdoor tree lights.

• From such simple things comes Christmas glamour — a lineup of colored glassware, a glass bowl full of colored glass balls borrowed from your house plants. Conceal light behind them. The result: glowing shadows in technicolor.

• Investigate clear colored plastic baubles which cast tinted shadows. Or make your own from easily bendable, cutable acetate sheeting. The luminescent variety, which seems to glow, gives you two colors in one, plus an added bonus of brightness, because its cut edges "pipe" light. Don't limit this stuff to tree trimmings. Hang it wherever the light will catch it.

• For a mystically gleaming tree, you can get ornaments that react to black light, and black-light tree bulbs to make them glow. There's a luminous paint which glows in black light, too.

• Why restrict the tree lights to the Christmas tree? Use them as twinkling garlands for the front door, the crèche, the dining table, over the mantel, or along the stairway banister.

• For real giddiness, fix a hatbox on turntable of portable phonograph. Cut pattern of holes in lid. Inside put a flashlight or battery light. Cover the box and, as the turntable spins around, Christmas will flicker on your ceiling.

The 3 Basics for easy entertaining

By Mary Elizabeth Wiley and Alexandra Field Meyer

The best party ideas in the world fall flat unless you have the equipment to back them up. But if you have certain "basics," you can breeze through any kind of party without a care in the world. For these are the props that give your menu and your table a visual build-up and keep the party running smoothly. Overscaled serving pieces, like the ones opposite, dramatize the food and give ordinary menus extraordinary importance. Original, seldom-seen accessories, like the Javanese lacquer bowl below, add glamour and make your party different. Behind these theatrical props you need generous-size, thoughtfully selected working equipment like copper and earthenware casseroles, a hot-tray, and a super-size coffee-maker.

Here is a list of good investments for future entertaining. None of it requires last minute care and attention. It is always ready to go.

1 large (five- or six-quart) earthenware marmite or casserole. You can buy this in a copper stand with an alcohol burner, or you can get one that is convertible and becomes a chafing dish, a marmite, or a crêpes suzettes pan.

1 or 2 copper or earthenware casseroles, two- to four-quart capacity.

1 or 2 heat candles, or a hot-tray on which to set the casseroles.

1 chafing dish.

ORIGINAL AND GLAMOROUS APPOINTMENTS

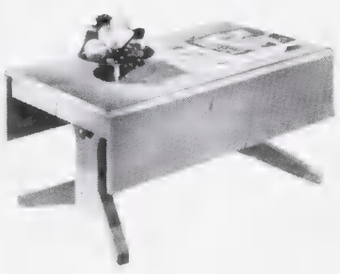
BIG AND VERSATILE SERVING PIECES

Oversized serving pieces are important—not only as food containers but as props that give food a visual build-up. Get servers that are comparable in scale to this six-quart casserole and the 20-inch porcelain platter.

EXTRA APPLIANCES AND EQUIPMENT



These are the things that simplify life for the hostess. For you can't give a party easily with every-day working equipment. How is your pantry fixed for chafing dishes, hot tables, warmers?

A family of three tables disguised as one. As the magic starts, above left, it's a drop-leaf coffee table. Presto—a game or dinette table. Then—with fillers added and the surface raised—you have a complete dining table. Legs at each end add extra support. Knobs smoothly elevate or lower the surface. Furniture on these two pages from Charles R. Sligh Company.

This looks simply like a living-room chest until you discover its hidden skills. Investigation proves it conceals all the necessities for dining: linen, silver, china, a grooved section for trays, a drawer at the base for table fillers. Design is by Herbert Ten Have.

One chest is a self-contained dining room. Clutter-proof drawers are organized to file china, silver, linen as efficiently as a filing cabinet. Then —a brilliant finale—its top opens out, swivels, and the sideboard is a dining table for six.

HOW NOW,

Are you of two minds on the subject of hospitality? Perhaps you may see yourself in this soul-searching confession of a hostess who doesn't entertain half enough

Why I love to entertain

Nobody has more charming, witty, lovable friends than I—or so it seems to me when they're all dressed up in their party clothes telling me what a delightful hostess I am. That's one reason why I like to entertain.

Short of swimming the Channel or tripping up a gunman, nothing makes you the Heroine of the Occasion as surely as being the hostess. What else could I ever do to gain such deference from the gentlemen, such sweet praise from the ladies: "How clever of you to serve the martinis in an old fire bucket!" "How do you make such divine chili sauce?" Call it flattery, if you want to be nasty, but after all, I'm human.

I also love to plan parties—in my head, that is. One of my wingdings is good for about six months of pretty colorful daydreaming before I actually decide to give it. In fantasy I explore all sorts of sumptuous revels, from fancy dress balls to fêtes champêtres. And although I invariably end up giving—guess what—a buffet supper, I've thoroughly enjoyed myself in cloud-cuckoo land. But some day I shall probably kick over the traces and throw pearls in the mixed green salad.

I especially like what happens to our unassuming belongings when I entertain. There's the phenomenon of everything looking clean, orderly, and shiny simultaneously. Usually, when the brass is bright, there's a spot on the rug, or, if the windows are clean, the floors need waxing. But in our house, you can't beat a party for making the housecleaning come out even.

I am enchanted by the unfamiliar, luxurious little vistas that suddenly show up right in my own living room, like demi-tasse cups and flowers on the coffee table, which is normally mulched in magazines and mail; and the strange, pretty glow of the piano when it's lighted by tapers in the old candelabrum (down from the closet for the occasion, and a devil to clean, but worth the effort in sock value). (Continued on page 203)

Why I don't love to entertain

DRAWINGS BY CAROL BLANCHARD

Reason seems to desert me from the minute I think of giving a party to the minute the first guest arrives.

Mad as it sounds, I hate to invite my guests—not because I don't like them, or because I want to put off the evil day, but because I have a crazy fear that everybody will say no. This will give you a good idea of the state of my party-giving confidence.

What I really loathe about entertaining is the way it traps me into giving the house a "thorough cleaning." By this I mean the kind of upheaval my grandmother used to go through twice a year—only she did it in a leisurely three weeks, had people to help her, and then took a fortnight's rest at the end of it. But not me. I must romp through the window washing, floor waxing, silver polishing, dish and glass cleaning (to name a few bare essentials) in the hours from dusk to dawn for as many nights beforehand as I remain conscious. There's usually a purgatory of a week end in there, too. And the next day, guess who's cooking the casserole, peeling the shrimp, baking an enormous cake, and greeting the guests with her last gasp!

Party food bedevils me, too. I am a wistful reader of the articles on simplifying the menu for easy entertaining. Have one wonderful dish, they say, and that's what I aim to do. But at the eleventh hour, this divine stew I've been whipping up with sour cream and provocative herbs in it suddenly looks like Sunday dinner in a concentration camp, and I'm off at a lope to buy a turkey or a tongue to "fill in with." This naturally puts me right back in the harried hostess department.

You could probably feed the Smith family reunion on what it costs me to give a buffet supper for eight. To begin with, there is a tradition in our house that you can't give a party without whipped cream, cherries, capers, marrons, and salted almonds. (Continued on page 204)

New coffee tables are no mere ash tray and cigarette-box holders. These 6 versatile, expansive pieces could cater any hospitality from demi-tasse to sit-down dinner. They're as space-giving as an extra room

YOU CAN SERVE A CROWD

This manzanita-wood table can serve a buffet supper. Its top slides apart disclosing a cork-lined compartment for hot dishes, and a candle-warmer for coffee. There's plenty of space for spread-out silver and china on its top extensions. Lower shelf could also serve. Brown-Saltman Furniture.

Will it be a push-button

By Robert W. Carrick

Christmas at your house?

Do you know Mrs. Poppins, Daddy?" I had just said good-night, my hand was on the doorknob. "Mrs. Poppins comes with the west wind." I hesitated. On came the light, out came a book. "See, Mrs. Poppins just laughs and laughs and puts up her umbrella and flies wherever she wants. She's really wonderful."

There was more talk of this fabulous lady and her bumbershoot, but my mind wasn't on the conversation. I suddenly realized how wonderful Mrs. Poppins was. For she had brought a breath of fresh air into a roomful of comic books. A gentle, whimsical tale instead of a blood-and-thunder thriller had stimulated my child's imagination.

The book about Mrs. Poppins had been a Christmas present, but it hadn't come from Mummy or Daddy. Maybe we hadn't been so smart about our kids' presents.

I began to look around the house at the things the kids played with. There was the television set, of course: electric trains complete with an engine that whistles and smokes: a small automobile with lights and electric controls: a fair-sized doll with four changes of clothes and built-in squalling and pants-wetting gadgets. And so it went, down through the comic books—where pictures take the place of words and the child does almost no reading or visualizing.

It didn't take a child psychologist to tell me why the children's imagination had begun to dry up, why they didn't make anything with their hands. The stuff that dreams are made of just wasn't there. And there wasn't anything to build—no hunk of wood and some wheels—everything was complete, a scale-model Packard wrapped in cellophane. Nothing called for participation on the part of the youngsters. They could just sit, push buttons, and watch their mechanized environment perform. They didn't have to use their heads, hands, or ingenuity. It was all take—no give.

This wasn't what you would call a healthy situation for the kids. Comics were taking the place of Kipling; oars were outmoded by outboards; and watching televised hockey instead of playing it was fast becoming a regular habit.

Being human, I looked around for someone to blame. The president of one of the outstanding toy stores in the country lived near by. I descended on him. "Why don't you sell sensible, stimulating toys? Why can't I buy a simple set of blocks that can be a castle one day, a train the next?"

"We have things like that in the store, but nobody buys them. We'll sell anything the market demands, but you parents make the market.

"You—and the grandparents—insist on buying the latest electronic gadget. You buy things much too old for your children, and you shop to suit your taste instead of the child's.

"Another thing nobody seems to realize is that parents get more things than any child needs. And remember this," he said, "you parents are just too busy for your children. Games ought to be one of our biggest sellers. But they don't sell because parents are afraid they'll have to play them. There are plenty of examples . . ."

Well, he had me. We hadn't really given much thought to what our kids' toys had been doing to them. So this year we'll skip the doll house with hot and cold running water and look for things like craft sets for working in leather, metal, and clay; sewing kits to make dolls' dresses; young records designed to make them get into the act—things that have to be worked on, mentally or physically, before they can be enjoyed.

TOO COLD?

1. Do you think your heating plant is too small?

THE TROUBLE

Unlikely. Heating plant is usually planned for extreme cold weather; should be ample for normal winter weather.

THE FIX

Before installing larger heating plant, check on all other reasons why your house is chilly. Then get a good heating man to check your system and "tune it up" for winter.

BUILD IT RIGHT

Modern, well-engineered heating plants are more efficient than older, cruder ones. You save in the long run by buying a good one.

2. Are some rooms warm enough, others always cold?

THE TROUBLE

Most likely reasons: 1. Thermostat located in room where heating is most effective or where big south window lets in sun-heat. Shuts off furnace before other rooms have become warm. 2. Unbalanced heating ducts or pipes supply heat more easily to some rooms than others.

THE FIX

Relocate thermostat at a cooler spot which is more representative of the house as a whole. Partly blanket off radiator or hot air register in warmest room. Have an expert rebalance heating ducts or pipes, by blocking too-easy flow of heat to warmest rooms.

BUILD IT RIGHT

Install the more elaborate "thinking" type of thermostat, or several thermostats. Especially important if house has rooms with large south windows, strongly sun-heated in sunny weather, quickly chilled when sun stops shining. Accurate, responsive control of heat is almost as important as heat itself, and in the long run saves fuel.

3. Is your house exposed to cold winds?

THE TROUBLE

The colder your winter, the bigger is the heat loss caused by exposure to strong winds. On a really cold, very windy day you burn about twice as much fuel as you burn on an equally cold but perfectly calm day.

THE FIX

Weather-stripping. Storm sash. Ivy or other plants grown on north and west sides of house slow down the flow of cold air over outside surface of wall and reduce heat loss. Plant windbreak trees or hedge to windward.

BUILD IT RIGHT

Windbreak carefully planned with close regard to direction(s) of coldest wind(s). Site selected with regard to existing windbreaks. One-story house can be more easily shielded from wind than two-story one.

4. Does heated air escape upward through staircase to attic?

THE TROUBLE

If cold draft comes down your stairs, a corresponding current of warm air is sure to flow up. Investigate with cigarette smoke.

THE FIX

Close channels by which heated air escapes upward. If stairs rise out of living space, partition them off, making a separate stairwell. Install doors (or curtains) to slow the flow of warm air upstairs.

BUILD IT RIGHT

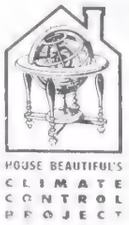
Arrange all upward ventilation outlets—needed in most parts of the country for summer ventilation—so that they can be closed off in winter. (See "The Fix" at left.)

5. Are cold window panes stealing your heat?

THE TROUBLE

A cold window pane acts like a fire in a fireplace, only in reverse, cooling instead of warming. It chills you two ways: It chills the air in the room, and it also chills you directly by radiant cooling. Chilled air causes drafts. Radiant cooling effect also feels like a draft. (See also "The Trouble" under questions 6 and 9.)

THE FIX



Storm sash or double glazing. Light curtains to pull across window in daytime; heavy draperies to pull at night as insulation and radiation shield. Heat-reflective lining makes draperies more effective. Install electric radiant heating panel or heat lamp near window, so that it radiates heat at you from the same direction from which window "radiates cold."

BUILD IT RIGHT

The bigger a window, the more important become double or triple glazing, heavy or reflective draperies, a radiant heat source located near window. Remember all windows are cool in cloudy weather and at night. But south windows help heat the house when sun shines. Therefore make south windows big, keep others small.

By Wolfgang Langewiesche

you answer "yes" to any of these ten questions, then you'd tter find out what Climate Control can do for you this winter

6. Do cold walls give you the shivers?

HE TROUBLE

ike a cold window pane, a cold wall chills you n two ways: by chilling the air in the room and by subjecting you to radiant cooling. The radiant cooling is often mistaken for a draft. It chills that ide of you which is turned toward the cool wall.

THE FIX

Add insulation. If that's not possible, paste reflective aluminum foil on cold wall, shiny side toward room. Then hide foil behind all-wall drapery. Hang electric radiant heating panel on cold wall.

BUILD IT RIGHT

Well insulated walls. Extra insulation on cold-wind side of house. Heating registers, radiators, fireplace, radiant heating panels located on outside wall of room, not on partition wall. This costs more for ducting or piping, but gives more evenly distributed comfort conditions.

7. Do you want more winter sunshine?

HE TROUBLE

Maybe you haven't enough south-facing glass. Winter sun shining in south window has great heating power. Large parts of the United States have much winter sun. (The Southwest, the Great Plains, Mississippi Valley, the South, Florida.) Even in other regions, the coldest weather is often sunny, and big south windows can help heat the house.

THE FIX

Cut evergreens which obstruct winter sunshine. Enlarge south windows or break new ones, and wall up north or west windows. Note: the bigger the windows and the colder the winter climate, the more important are double glazing, heavy draperies. (See 5 in "The Fix" column, for heat conservation when sun does not shine.)

BUILD IT RIGHT

Concentrate window area as much as possible on south side of house. Use big south windows. They help heat the house. Make east, north, and west windows small. They make house hard to heat. Note: To let sun-heat save you fuel, you need a heating plant that turns off quickly when the sun comes out, comes on quickly when sun goes behind clouds. (See "Build It Right" under question 2.)

8. Are cold floors making you uncomfortable?

THE TROUBLE

1. Unlikely reason: Cold seeping up through floor because of poor design. 2. More likely reason: Layer of cool air lies on the floor, while warm air floats above. (Take thermometer readings at 1-inch level and at 5-foot level. Difference should not be greater than 5° F.)

THE FIX

1. Carpet. 2. Small fire in fireplace may have big warming effect by sucking in the cool air. Other remedies depend on heating arrangements and layout of house. Call in expert.

BUILD IT RIGHT

Heated floor is desirable. But floor warmer than 75° F. is unhealthy, uncomfortable. If winter climate is cold, keep floor at 70° F. Use additional heat outlets to keep house warm enough.

9. Are you continually bothered by drafts?

THE TROUBLE

Fundamental cause: Contrast between warm indoor air and cold outside air. There are two kinds of drafts: 1. Downflow of indoor air which has been cooled by contact with cold window pane or cold wall. 2. Inflow of cold air from outdoors through cracks or open joints.

THE FIX

1. Double glazing or storm sash on window. More insulation in wall. 2. Weather-stripping. Stop warm air from escaping up stairs, so less cold air will be sucked into house on ground floor. Windbreak hedge or trees to protect house from cold winds.

BUILD IT RIGHT

Fundamental remedy for drafts: Design house so that it is comfortable with cooler air. Overly warm air promotes drafts. People overheat in order to counteract the radiant-cooling effect of cold walls and window panes. Better insulated walls and double-glazed windows mean comfort at cooler air temperature.

10. Do you think your outdoor season is too short?

THE TROUBLE

Cause: In fall, winter, and spring, sunny weather is usually cool and windy; mild weather is usually cloudy and wet.

THE FIX

Find spot on south side of house, close to house so that house wall acts as a sun reflector. Rig up windbreak to keep this spot calm.

BUILD IT RIGHT

Plan house so that house itself acts as windbreak and sun reflector, making "sunpocket" more efficient for more of the year.

Climate Control--indoors and out—can make your existing home more livable.

The best Christmas gift for the family – a better back yard

See what one young couple did to convert a run-down yard into a home playground for themselves and their two small boys. Christmas is a good time to give your family a similar present. Have plans drawn this winter

BEFORE

House Beautiful's Garden Editor

The Irving Levins bought a big old, run-down shingle house. Its garden had once been extensive, with grape arbors, cutting beds, and shrub borders, but everything had been neglected for years. You had to fight your way in or out.

Garden designed by Lawrence Halprin, Landscape Architect

The Levins wanted play space for active boys, privacy, and a swimming pool. They preferred large areas of paving and little lawn to mow, and substituted permanent plantings in many foliage colors for flowers.

Swimming pool is key to whole arrangement. It is completely enclosed by fencing so that neighbor children won't wander in and swim when the pool is unattended. Note night lighting (opposite page) for after-dark use. Small pool like this can be bought ready-made (steel) or poured or sprayed in place (concrete).

Levin lot slopes slightly to the rear, so Landscape Architect Lawrence Halprin terraced it into three levels, segregating activities—main terrace at house, swimming pool and its terrace, and the hidden rear area for garden service and roughhouse play. This design trick makes a small lot appear much larger.

You can do away with fussy flowers without giving up garden color. Here permanent plantings or ornamental grasses and tufted ground covers contrast with the all-season colors provided by the fence, seat, paving.

Swimming pool has its own terrace to encourage you to rest in the fresh air or sunbathe. Plants are confined to raised beds to keep them up out of the way of active children who are engaged in exciting sport.

Every back yard needs a well thought-out garden work center hidden from view. Cluster here all the work and storage activities so that your garage is freed for service as a home for your automobiles.

"It took 2 Houses to teach us the Value of Plywood Subflooring"

"Everyone profits by experience. That certainly was true when Chris and I built our first house. We helped plan it. Even helped select the materials.

"Some things worked out fine. Some didn't. We splurged on floor coverings—bought the best. But we economized—or thought we did—on things like subflooring. Mistake! After we moved in, we found our floors began to develop little humps and hollows. And they squeaked like a haunted house.

"It's going to be different in our new house. Our architect told us about plywood. It's far and away the best for subfloors, he said. Makes floors look better, last longer. The big panels lay flat and stay flat. That's because plywood won't cup, shrink, swell, warp or squeak. It keeps out drafts. Makes floors warmer, too.

"Our builder agreed—said you can't beat plywood subfloors for strength and firmness. It even means extra protection against windstorm and earthquake. And happy news! We found when you add up all the costs, plywood is as economical as it is practical. Our plywood subfloor was laid in less than half the time needed for other materials."

gives you more for your money when you decorate your home

A LITTLE EXTRA GLASS means a lot of extra charm. For a very small amount of money, glass will add a very large amount of beauty, smartness and downright livability to your home. A simple application of Pittsburgh Plate Glass in any room is often enough to transform the room entirely, to give it completely new appeal. The room at right, for example, has taken on fresh life and charm, thanks to the addition of a built-in mantel mirror of Pittsburgh Polished Plate Glass. (Don't overlook, either, the magic decorating power of colorful Pittsburgh Paints.)

WALLS OF TWINDOW, Pittsburgh's window with built-in insulation, provide an excellent example of how much glass can do for a room's attractiveness. For here, glass actually makes the outdoors your interior decorator . . . lets Nature get into the act! And while permitting perfect clarity of vision, Twindow insulates your home against the weather. If insulation is not required, regular Pittsburgh Polished Plate Glass may be used for large windows. page are a few of the oldtime favorites, some served in the way they were in bygone days, others served untraditionally enough to provoke delighted comment among the guests. They had their place in the sun at Christmastime or some other part of the holiday season. These containers we show them in here are collector's items, but something can always be found to match them in feeling and elegance. The shops are full of odd mugs, glassware, and punch cups in which to serve drinks if you just use a little imagination and take the time to search them out. Anybody can be ordinary and just grab the first full glass. But if you'll poke around in out-of-the way places, antique shops and import shops, you can select your own containers for different kinds of drinks. Never mind what the books say. An interesting container is half the pleasure of good food and good drink. So invite your imagination.

These ancients were served during an age of gracious living of a type that is fast disappearing, because it depended upon leisure and much help. Today we achieve the same results with a gayer approach. There are short-cuts to the same flavor, bottled and prepared mixes to save time, and electrical and mechanical servants to make the job easier.

The New Year's loving cup is an excellent drink, but you may have trouble finding all the ingredients, unless you are a gourmet with a big herb shelf. I'd make it ahead of time and pour it over ice in a punch bowl just before midnight and then ladle it into silver loving cups, one for each couple to drink the New Year in—a sentimental, tender gesture that never grows old.

New Year's Loving Cup
(Serves 12)

1 bottle champagne
½ bottle Madeira
¼ pint Cognac
1½ pints water
¼ lb. loaf sugar
2 lemons
A few leaves of balm
2 or 3 sprigs of borage
(If you haven't these last two items, make it without any herbs and taste. Maybe you'll get an idea of what to add that you do have.)

Rub the peel off 1 lemon with some lumps of sugar, then remove every particle of pith, also the rind and pith of the other lemon. Slice lemons very thin. Put balm, borage, sliced lemons, and all the sugar into a jug, add water, Madeira, and Cognac. Cover and surround with ice and let mixture stand for about one hour. In the meantime, ice the champagne and combine with the rest of the ingredients when ready to serve.

If you don't want to proceed with balm and borage, try this recipe.

New Year's Loving Cup No. 2
(Serves 25)

3 bottles champagne
1 bottle Port wine
1 bottle Curaçao
½ bottle brandy
½ bottle Benedictine

Combine Port, Curaçao, brandy and Benedictine and pour over large pieces of ice in a punch bowl. When ready to serve, add champagne which has been iced. Stir well and ladle into cups.

One of the fussbudgets of the Victorian era was a sort of rum ice known as Roman Punch which was served in dainty little-handled cups and eaten with small spoons. I don't see much point to it but it would probably go great at an all-girl gathering. Or it might be nice as a sherbet-like refresher between dances at a chi-chi ball.

Roman Punch
(Serves 20-25)

1 gallon water
2 lbs. loaf sugar
1½ pints lemon juice
1 quart Jamaica rum
½ pint brandy
1 quart bottle American champagne

Mix and freeze hard.

A similar idea was Lalla Rookh, combining French vanilla ice cream and Jamaica Rum. Personally, I don't like to freeze a drink and eat it with a spoon. But there are times when elderly people or ladies who don't drink much are among your guests and this and the Roman Punch would make a suitable refreshment.

Lalla Rookh

To each pint of French ice cream add one wine-glass of Jamaica rum. This may be added before the cream is frozen or after it is frozen, in which case it should be beaten into the cream.

Black Velvet

Black Velvet had always sounded awful to me. Not the name but the mixture—Guinness's Stout, a malt beverage from the Emerald Isle, and champagne, nectar of the gods. I've been turning my nose up at it for years, but everyone makes mistakes. In a spirit of defiance and to settle a long-standing argument, I finally tried it.

It is a wonderful drink, palatable, smooth, and refreshing, and I had to eat crow. A drink has to look good to be good and this princely concoction just has to be served in a pilsener-type glass of 8- or 10-oz. capacity. Chill your Guinness's Stout and ice your champagne. Then pour half and half, a bottle in each hand. That's all there is to it. A plush drink with a beautiful, creamy head that's simple and quick to prepare. It will surprise your guests and delight them—a hard-to-find combination when everybody gets around so much these days.

Mead

Mead, a fermented mixture of honey, hops, and malt, has a Saxon derivation, usually identified with honeymoons or similar festive celebrations, but considered swank and traditional. It is now imported from Denmark where it is a Christmas tradition and to keep it in character with its Viking past, it is shown in a horn goblet. Authenticity and tradition are its only merits, as far as I am concerned, but there are people who set a very high value on both of those and on this sweet honey wine, too. And who am I to say they are wrong!

The Farmer's Bishop, Glögg, Mulled Cider, Mulled Wine, American Grog, and Vin Chaud (not pictured) are traditional hot drinks for Christmas and cold weather. They make a good change of pace from the whisky-and-soda routine, are not sickeningly sweet, and make a good show if properly prepared and presented to your guests.

Hot drinks, however, have a singleness of purpose, and I mean just that. They are not intended for a two- or three-hour session. No matter how cool the room, you'll get yourself thoroughly fried and so sticky and warm you can't stand it after three or four of these. Hot ones are for short gatherings, a toast, a cup of cheer for holiday callers. It's easy to keep them warm, and as your guests come and go for an "open house" give them a hot drink to send them on their way rejoicing.

The Farmer's Bishop, festive, traditional and hot, is slightly reminiscent of the English Wassail Bowl, except that spiced baked oranges are used instead of apples. It's a little trouble to make, but once you've gone through the preliminaries, the service is simple, because any hot drink can be prepared according to directions and then poured into a chafing dish and kept hot over a very small flame.

Farmer's Bishop
(Serves 15)

6 navel oranges stuck with eight cloves each
1 quart heated apple brandy (Bellows Calvados)
2 tablespoons sugar
½ gallon almost boiling cider
½ teaspoon each ground cloves and nutmeg
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Bake oranges slowly an hour. Place in a heated punch bowl. Prick oranges with fork. Pour over them the heated apple brandy and sugar. Light brandy, burn a few seconds, then douse with a half gallon of almost boiling cider, stirring in the spices. Reheat for refills in a chafing dish.

Mulled Cider is a Yankee concoction as old as the hills. About the only thing I can think to do with it is serve it to a Sunday School party, but there are those who want to be hospitable without alcohol, so here is how.

Mulled Cider
(Serves 6)

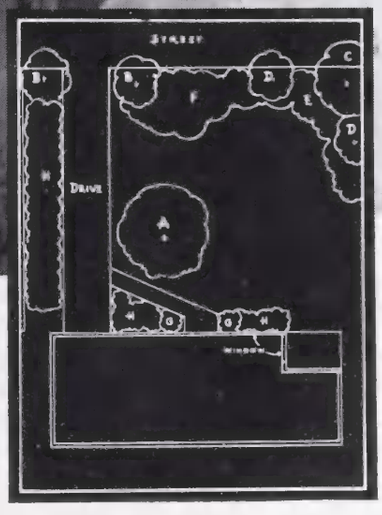
2-inch stick cinnamon
6 whole cloves
1 quart cider
¼ cup brown sugar

Tie whole spices in cheesecloth bag. Drop bag into kettle of hot cider with sugar added and let it simmer until cider is spicy enough. Serve in mugs with a dash of freshly grated nutmeg.

Better a Mulled Wine for my dough!

Mulled Wine
(Serves 6)

1 quart wine
Peel of 1 lemon
Peel of 1 orange
Spices to taste
1 tablespoon sugar



If ground spices are used, cook 1 to 2 teaspoons of them with the lemon and orange peels and sugar in 1 cup water until flavor is well dissolved and then add wine. It is even better to use one crushed, but not grated nutmeg, one stick cinnamon, 2 or 3 inches in length, and a half dozen cloves; boil them with sugar and peels in the wine and strain out. With heavy wines—Madeira, port or sherry—heat to the desired temperature and serve

AS IT IS. Here is a common situation in a new community. You don't know what your "picture" will be in a few months. It would be wise to assure yourself a permanent view worthy of fine windows.

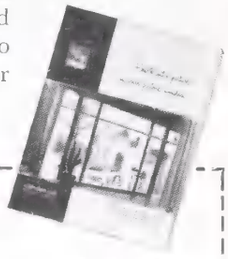
AS IT COULD BE, with the planting shown in the plan at left. This is typical of the practical, simple suggestions in the book below. Before-and-after scenes show basic plantings you can adapt to beautify and improve your property

PLANTING PLAN:

All the plans are simple and can be undertaken in easy, convenient steps.

- A—Oak
- B—Thorn
- C—Dogwood or magnolia
- D—Holly
- E—Deciduous azalea
- F—Double-file viburnum and Japanese quince
- G—Japanese Holly
- H—Perennials and annuals

LET NATURE PAINT A MURAL IN YOUR WINDOW



First, of course, you need a large, unobstructed window for framing the "picture". If you have small windows now, perhaps there is space between them for a picture window. If they are side by side, you could replace them with a big picture window of *Thermopane insulating glass.

With such a window, you can plan your exciting, ever-changing outdoor mural to glorify it. "How to Put a Picture in Your Picture Window" is a beautifully illustrated book that tells what to do. It contains planting plans designed by a leading landscape architect to cover all kinds of situations, and they can be adapted to your property no matter how narrow or shallow your lawn.

The book also contains suggestions—do's and don'ts—for arranging your furniture to create the best picture inside and to make your big window a truly decorative feature.

And to help you enjoy the greatest physical comfort from your window in winter, this book explains how to use Thermopane to reduce chilliness, drafts and condensation, how to cut fuel bills without the bother of storm sash. The advantages of Thermopane are especially important in small rooms where a picture window may cause discomfort if it isn't insulated.

immediately. Do not allow the wine to boil, as this detracts from the flavor. With light wines, such as claret and Burgundy, the mixture may be allowed to simmer over a low flame 5 to 10 minutes.

And still better a Vin Chaud, the way my French-Canadian father used to make it.

Vin Chaud
(Serves 6)

1 bottle of claret
3 oz. Cognac
1 whole stick cinnamon, 3 inches long
12 whole cloves
Rind of half an orange
¼ cup sugar

Pour ingredients into a saucepan and just bring to a boil. Pour into a chafing dish and set before your guests. When it's about to boil again, set afire and stir until the flames flicker and die down. Ladle into warmed cups. It is delightful and soothing, a good nightcap to put you in a state of complete surrender, if you know what I mean.

Glögg, a spiced hot wine with brandy or aquavit, stems from Sweden and is their traditional and beloved cup of cheer. Good for a ceremonious act by the host.

Glögg
(Serves 20)

2 bottles of Mountain Red Wine
1 cup blanched almonds
1 cup raisins
1 stick cinnamon
10 whole cardamons
5 cloves
1 piece ginger root
12 lumps sugar
1 pint brandy or aquavit

Bring wine, with raisins, almonds, and spices tied in a bag, to a simmering point but do not boil. Remove bag of spices. Next take your Glögg grill (or any piece of metal mesh) and place it over the bowl containing the hot wine. Place on the grill a dozen lumps of sugar, start slowly pouring a pint of brandy or aquavit over the sugar. As the sugar absorbs the liquor, set fire to it, and continue pouring. As sugar melts, put out the flames and dump what sugar remains into bowl. Keep bowl hot with a low burner or alcohol lamp, and serve in preheated mugs.

Grog has always been associated with the seaman's ration of liquor. In both the English and American Navies of Revolutionary days it was rum and water. American Grog is a refined version for home use, traditionally served, I am told, at New Year's in some circles on the Atlantic Coast.

American Grog
(Serves one)

1 oz. Jamaica Rum (or brandy if you prefer)
2 lumps sugar
2 whole cloves
Juice of ½ lemon
1 stick of cinnamon
Slice of lemon

Mix in heated mug; add boiling water and stir well.

I have a couple of favorite hot drinks, particularly relaxing at bedtime, but equally good for a small group when the occasion seems to call for something hot. Tom and Jerries are good, but complicated to make if you're having just a few people. To me a Rum Cow is far superior and it's easily prepared.

Rum Cow
(Serves one)

1 oz. fresh, rich sweet milk
1 oz. cream
1 oz. white rum or Jamaica rum
1 teaspoon sugar
Dash of vanilla extract

Heat the ingredients in a saucepan, just to the boiling point, then pour into an electric blender, which has been preheated with boiling water, and let it swirl for a moment or two. Pour into a preheated mug and serve with a dash of nutmeg. For a Brandy Cow, substitute brandy for rum. Omit the liquor and you have a good drink for children any cold day.

My other favorite is made with Drambuie, which is a Benedictine type of liqueur made with a Scotch whisky base instead of Cognac, which gives it the smoky flavor of Scotch whisky. A sweet little old lady gave me this recipe many years ago and told me it was the favorite drink of the natives of the Falkland Islands. It is wonderfully comforting when you are cold and tired, so I named it Falkland Island Warmer.

Falkland Island Warmer
(Serves one)

1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon sugar
1 oz. Drambuie
Hot water

Mix lemon juice and sugar in an old-fashioned glass; add Drambuie and hot water and stir.

e now come to Fish House ch. The formula comes from nstown, New York, where Sir iam Johnson originated it in home called Fish House, and intended to be made and served punch bowl. You can't find hing more typically American better in my book.

am a strong believer in hes. First of all, they are a end to those who don't like taste of liquor. A lot of people t, and we should pay some ntion to them. You can make unch ahead of time, pour it ottles and store it in the reerator to pour over ice in ses, or pour it over a cake of in a punch bowl. To me, a ch bowl of silver or fine crystal ie answer to modern entertain- It has beauty, ease of prepara- and service. It eliminates the l for someone to tend bar and individual drinks, cuts down lass-washing, and adds warmth conviviality to any group.

ou can put a punch bowl in r living room, dining room, or lcove. You can decorate it with istmas greens, holly, or tree ments. You can make it the center attraction and have your guests in your arms right from the beginning. People like them, and I speak from experience.

Last September I was asked to "do" a benefit (professionally arranged) for the Children's Hospital. It was to be a luau for 300 people. After a little coaxing on the part of the committee, I took out my large wooden punch bowl, six feet long, canoe-shaped and carved. I had one of my bartenders make a punch similar to a Fish House Punch. This same benefit was given the year before, which I attended as a guest, and highballs were served throughout the afternoon and late evening. This year I was there as a laborer (at least that was what my wife thought), so I know what went on. After the receipts were counted, we found that the punch bowl took in more money than the highballs.

Tonga Punch
(Serves 20-25)

1 quart orange juice
1 pint lemon juice
Juice of 8 limes
1 pint orange Curaçao
1 quart light Puerto Rican Rum
4 oz. Grenadine

Mix in gallon jug; pour into punch bowl over chipped ice and stir thoroughly about 30 minutes before serving time. Add large pieces of ice. Float 5 or 6 small gardenias.

If a punch is made properly and tastes good, there is no reason to fight shy of it. It's a lot easier, too. Once you have your punch made you're through, but you have to make every highball that you serve individually.

There is a new item on the market, not exactly new perhaps, but it has just begun to appear on grocery shelves throughout the country. Its color and flavor are particularly appropriate for the Christmas season, and it lends itself superbly to gin and vodka. I've created a simple punch from it, and because of its color I suggest it be served in a crystal bowl and cups. There's hardly any work to it. I hope you try it.

Cranberry Christmas Punch
(Serves 12-15)

16 oz. cranberry juice
8 oz. Vodka
2 oz. Rose's lime juice
8 oz. water
4 level teaspoons sugar

Mix with plenty of ice in a glass punch bowl.

For a very informal party, or a gathering where you haven't had much time to plan ahead, I suggest a wine cup. Everyone has an oversize glass pitcher which will hold a bottle of wine. Drop a slice of orange, a slice of lemon and a slice of canned pineapple into the pitcher; add three large sprigs of mint and add an ounce of Benedictine and an ounce of peach or apricot brandy. If you haven't either, substitute an ounce of Curaçao. Add cracked ice and muddle with a long stick until the ice has crushed the fruit and mint thoroughly. Fill the pitcher with a bottle of good sauterne, decorate with a few sprigs of mint and serve in wine glasses. Make another pitcherful as needed and simply refill your guests' glasses when they are ready for more. It's simple, refreshing, and a lovely drink.

A wine cup, when you're having a winter's evening of bridge, is nice to have handy on a little side table. Everyone can help himself when his glass runs out and it will save you from getting up to make highballs. By the time you get back your seat is cold and you have to start all over again.

The whole thought today is to do things simply. People get life so blamed complicated with fancy service. I've been to several parties this summer, and even during the winter, where my host made a whole pitcherful of Tom Collinses. He made the original set-ups and then a pitcherful and just refilled the glasses, adding more ice as needed.

Last Christmas I attended a function given by a doctor friend of mine. This man has an a Christmas party of from thi four hundred people. At on of the table was a bowl o Fashioneds. They were made of time and bottled and pou needed over cracked ice. Int Old-Fashioned glass was ladl mix and more ice so that n ever had a warm or weak and the mix in the bowl became too diluted. a parting shot, there's one to remember and for gosh- don't forget it. The original ght in giving these little holi- affairs is to entertain your ds, not murder them with g drinks. How often I hear one say, "Golly, I'd like to Bill's house, but he always you." Get away from it com- ly. Nothing makes your guests miserable. HOLIDAY HOSPITALITY overscale everything about the d. Prepare much too much food d serve it in extra big contain-. This is an optical trick, which kes any party look like an ra-special occasion, and the ests sense, without ever realizing y, that they are present at an portant event. After the party just pop the extra food into freezer and you have saved urself some work on next week's ner preparations.

Most people serve too many dif-ent kinds of things, trying to ow off how liberal and kind they . Result is, they trip over their n preparations. So the trick is simplify.

5. Learn to be an astute show-n. But be sure your ideas are l theater and not merely side-w techniques. Don't go in for hotel-like tricks of great blocks ice or radishes cut in rosettes. n't do what other people do. e most important thing is to be ginal. Slice a loaf of bread in different way. Give cucumbers a w shape by scoring the rind be-e slicing.

Use any device that brings out character of the food itself. t it in a serving platter or bowl t dramatizes its color or tex-re. To do this, you need a com-te wardrobe of china, linen, and ssware—not the multi-pieced s of Grandmother's day, but a lanced collection of many differ-. but combinable, patterns, col-. and shapes. This increases r repertoire as a showman. It's wherewithal to make your nus as pleasing to the eye as y are to the palate.

6. Have four menus that you ve perfected and are utterly con-nt about. Because you know the tine, you save time in prepara-n. You also build up that peace of mind I spoke of because you know you have a sure thing. So don't experiment on your guests. Don't try to impress them with an untried sequence of fancy dishes.

7. Greet your guests with enthusiasm and assurance. Nothing is more deflating than to enter a room full of people and not be greeted by either host or hostess. So you and your husband should decide beforehand who is going to stay near the door to greet and introduce guests as they come in.

In one family I know, the host is one of those naturally affable, outward-going people, so he takes the responsibility of greeting and introducing guests, since his wife is a little shy. In our house, I take over the job of official greeter because my husband has a difficult time remembering names.

8. Selection of guests is as important as the selection and preparation of food. Know your guests and their likes and dislikes. Invite people who like informal things to your big informal gatherings—your formal friends should come to your smaller, statelier parties. For the success of a party depends on whether your friends enjoy themselves and each other. I have found that people, especially as they get older, enjoy themselves more if the party is not all of the same age group. It is different with the very young (people in their twenties). It's amusing, but worth noting in your party-planning book, how a man in his sixties can turn into a gay charmer with a couple of attractive girls in their thirties sitting beside him. Of course, you should have several people of the same interests that can get together and share stimulating conversation. But be sure to toss in a few young people to add their liveliness to your party.

It's beautiful Blue Ridge Patterned Glass. Regal . . . rich . . . dramatically distinctive. It passes light from room to room . . . yet provides privacy. It decorates two rooms at once . . . yet never needs refinishing. It always looks brand new.

Have fun with this exciting new idea. Let your imagination be your guide. Maybe a rippling panel of patterned glass between kitchen and breakfast nook. Perhaps a classic, fluted design beside the front door. Or in the door itself. And why not make your vanity table a private little dressing room? . . . all you'll need is a stand-up screen of shimmering patterned glass.

See all twenty glorious patterns . . . textured, linear, checkered . . . subtle or bold. You'll find it costs amazingly little to add that touch of dramatic distinction, with Blue Ridge Patterned Glass.

YOU CAN SERVE A CROWD FROM A COFFEE TABLE

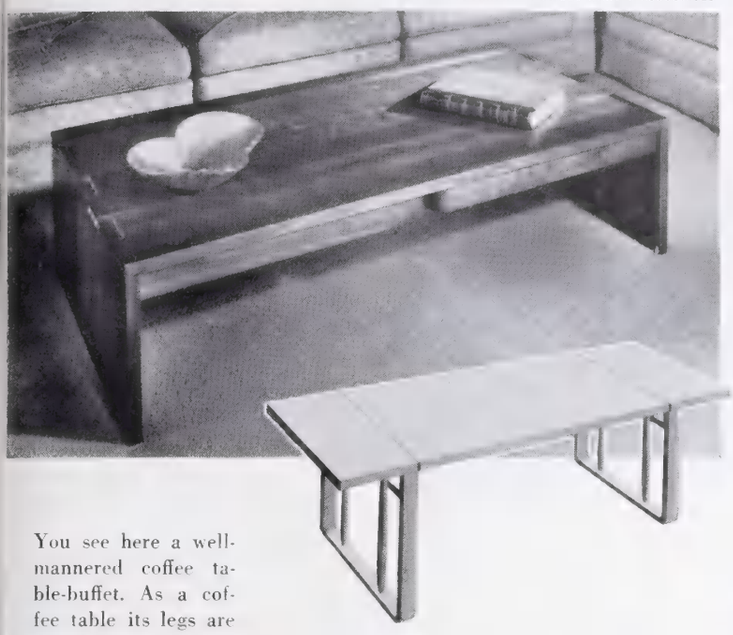
This table is named "Modern Magic." When it is closed you would never suspect that opened section holds glasses, and has storage for tall bottles. Top is roomy enough for buffet service. Dessert and coffee can be set out on lower shelves. Rock-Ola Manufacturing Company.

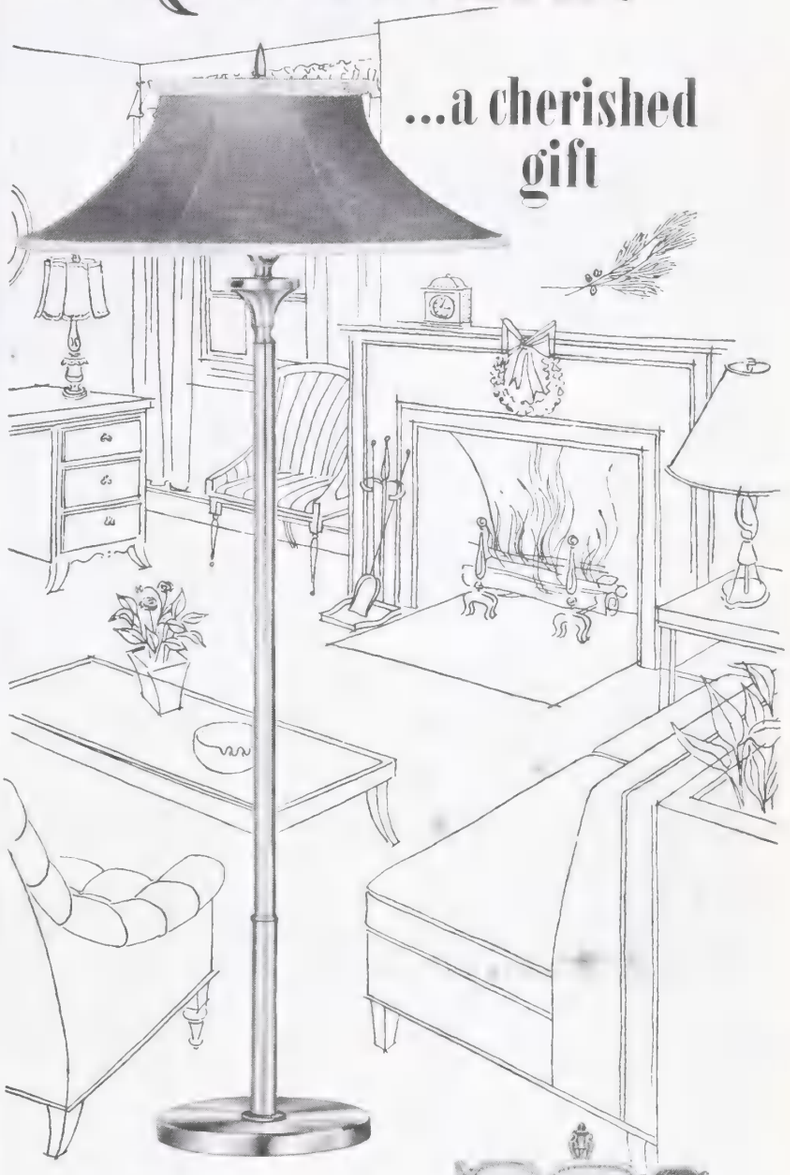


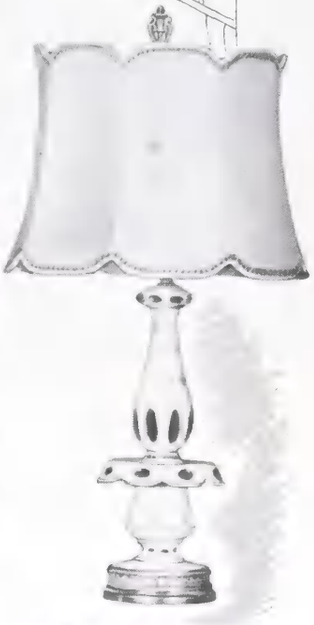
PHOTOGRAPHS BY BILL JACKSON

The thoroughly American concept of the hostess who manages everything with calm expertness is implemented by the detachable tray-top of this coffee table. The meal is set up on the tray in the kitchen, then carried to the table where the tray becomes the table top. Extra room is provided for extra food and extra guests by side sections. Made by Bodart Furniture Co.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS NOWELL WARD & ASSOCIATES

You see here a well-mannered coffee table-buffet. As a coffee table its legs are drop-leaves, its surface an adequate 30 x 56 inches. But now unfold real legs (sketch) which fit neatly under coffee table. The result is a plausible dining table 24 inches high. Drop-leaves raise to make the new unit 86 inches long. Wood is walnut in distressed finish. Design by Forest Wilson. Marcek Furniture Company.





The special trick of this cocktail table is its top, bridge-table size for small parties. At larger parties the top unfolds to a six-foot length. In condensed version, the table can handle cocktails and tidbits with room to spare. Expanded, it will perform buffet service for all the dinner you'll ever need. Made by the Imperial Furniture Company in a light finish mahogany.

people were eating salted meat. As a result, fresh meat for a winter festival had to be either wild game, like the boar which fed itself, or poultry like turkey or peacock which was not as expensive and difficult to feed as pigs, sheep, and cattle.

The boar's head finally lost its proud position of honor at Christmas, probably because the supply of wild boars ultimately gave out. The peacock lost ground because it never was very good eating anyway. They were succeeded by geese, capons, venison, cranes, swans, plovers, larks, pheasants, and partridge. So when turkey was introduced in the Sixteenth Century, it was a foregone conclusion that it would appear at the winter festival of Christmas, just as it did at the Pilgrims' Thanksgiving, later on.

The lack of meat, which forced the use of fowl and game at Christmas, also influenced the other traditional Christmas food. It was the use of salt meat and fish for nine months in the year which gave rise to the craving for spices and condiments—for food with a sting. This accounts for the spicy character of the Christmas triumvirate—plum pudding, fruit cake, and mince pie—and also for the traditional Christmas drinks, which were also spicy and cordialed.

It was only with the increased supplies of fresh meat in the Eighteenth Century that the character of food began to change. Instead of the impossible combinations of almonds, fish, raisins, lemon peel, capers, and what not, characteristic of medieval food, there began to be an effort to harmonize flavors. With this, a new era in cooking began. Although Christmas pies, puddings, and cakes have a similar character, because they all contain so many of the same ingredients, especially fruits and spices, each one belongs to a different class of dish. Plum pudding is a boiled suet pudding. Mince pie is a meat pie. Fruit cake, like all cakes, is an offshoot of bread.

Originally, puddings were dishes of meats and cereals mixed together and stuffed into a skin-like container and boiled in a pot. Unlike other boiled foods they were compound dishes which could be adjusted to the supplies on hand. If meat were short, you could add more cereal. If grain were scarce, you could go heavy on the meat.

Puddings had other advantages. They had form and so were easy to transport and store. Plum puddings properly treated will keep for a year. Quite an invention for people whose only equipment for cooking was a pot.

In time, puddings tended to be made of either meat or cereal. The meat puddings, cooked in casings, developed into sausages. Puddings of flour and suet, boiled in a pudding bag, became one of the foundations of English cookery. Puddings were both main dishes and desserts. Meat puddings encased in a suet crust developed into meat pies. Examples: Steak-and-Kidney Pudding and Toad-in-a-Hole. The name "Suet Pudding" was reserved for desserts alone. Plum Pudding is the most famous of these, though its lowly relative, "Spotted Dog," is equally well known in England.

The real patriarch of puddings, the great-great-granddaddy of them all, is Scotch Haggis. This is the dish made of the paunch and pluck of the sheep—that is, the stomach, heart, lungs, and liver. The last three, mixed with suet, onions, salt, pepper, and toasted oatmeal, are stuffed into the stomach and boiled for hours. There are moderns who say they like it, but most of us would reject it if we could try it. Since it is impossible to buy the ingredients of this dish, your best chance to taste the Scotch combination of liver and toasted oats is to try a modern version, Pot Haggis.

Pot Haggis

2 onions
¼ pound beef suet
1 cup steel cut oatmeal
1 cup water in which liver and onions have been boiled
Salt, pepper

Boil liver and onions in water to cover for 40 minutes. Drain liver and onions, chop. Chop suet. Brown oatmeal in a dry frying pan. Mix liver, onions, suet, and oatmeal with 1 cup of water in which liver and onions were boiled. Season with salt and pepper. Turn into a buttered casserole with a cover. Set casserole in a pan of water and steam for 2 hours. Water in pan in which casserole is set must boil constantly all the time.

Serve this with mashed potatoes and turnips—⅔ potato and ⅓ rutabaga turnip. The proper drink to accompany this is—you've guessed it—Scotch!

Beefsteak and Kidney Pudding

½ pound beef kidney
Salt, pepper
Flour to dredge
Suet paste for crust
½ cup water

Pound the steak cut in pieces out ½″ square. Season with salt d pepper and dredge flour over Cut beef kidney in thin slices. ason and dredge with flour the me way. Put the beef and the dneys in a deep pie dish lined th suet paste. Add the water. ver the top with paste. Tie with dding cloth, a large square of bleached muslin, and steam as er directed. Serves four.

Suet Crust

cups flour teaspoon salt cup water

Free suet from skin and fibre and op fine. Sift salt and flour. Rub et into flour, as in making hot scuits. Make suet and flour into stiff paste with water. Roll it t, letting it stand a few minutes fore using it.

How to Make Suet Puddings

Large-size puddings are boiled a pudding cloth—a large square unbleached muslin. Before use, e cloth is soaked for an hour in iling water and then wrung out. ter this, it is spread with butter d dusted with flour. This keeps e water away from the pudding d helps the pudding separate m the cloth after it is cooked. The pudding must be tied so as keep solid all round and yet have om to expand a little. If it is too ghtly tied it may burst the cloth. ddings must be kept immersed boiling water for the whole time ey are cooked.

Puddings may also be cooked in mold and steamed. All molds ust be buttered and floured before e pudding is put in. The puddngs require very little room for pansion. The mold containing the dding should be put in a large t or steamer of boiling water, aced either in the oven or on e top of the stove. Never let the ater rise above half the depth the mold. Only if the mold can hermetically sealed can it be tirely submerged. Cover of mold ust be fastened down or weighted, that the steam will not blow em off. The ordinary treatment is tie them down with a scalded, ured pudding cloth.

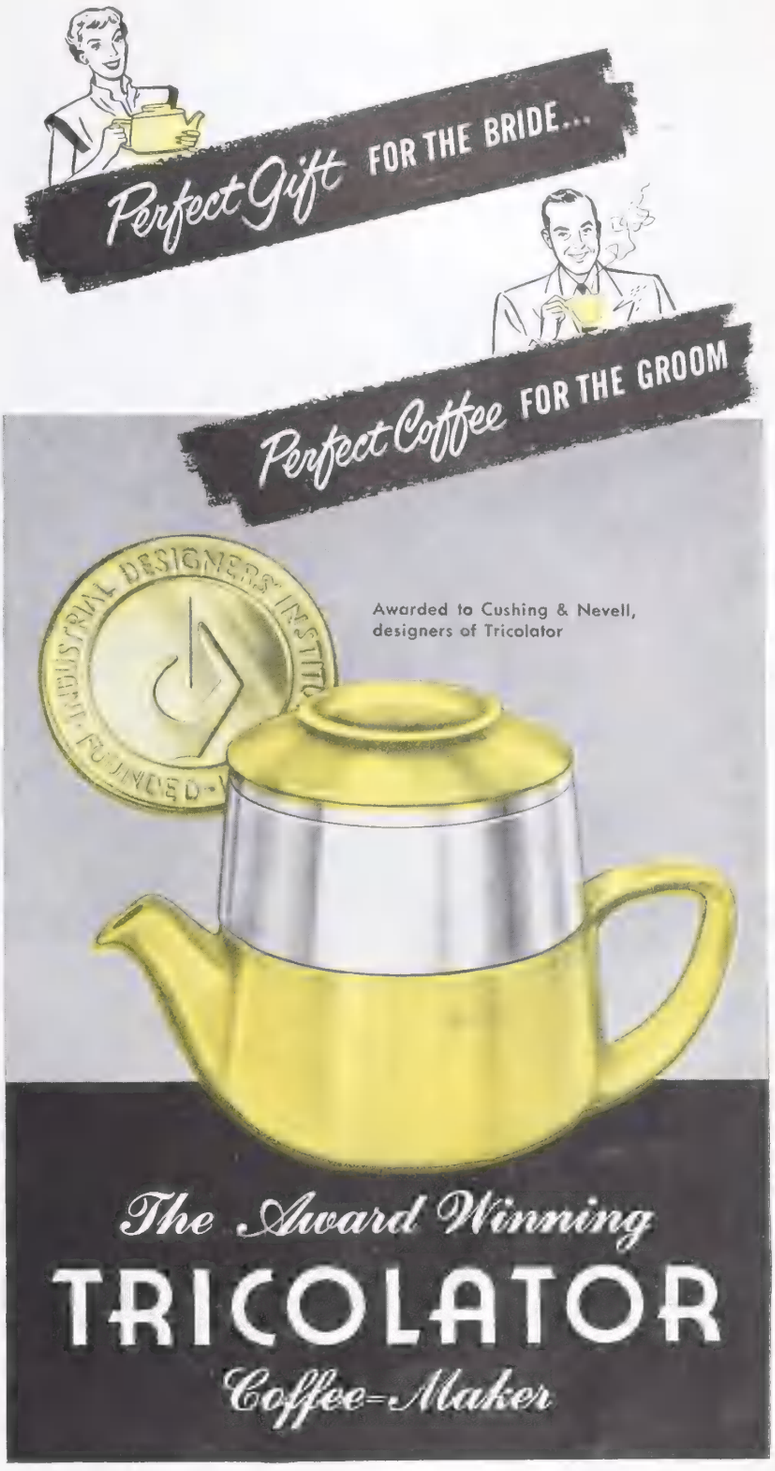
California Fruit Cake

This recipe makes one large fruit ke for the holiday feast, plus one nall cake for gift-giving or a review sampling for the family. While this is a sumptuous cake, it is not difficult to make, especially since the S & W Glacé Cake Mix puts a blessed end to that time-consuming job of shopping for and cutting up the various candied fruits and peels required.

Use one large tube pan (about 9-inch) and one coffee can for baking the fruit cakes. Line bottom of pans with paper; grease and flour well.



Or, if you prefer, you may divide the batter evenly and bake in two 9″ x 5″ loaf pans.

2 (1-pound each) jars S & W Glacé Cake Mix
2 cups cut-up dates
1½ cups seedless raisins
1 cup brandy
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon allspice
¼ teaspoon cloves
1 lemon, grated peel and juice
1 cup butter
1¾ cups brown sugar, firmly packed
4 eggs
2 cups mixed salted nutmeats, coarsely chopped

Combine S & W Glacé Cake Mix, dates and raisins; pour brandy over fruit; cover and let stand overnight. Sift together flour, baking powder, soda, salt, and spices. In a large bowl add lemon peel and juice to butter, and cream lightly; add brown sugar gradually and continue creaming until light. Beat in eggs one at a time, beating very well after each addition. Add at once flour mixture, salted nutmeats, and brandied fruit. Stir together with a large spoon or work with hands until nutmeats and fruits are well distributed throughout the light batter. Pour batter into prepared pans. Bake in a slow oven (300° F.) about 3 hours for large cake; 2½ hours for smaller cake. Place a shallow pan of water on the lowest rack of the oven during baking. When cakes are done, remove from oven and take from pans; cool on rack. Wrap in waxed paper or foil and store in container in cool place.

If glaze is desired on cake, apply a few hours before serving. Heat light corn syrup to boiling; cool slightly and brush over top of fruit cake. Arrange glacé fruit pieces in pattern before surface dries.

Christmas Cards you can make yourself

The chief ingredients of these easy-to-make, stylishly inexpensive Christmas cards are colored collophane tape and india ink

PHOTOGRAPH BY GEORGE LAZARNICK

Here's how to do it:

Provide yourself with ¼" wide cellophane tape in solid red or green, scissors, a bottle of india ink, a straight pen, and paper.

For the Christmas ball design, trace a circle in pencil; in the center make a star of criss-crossed pieces of tape cut in points. Fold tape in ribbon design and apply as a bow. Now ink in the border of stars, and the outline. (We give a traceable star pattern here.)

For the Christmas package, outline a box, ink the ribbon tie and bow. Add tape to make stripes.

For the Christmas tree, use four graduated lengths of tape, their ends cut at an angle. The scallop pattern and the star and trunk are inked. (Follow our patterns.)

You can get paper from any stationer either in large sheets or ready-cut, or you can use fine heavy notepaper. Best idea is to choose envelopes first, so the paper may be cut to fit. There are many more Christmas symbols—bells, candles, stars you can trace from magazines

Bambu is the name of Carpenter's magnificent Victrex covering. A 3-dimensional, incredibly realistic facsimile of corded bamboo, it feels like leather, is so supple you can pleat it. Factually, it's vinyl plastic fused to fabric, washable. A demon for wear. You can apply it to walls or furniture, use it for upholstering, draperies. In 16 colors. Two weights. $6.25, $7.25 per yd. Gilford Leather Co., 515 Madison Ave., New York.

If you own the smaller versions of this fabulous cast-iron Canton Pot, we think a mere announcement of this new 3¾-quart size of the Swedish stove-to-oven ware will bring you running. For the uninitiated, we'd best add that it functions with consummate skill atop the stove, in the oven, under the broiler. It's porcelain-enameled, looks like fine stoneware. Blue, green, gray. $17.50. Hammacher Schlemmer, New York.

Would you guess that this game table and the bar beside it are one and the same? Two guises of Arnold's convertible Tri-Table. Its third guise gives you a serving cart, with the tiers one above the other. They're surfaced with Formica (grained mahogany or blonde primavera, black). Soft-rubber wheels augmented by swivel casters roll and turn the table easily. Frame is polished aluminum. $49.50. Bar Mart, 64 W. 45th St., N. Y.

Gustatory masterpieces," chor-d all who tasted the hickory-oked, sherried turkey and ham m Hickory Valley Farm. Some-w these artisans of Pennsylvania-tch cookery manage to keep the ural juices intact. The result is n-flavored meat, tender, fine-tex-ed, and unusually moist. Long, w smoking over hickory-wood bers is the reason. But there's dence galore that a high order culinary skill and fine raw in-dients play an equally impor-t part in achieving the superb ult. An extra round of applause n order for the Farm's inspired ch of basting the meats with e sherry. Its bouquet and the kory's smoky tang mingle to fection.

The ham comes to you clove-dded, glazed, baked, ready to ng to the table in all its glory slicing. Should you want to ve it hot, putting it in the oven five minutes per pound does trick. The hams range from 10 18 pounds; the cost, $1.50 per nd. The turkeys average 10 to pounds and are bountifully aty. Their pound price is $1.75. Delectable-sounding recipes for oked-turkey dishes accompany the luscious bird. Maybe you'll be luckier than I was in getting your hands on enough of the meat to try them out. Fitting to add, for the benefit of the gift-minded, that both ham and turkey are decoratively packaged. They come from Hickory Valley Farm, Little Kunkletown, Stroudsburg, Pa.

Let's travel south to another region famed for its cuisine. Our destination is Memphis, home of the delectable relishes and preserves which Holly Farms Kitchens create from rare family recipes that date back to the pre-Civil War plantation days. The legend of the recipe is printed on each jar. The exotic relish concoctions don't lend themselves to word pictures. Guess your choice will have to be governed by their ingredients. Dilled Okra offers you crisp, whole okra in a spicy brine, sweetened ever-so-slightly. It's a delightful tidbit with cocktails. Hernando Relish merges cauliflower, celery, cucumbers, tomato, onions, and peppers; their dressing is zesty with a mustard undertone. Colonel's Picklette is made of cabbage and onions; the flavor of its dressing resembles that of sweet gherkins. In Vicksburg green tomatoes, apples, and onions mingle their flavors with that of their subtly spiced, vinegared syrup. The India Chutney adds almond bits and a trace of onion and lemon to its apple and raisin content. Tangy and delightfully flavored.

From Georgia, famed for its pecans, comes a quartet of pecan halves: toasted and salted, sugared and spiced, sherried, and au naturel. The nutmeats are the elite of the crop, all of this year's vintage. The second and third named are Stuckey specialties — delightful, confection-like tidbits that can be served in place of candy, with demitasse. A tasty festive garnish for ice cream, too. Stuckey's assemble the 4-pound jars in a gift box, containing a number of unshelled pecans decoratively arranged. The cost is $7.75. Individually, the toasted-salted pecan halves cost $2.25 a jar; the other 3 types, $2.05 each. All from Stuckey's, Eastman, Ga.

Some mighty delicious newcomers are on the scene for cocktail-time fare. For example, the delectable Cheddar-Filled Butter Rings recently added to the Hilda's Specialties line. Thick, sandwich-like affairs, about an inch around made with butter-rich pastry much like short-bread in texture. Sharp cheddar fills the rings, a powdering of paprika on their surfaces gives a peppery tang. As delightful with demitasse as with drinks. Two dozen rings in the oval tin, each in its own cup. The price is $1.35.

The Swiss Hazelets created by this same house are worth a detour. An outstanding macaroon, made with hazelnuts in place of the usual almonds. $1.50 a tin. Both delicacies are to be found in most fine food shops, or can be had by mail from Hilda's Specialties, 1435 E. 60th St., Chicago, Ill.

For the first time in ten years, Helder's Dutch Cheese Sticks are back on the American scene. The main feature of this most tasty import is a filling of aged Gouda cheese in crisp wafery, wheat-flour biscuit, that offers almost no flavor of its own so it won't compete wit that of the cheese. A savory deligh not only as a cocktail accesso but also to serve forth with soup salad. You can order them fro Vendome, Inc., 415 Madison Av New York, N. Y. 2 tins (40 stick each) cost $2.75.

Vermont makes a cheese contrib tion next: to wit, Sugarbush Far Smoked Cheese Bar. Called a b because of the loaf's petite girt conceived to match that of squa crackers. It's an aged cheddar in bued with the smoke of maple a hickory. The pungent, rich-fla ored blend has verve galore, a is sure to be a pet of the man your family. The bars weigh pound or more (the smoking som times alters the final poundage) the cost is $2.50, the source Jo dan-Marsh, Boston, Mass.

This same source has anoth Sugarbush Farm offering, a map syrup and honey team, especial created to solve gift problems. Tw Jug Set decoratively offers 8 ounc of Vermont honey and a like qua tity of an exceptionally fine-fl vored maple sap syrup, gathere from the trees' first run, as th say, when it's at the peak of i delicacy. The blue containers a pert stoneware jugs that mal fetching ivy holders when you ha used up the syrup. The set cos $3. Should you want to treat you self to some of the fine map syrup, it can be had in 1-qua ½-gallon, or 1-gallon cans, for $ $3.75, $6.95.

To get back to cocktail acce sories, there is a delectable o just out, made of lobster mea Giovanni's Lobster Pâte wi Cream, to be specific. A velve spread, with just enough spice a tomato in its make-up to give zest, yet not dim the delicate fl vor of the lobster. A half dozen the 2-ounce jars are available fro Charles & Co., 340 Madison Av New York, for $2.25 if your loc shops haven't the pâte. Though n new, Giovanni's Anchovy Supren is worth mentioning. An ancho paste given a special degree tastiness by its creamery-butter co tent. In 2-ounce jars, and the sa price as the former.

I encountered two very tasty Cre ca canapé pâtes which I did know about, both packed in N way. One is Purée of Shrimp, c ated from those delightfully f ed, tiny shrimp caught in the rds. Salmon Paste is the other . a delicately-flavored spread taining only the salmon and a h of sardine fat for sparkle. ot in your local shops, they can ordered by mail from Gimbel s., New York. Purée: $1.92 for ars (1¾ oz.). Paste: $2.22 for ars. (Plus postage.)

e best salted nuts ever, all eed when I passed around ke-O-Nuts. A newly developed cess, indicated by their name, he reason. But it's important to l that the baking is achieved hout using auxiliary oil. The s are baked in their own oil, so speak. That aspect accounts for ir rich, nutty flavor and the ab- ce of the usual "crust." Fewer ories, too, I might add for the efit of scale-watchers. You'll l, too, that the nuts stay crisp l fresh longer. If the usual salted doesn't "sit well" with you, se ought to. The process is said make Bake-O-Nuts easily digest- e. For the benefit of those in- erate nut-lovers who are on t-restricted diets, there's an un- ted variety available.

Three packagings are to be had: mixture of filberts, almonds, zil nuts, cashews, and pistach- ; pistachios alone; cashews ne. All of the nuts are jumbo and of choicest quality. If y haven't reached the chain res in your area yet, you can er them directly from Bake-O- ts, 183 William St., Englewood, J. A 2-pound package costs 20, and it comes to you gift- apped.

opcorn may not rightly belong a food discussion. Charge it up the holiday nature of this nth's column and the very spe- l merit of Hampshire Manor's ocolate Popcorn and Butter- tch Popcorn. The crispest, tasti- popcorn morsels I've ever en- ntered. They're New England origin and are created from a neration-old, family recipe by me-kitchen methods. Hybrid n is the starting point. Fine amery butter is part of their sp, flavorsome coating. Tasty as chocolate variety is, I must ad- t that the "belle" of the samplers s the butterscotch. And the ed with which it was gobbled up our office certainly proves its tstanding merit. Both are packed 16-ounce tins, which cost 75c, you don't find it locally, Hamp- re Manor Popcorn can be or- red from Vendome, Inc., 415 dison Ave., New York. 2 tins $2.25.

Rum Sauce Don Juan and Brandy Sauce Josephine are a pair of delicious "spiked" dessert syrups that add a sparkle and tastiness to just about any sweet concoction one can name. It's scarcely necessary to mention their affinity for holiday plum pudding and fruit cake. You'll find they have no less an affinity for frozen desserts and fritters. And wait until you see what they do for a baked banana or a broiled grapefruit, or any other fruit. You'll find still other suggested uses on the bottles. The pungent flavor of the syrups would lead you to think that their alcoholic content is far more than the 12% indicated by their labels. Either variety costs $1.00 per 12-oz. bottle.

Credit for the sauces goes to the Grace Rush people, whose exceptionally fine Martha-Ann Brandied Fruit Cake is known to just about everyone. If you haven't made its acquaintance, no time like the present. There's a round, vacuum-sealed pack in a tin containing 1 or 2½ pounds of cake; or boxed oblong cakes weighing 1½ or 3 pounds. A third pack, that couples either size of oblong cake with a jar of brandied hard sauce, is a mighty nice gift offering. Cakes in the order named, cost $1.85, $4.39, $2.55, $4.85, $3.19, $5.49. It's not out of place, before traveling on, to mention the Martha-Ann Mint Almonds. Their minty bite makes them refreshing munching both with drinks and after-dinner coffee. A 10½-ounce jar costs $1.79. Almost all fine-food shops carry the Martha-Ann group, or they are available by mail from B. Altman and Co., New York.

The delectable Guernsey House plum pudding I told you about last Christmas is on hand for this year's festivities in a new pack made up of six individual servings. Each is in an ovenproof Pyrex container, tied in cheesecloth and ready to go into the steamer when the decorative aluminum-foil wrapper is removed. Six hues of wrappers add to the high eye-appeal of the packaging. Multi-colored ribbons tie around the box that houses the array. The idea of individual portions gets my vote. It's so much easier to serve the pudding, and far more eye-appealing when served than single portions cut from a large pudding. The 6-pudding box costs $6.25, from Charles & Co., 415 Madison Ave., New York.

famed delicacies to your doorstep. They've all sorts of unusual gift assortments you may want to look into, made up of preserves, soups, seasonings, cakes, coffee. Unfortunately, lack of space necessitates my concentrating on a very few of their worth-while offerings. Their preserves hold unusual interest not only for their superfine quality but also for the luscious flavor given them by the Louisiana cane sugar used in their making—a darkish sugar, with a savor reminiscent of pecan pie and pralines.

Strawberry Preserves, an especially popular item in the group, is being gift-packed this year in quaint wooden pails, containing 2 or 3 pounds of the delicious sweet. $2.95 for the small, $3.95 for the large. Other preserves assortments are also available: one made up of one can each of Pêche de la Louisiane, Dewberry Jam, and Syrop Plantage (open-kettle syrup made from the juice of sugar cane), for $2.50. A second, comprising the dewberry jam, Syrop Plantage, and strawberry preserves, costs $2.75. WHY I LOVE TO ENTERTAIN

Not bad at all, I think proudly, why don't we do this more often? I am drunk with the fragrance of furniture polish.

Then there is the invigorating visit with Selena, the part-time cook who comes to see me through the festivities. She usually arrives at four, that black hour of desperation when I want to call up everybody and say, "Stay home! We're all down with typhoid!" Selena saves the day by exclaiming in awe at my superb talent for organization. She shakes her head incredulously at the clarity of my lists, likely to be written on the backs of insurance policies or uncashed checks, but no matter—she convinces me that with a shrewd operator like me at the helm no party could miss. I like that woman.

BUT I suppose that most of all I enjoy the warm, friend-of-all-the-world feeling I get as soon as introductions are over and the guests stop acting like guests and start talking to each other like people. I love it when strangers hit it off and discover mutual friends and go through that well-then-you-must-know-my-brother routine. I bless the first man who goes unself-consciously to the sideboard and mixes himself a second drink. I adore the ladies who go off their diets to eat the hot bread. And as for the crowd around the piano—these are my jewels. It all seems such a lovely compliment that they should have come to laugh and sing and make themselves at home in my house. I stop thinking of this as a party. It's just another demonstration that it's a pretty good old world after all.

These I buy automatically, whether I need them or not, but I sort of understand why. It's traditional, like throwing rice at weddings. But what I cannot understand is the wild, delicacy-happy intemperance that seizes me when I party-shop, causing me to come home with sapsago cheese when I went out for onions. Why must I buy three pounds of mushrooms when one pound would do? Why, when other people are satisfied to put a few normal chocolates in a dish, must I decide that only white chocolates will do for my guests, and then have to put on a Bureau of Missing Persons hunt to find them?

I worry about where the guests will sit. Experience should have taught me that they are likely to sit on the floor or the stairway while perfectly good chairs go vacant, but I can't depend on this. So I must haul out camp chairs and rearrange furniture till the living room looks as if I had been planning a seance.

I worry about the weather, which winter or summer is always melting on the day of my fetes. If it isn't the slush it's the humidity. What will I do with their galoshes? How can I keep them cool?

I list flower-arranging as one of the perils of entertaining, too. A lot of sly, nasty propaganda has been disseminated that this is an elegant, grand-lady chore, something you toss off leisurely with your face powdered and all your jewels on just before the guests arrive. Ha! I have spent some of my most hectic, blasphemous moments trying to beat a bunch of roses into submission before the clock struck seven.

I get weary this minute thinking about that panicky whirlwind of an hour before the guests arrive. Presumably, I get myself dressed some time about now, but I never remember when I do it. It must be between emptying the garbage replacing a burnt-out light b But I can assure you it is never a a relaxing bubble bath with l packs on my eyes, the way it se to be with those well-organized I suspect, fictional characters read about in magazines.

But what I suppose I really l most about entertaining is the l someness when the guests are g and the place is strewn with cru and crumpled napkins. It's a they had all died and left me al in my stocking feet, to mourn t loss. I wander around listles drinking all the unfinished dri musing on the sadness of life wh is just a long series of meeti and partings. Then I sit down finish off the left-over cashew n They never, of course, leave salted almonds.

Ualco satin-smooth aluminum casement windows are available in hundreds of sizes and styles. Attractive, fool-proof handles and locks make them world's easiest-to-operate windows.

Basement

Since basements are more and more a "lived-in" part of the house, Ualco basement windows are more in demand than ever before. They close weather-tight but give instant ventilation at a finger touch.

Hopper

Hopper type windows by Ualco permit controlled ventilation in any kind of weather without danger of rain, snow and sleet blowing in to damage your furniture, rugs and floors.

Twinsul

Here's what to pick for your picture window. The Ualco double-pane "Twinsul" window is specially constructed to afford unobstructed view without the panes becoming "fogged".

Jalousie

If you want bright, cheery, sunny rooms, especially sun porches and breezeways, you will appreciate this window that is so much better in so many ways. It has finally eliminated bothersome weather stripping.

Double Hung

The popular Double Hung window combines beauty with utility. Made to stay weather-tight for life. Like all the other Ualco windows this double hung type will increase the value of any home.

PUT YOUR PARTIES ON CARTS

the terrace. (The table is the narrow type which can go through doorways.) She says she would never go back to the old dining-room system. She has noticed, she says, that somehow by moving from the living room to another room a party loses that rapport which usually has just begun to emerge about the time dinner is announced. Now the convivial meal is no interruption but a continuation of the party. And she finds that her family has enthusiastically welcomed this comfortable new way of eating their meals all over the house.

The principle behind planning a cart menu is simple. It is really a buffet menu, but even more simplified. It revolves around a delicious casserole recipe, a delicious salad, a good crusty French bread (none of those breads wrapped in paraffin paper, please). The dessert can be anything—but preferably nothing that has to be fussed with too much at the last minute. Remember you are trying to stay in the living room with the guests.

It should also be a menu you can prepare well in advance—even the day before—so you won't have any of that flurried feeling. The beef recipe I give later on can be made the day before and stored in the refrigerator without loss of flavor. I even slice and butter my sour dough French bread the day before, and wrap it in foil to keep it fresh. Then I feel my problems are minor and that I am as carefree as my guests.

Also remember, in planning your meal on wheels, everything must be eaten easily. No steak or roast beef. Don't ask people to try to cut meat on their knees. Plan to serve wine. For wine helps put "a little menu" into the class of something special and epicurean, helps you set the tone of importance this meal should have. Just see that everyone is within reach of a table or tray surface to rest it on.

Make your main dish a sophisticated casserole. Since there is always the problem of expense, especially around the holidays when you are feeling "broke," casseroles work out beautifully, for you can use the cheaper cuts of meat and disguise their humble origin by using wine in their cooking. Make the salad a work of art, being careful about every phase. Use lettuce that is perfectly dry and a dressing that is the best of its type. (I give you a play-by-play description of one of my special dressings later on.)

Tiny compositions of cut-out pictures, glitter stuffs, evergreen twigs and cones, glued to vividly painted shells make exquisite tree hangings. Patricia O'Brien.

Keep Christmas packages in an out-size carton glamorized into a major element of your Christmas décor. You can make this receptacle slightly sensational by giving it the full dazzle treatment with metallic paper, tape ribbon, a bow holding a cluster of bells, and any other touches of visual whimsy. Kappa Kappa Gamma Pilgrimage, Houston, Texas.

This pigmy table Christmas tree is a cone made of wire mesh and attached to a wood base. For a dividend of razzle-dazzle, spray it with metallic paint. You can adorn it with buttons or earrings or cranberries or flowers, attached by florist's wire. Idea is a variation of tree trimmed with eucalyptus buds, shown last year in the San Francisco Museum.

Components of this simple and (in part) edible Christmas tree hanging are the familiar "Life Savers" and colored cellophane tape. Candies are placed in squares, three rows each, bound with criss-cross of tape. Use clear tape for hanger. Making them is fine for children's pre-Christmas parties, providing guests don't eat raw materials.

and excellent American food.

Or, even on a first trip or on limited time, you may find it more attractive, and surprisingly convenient, to settle down in one of the many new resorts only a few hours out of Mexico City. Here the business of sight-seeing can be leavened with, say, dude ranch activities, curative baths, rest.

Among those emphasizing the latter is the sparkling new Refugio del Salto. This is about 100 miles west of Mexico City, but still high enough in the mountains so that you can enjoy simultaneously the perfume of pine trees and the glamour of orchids. It is small but elegant as to furnishings and private baths. Its cocktail lounge, built into the natural rock, faces the chuckling waterfall from which the inn takes its name. Rates: just under $10 for two with meals.

Not near enough to distract, but near enough to enjoy if you wish, are a scenic dam-made lake and the little village of Valle de Bravo, a sort of sleeping beauty so far as tourists are concerned, for they (and the town itself) are just awakening to its charm.

Rapidly expanding air, rail, and highway facilities have made Mexico even more easily accessible than it ever was. Your travel agent is the man to consult on the final arrangements, of course, but for general information and literature, write to the Mexican Government Tourist Bureau's new office, 8 West 51st St., New York 20, N. Y.

Viva Neptunus Rex!

The Equator is more than a geographical demarcation. It's a major travel experience. Even the airlines dramatize the split second during which they pass from one hemisphere to another by breaking out drinks and passing out certificates. But it's on the big cruise ships like those of the Delta and Moore-McCormack Lines that crossing the Equator becomes a sizable ceremony, part tradition, part the ingenuity of the current passenger list, all deftly integrated (and doubtless censired) by an experienced cruise director.

Like all initiations, this one is calculated to inspire dread. Only a few days out of New Orleans or New York, bound for Rio or Buenos Aires, you become aware that you are not really Mrs. Smith or Mr. Janes, but a mere pollywog, a landlubber. As such, you're headed for whatever joyful victir izing that can be devised by tho who already belong to the She back few. Comes at last your sur mons, perhaps elaborately printe signed by Triton, Captain Bloo or Neptunus Rex himself. Ar then, with all hands on deck, t Ceremony. The royal Shellbac dignitaries and their minions a costumed and waiting, and y hear the anguished cries of the first blind-folded victims broadca through the ship's loudspeaker. most you'll be required to kiss dead fish standing in for the roy toe, await your turn sitting on cake of ice, or spend much tir wearing off a coat of mercur chrome or reconditioning yo wave after a shampoo of star and spaghetti. But even so, you never be quite the same aga Back at the office or in yo kitchen, you'll be aware of n stature. You are a Shellback. Y have crossed the Equator.

Italy

a glorious, sun-filled world!

Something there is that makes a winter or spring visit to Italy a delightfully rewarding experience.

Perhaps it's the brilliant contrast of a shining, new Italy set midst scenes that nostalgically reflect the Renaissance past . . . perhaps it's a sudden, unexpected vista of the blue Mediterranean . . . perhaps the hushed timelessness of Roman ruins in the Campagna. Or . . . it may be the enveloping warmth and friendliness of the Italian people.

On the practical side, you're in for a pleasant surprise, too, when you sample Italy's food, hotels, transportation and dollar values.

"Pure as an angel . . .

. . . As strong as love, black as the devil, and hot as hell"—that is Louisiana's own fond definition of Louisiana coffee! If your innards quaver at the very thought, most restaurants serve, and some go so far as to advertise in neon, "Northern and Southern Coffee." But if you discover a taste for the Southern brand, you'll be intrigued by some of its variations. The Louisiana Coffee served you when you visit the Tourist Bureau at Baton Rouge is strengthened with chicory, the root ground and added to the coffee before it is made. In western Louisiana, you'll experience Creole Coffee, a drip coffee described in a little Creole recipe book put out by Evangeline Pepper and Food Products of St. Martinsville as "one part dark roast coffee to three parts water." And the Café Brulôt, with which you should by all means end up that gourmet adventure in one of New Orleans' gourmet restaurants, is, according to La Louisiane, a French drip coffee, with old brandy and spices added, served aflame.

Grand entrance

One of the pleasanter ways to begin a winter sight-seeing trip in southern Europe, especially if you are entitled to the generous stopovers allowed by the American Export and Italian Lines, is via the Hotel Reina Christina, at Algeciras, Spain. Algeciras is only 30 minutes from Gibraltar, and the hotel functionaries will not only meet you there, but escort you through customs. The British Transit Visa necessary to get you through this fortress town is obtained in the United States merely by presenting your Spanish visa.

Once at the Christina, you'll behave like a lotus-eater. Algeciras boasts a placid, benevolent climate. The hotel, the most southernly in Europe, is beautifully placed to look out over its own lush subtropical gardens and across the twinkling Bay to the grim magnificence of the Rock itself. Also there is much going on, not only the usual golf, tennis, sea bathing, riding, shooting, but more unusual bull fights and undersea fish hunting. And the rates, at the current 40-1 exchange value of the peseta, are only from $3.25 for double room with bath without meals, $7.25 with meals. Meals, since this is a British-owned hotel, consist of early morning tea, breakfast, luncheon, afternoon tea, dinner.

When you're ready to move on, the hotel itself will set you up on any of a variety of trips by private car with English-speaking chauffeur through romantic Andalucia: Malaga, Granada, Cordoba, Ronda, Seville, Cadiz, Jerez, highlighted by Moorish architecture, the sherry wine district, the Alhambra, flamenco dancing. North Morocco, Tangier, Ceuta, Tetuan are actually so accessible either by steamer or plane that you can visit Africa, in a single day. Details: your travel agent or Gertrude Donnelley, 345 Madison Avenue, N. Y.

the dank mysteries of this continent's only genuine tropical wilderness without guide, chart, and due precaution against sun, insect, snake. The more reason to sign up, and well in advance, with the National Audubon Society, Hotel McAllister Arcade, Miami. The Society provides the only conducted tours within Everglades National Park, and the only way for such as you and me to get a really good close-up of the rare and wonderful things going on there. This winter's Tropical Wildlife Tours, each limited to six, under the guidance of an expert conductor, will be:

December—one-day tours by station wagon, Miami to Coot Bay Landing on the road to Flamingo, with heron, egrets, the ibis, anhinga, limpkin, coot, grebe, and gallinule dramatizing every view—$10, meals extra.

January through April—two-day tours, first day by station wagon to Cuthbert Rookery and thence by boat through remote lakes for close-ups of tangled mangroves dripping orchids, the snowy egret in nuptial plumage, the great white ibis homemaking; second day by cruiser over the milky blue, green, lavender, and bronze shallows of Florida Bay. This is where Man o' War birds wheel overhead and the great white heron poses against the dark green mangroves, and you await the climactic moment when first one, then another of the rare and roseate spoonbills spring upward in gaudy pyrotechnics of shocking pink—$20, meals and overnight at Tavernier on Key Largo extra.

Cape-to-Cairo

Of the few major travel adventures left in this well-beaten world, the trip which spans Africa overland from south to north, is still the longest. But it's also the most varied, and the freshest available to those who yearn for new sights without unnecessary discomforts.

In about three months, and a thousand miles of automobile, train, plane, and steamer travel, you experience a range of climates and scenery, and a kaleidoscopic series of unique or first-time experiences with people and places beyond compare anywhere. The exotic is yours, from the modern cities of South Africa's gardened Cape to the ancient riddles of Egypt's Valley of the Kings; from the pygmies of the Ituri forest to the Watusi giant people, with such African specialties as diamond mines, big game safaris, Victoria Falls, the Zulus, Addis Ababa, and Zanzibar generously thrown in.

During the most favorable seasons, December through March, July through September, you'll find the Cape-to-Cairo adventure handily packaged, with experienced leadership. The size of the group is thoughtfully limited, itineraries are calculated not to wear you out and every advantage is taken of the rapidly improving tourist facilities even in Darkest Africa.

Here are two notes to guide your future plans: Thos. Cook & Son's current safari, 77 days, 11,500 miles, leaves Capetown January 10, $3.800 from Cape to Cairo. Hemphill World Cruises, 727 West 7th Street, Los Angeles 17, offer a trip departing from New York by air via Lisbon January 11, 93 days, $4.685 from New York to New York.

Quicker

Motorists south-bound this winter along the eastern seaboard will find these improvements speeding their way: The New Jersey Turnpike, a limited-access highway now completed from Newark south to Deepwater, where a new Delaware Memorial Bridge, replaces the New Castle-Pennsville ferry and aids their entrance into Delaware.

Crossroads

More ships and planes visit Panama than any other Caribbean port, but unfortunately most seem to do so merely on their way somewhere else. In the ordinary course of events, you may be tempted to do the same. Yet Panama today is an easy and rewarding place to visit just for itself. Pan American World Airways, among others, makes it in only four and a half hours from Miami. New Orleans, Houston. Fare from New York $355.50 plus tax, $251.40 tourist class. The Panama Line, also among others, takes five days from New York, offers 14-day cruises from $288 plus tax, with four days ashore for $80 single, $150 double. And package trips, such as Braniff's, give you, say, a nine-day visit at about $10 a day plus air fare.

You may prefer to stay at Colon on the Gulf side, where the Hotel Washington, rates $6.50 to $ without meals, looks serenely out to sea down a magnificent palm-lined alley, and one push on t

In New Mexico, where, come sk on Christmas Eve, the farolitos (candles burning inside paper bags) begin to twinkle on the flat adobe roofs, and it's time to light the luminaria, a little open wood fire near the front door, to light the Santa Niño on his way.

In Austria, where the early December Feast of St. Nicholas finds not one but two traditional Christmas personalities making the rounds: St. Nick, of course, with his usual rewards for the good children, preceded by old Krampus, who must first investigate and dictate punishment for all lapses.

In California, where the unconventional background of sunshine and citrus bloom has inspired other unconventionalities: decorated oil derricks, floating Christmas trees, and Santa arriving via stagecoach with vigilante escort.

In Mexico, where Mary and Joseph search for shelter for nine successive nights, each one an occasion for dances, feasting, candlelight processions, and growing anticipation of the moment when the clay pinata, loaded with goodies and hung overhead, may be broken at last and the children showered with gifts.

In the Adirondacks, where, on Whiteface Mountain out of Wilmington, New York, you can take the children to Santa's very own workshop, complete with a refrigerated North Pole, reindeer, and, in the brightly colored storybook houses, many of the storybook personalities so dear to childhood, conspicuous among them, of course, old Santa himself!

In Atlantic City the famous bright-light boardwalk is brighter than ever, banked with gleaming Christmas trees in celebration of the resort's own Festival of Lights. The great hotels, bedecked to the nines, make much of the season with gifts and specially gala treats for their guests. A Winter Sports Carnival goes on, and the near-by towns of Ventnor, Margate, and Longport stage their own beauty show of outdoor decoration, each householder vying with the next to make his house more glamorous.

"He made America hear"

writes F. Van Wyck Mason about Leopold Stokowski

"Great music has not been part of us very long in America. But it is now, almost through the insistence of Leopold Stokowski. He mastered and gave mastery to the new medium of radio and recording. He pushed aside the walls of the concert hall and made us come in. For this I am as grateful as for the flashes and thunderheads he shapes with those amazing hands."

—F. Van Wyck Mason

Just suppose everybody had the same face . . .

Imagine how difficult life would be if you couldn't tell friend from stranger by just a glance at a face!

And imagine how difficult your shopping would be if you couldn't identify the goods you buy by the makers' brand names on them!

What faces do for you on people you meet, these brand names do for you on products you buy.

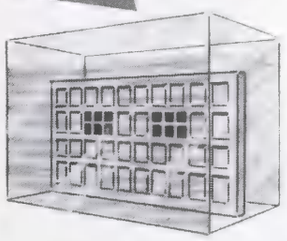
Because of brand name advertisements in these pages, you can do a lot of "shopping" sitting right where you are now. You read about new things, changes in familiar ones. You accept or reject, without stepping out of the house. Brand name advertising keeps you informed, and saves you time.

Because of brand names on the goods in the store, you quickly find just what you want, and know just what you're going to get. Brand names safeguard your money by assuring constant quality and value in the things you buy.



Because makers of brand name goods know they must compete against others for your favor, they have to strive always for new ideas and better quality. Brand names assure you progress in continuous development of goods for better living.

Remember — as you look through the ads in this magazine — nowhere else in the world do people get the protections you get when you choose among American manufacturers' brand named goods!

Whenever you buy — demand the brand you want

Do you want a living Christmas Tree?

By Martin L. Davey, Jr.

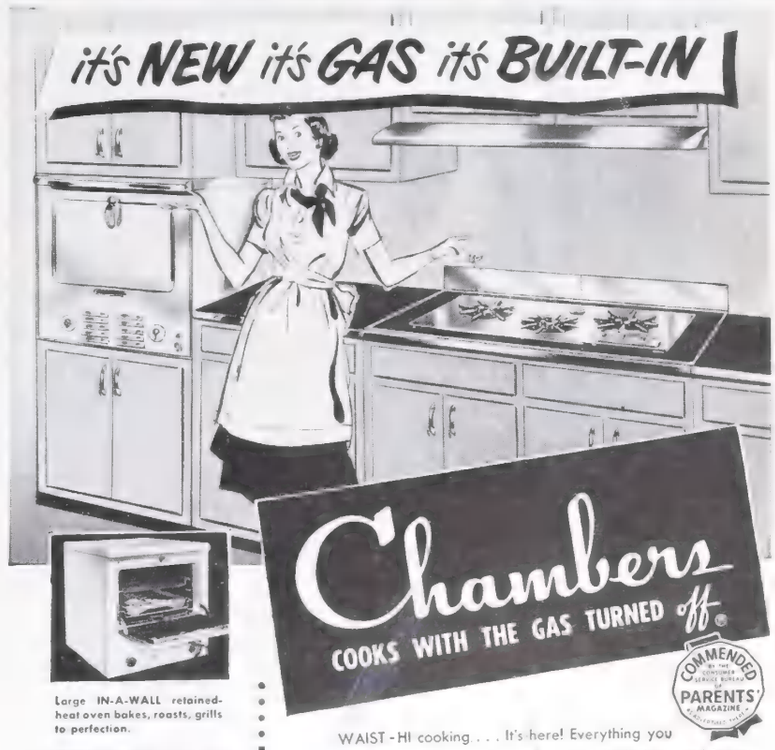
Spruce

Red cedar

White pine

Scotch pine

Douglas fir



The living Christmas tree idea has gained enormously in popularity in the past few years. It's an appealing thought—a real, live tree, no dropping of dry needles, and to be used later in your garden. But it can lure you into a bulky purchase that may easily become a major headache. A wise choice of tree can give you the most attractive Christmas tree you have ever had.

All evergreens well adapted for Christmas trees are really baby trees. All of them grow to major proportions if given the chance. In selecting a tree, you are actually buying a landscape specimen that is to serve indoors for a few days, then occupy a permanent position in your garden.

Avoid the fly-by-night dealer in the corner lot. Order from a nurseryman who offers freshly dug and honestly balled trees. Avoid trees that have been left in an unprotected position until the ball of earth is frozen solid. Evergreens can't survive when so treated.

It's 3 to 1 that the REPUBLIC Radiant Gas Heater

will transform your old furnace or boiler into an efficient, dependable, automatic gas heating system

Here's Why—

Efficiency Unsurpassed because the Republic Radiant Combustion Chamber is tailor-made to your heating plant; fitted "on-the-job" to get the best possible performance.

Dependability and Long Life demonstrated by thousands of installations in service 20 years or more.

Utmost Comfort with the Republic System of Gradient-Heet Control which automatically adjusts the flame—not only on and off but UP and DOWN to match the weather.

There's many a winter's comfort left in that old furnace of yours. Three times out of four just such "old" furnaces and boilers prove "ideal" for converting to care-free gas heat with a Republic Radiant Gas Heater.

Republic's exclusive Combustion Chamber not only produces the same radiant-type heat for which your coal furnace was designed, but is actually custom-built for your particular installation.

Only if your furnace is beyond repair do you need complete new equipment to enjoy the advantages of automatic gas heat—and in that case your Authorized Autogas Dealer can tell you all about the Republic Gradient-Heet Furnace. We offer both—and still say the odds are 3 to 1 you can avoid the higher cost of new equipment. Ask your nearest Autogas Dealer to figure the many advantages.

DECORATOR'S DIARY

ago for summer "dust covers." A dull idea, indeed. But when I went back to Stoffel's, there was exactly what she had described. Not rep, but waffle-weave piqué, of all things! Pink, with tiny black diamonds woven into it. The black figure was so tiny, it seemed to change obligingly to any dark color you put it beside—pottery brown, for instance.

Mrs. Masters' room is all done now and the three fabrics look as if they were specially invented to show off her lovely fruitwood chest and writing table. I find myself thinking about it quite a lot because, simple as it is, you could hardly call it modern. But it has that fresh look of perennial renewal you're bound to envy when a really great lady, whose years nobody counts any more, turns up in a crisp and simple summer dress. You don't get that kind of freshness from people whose lives are ruled by their grandmothers and/or the Joneses.

Mrs. Addison has one of the most charming old houses I've ever seen. But it never seems quite right to call it old. It was built about 1830 by a man who without a doubt was one of the modernists of his day. His house was as modern as he could make it with its free, unclassical plan, its high airy ceilings, and its big windows that go all the way to the floor. Been remodeled many times, of course, but always with the accent on airy, open simplicity. That's why Mrs. Addison liked it, and why she bought it. And she has faithfully maintained the tradition.

This year she got around to her long-dreamed-of project of knocking out the east wall of the dining room and replacing it with glass to have a better view of the valley that sweeps off beyond the garden. She's keeping her Duncan Phyffe table and chairs as who wouldn't—they're real—but she wanted new wallpaper. I felt a moral obligation to hunt up exactly the right pattern for this very special house and at John C. Milne's I found it—a Dietrich design called "Rural." The drawing technique is strictly modern as Dietrich's technique always is. But the cornfields and the grazing cows are a concession in subject matter to a day when ours was primarily an agricultural nation. The colors are fresh and gay without being garish and the whole design has the same nice feeling of airiness as Mrs. Addison's house. Somehow, I think that gentleman-builder of 120 years ago would have liked it very much.

"Rural" wallpaper

Shade without gloom

There's a new silhouette in lampshades, I've been hearing. Makes pretty good sense too. Low, wide, and handsome, is the best way to describe it. The idea is to have the shade just deep enough to shield the bulbs, and as wide as you can manage, in order to let the light escape upwards and downwards over as much area as possible. I was a bit dubious about the handsome part when I first heard the lighting engineers expounding. Their ideas about good looks are not always mine. But my doubts were quieted when I saw the new principle in the flesh. Paul McCobb has used it in one of the lamps he designed to go with his new "Predictor" furniture. His lamp has a solid maple base that tapers toward the top where it is fitted with a black metal collar. The collar flares out again slightly to hold the diffusing reflector, a bit of which is visible (purposely so) below the shallow drum shade. Result: You have a pleasant shape to look at day and night, and when the lamp is lighted there's a minimum of gloomy dark spot where the shade cuts off the light.—M. R.

DO YOU WANT A LIVING CHRISTMAS TREE?

When you get your tree home, look at the ball of soil to be sure it is moist. Then store your tree until you are ready to use it indoors. Put it in a storage place that is cold but not below freezing. The north side of a building is ideal—the tree standing on the ground, the ball well covered with straw, peat, or other mulching material to keep out the frost. When it comes time to bring the tree indoors, put the ball in a tub or large bucket. Pack peat solidly under, around, and over the ball. Saturate the peat with water but don't leave your tree "standing in a puddle."

Living Christmas trees may be decorated as usual, but avoid large lights that give off too much heat.

Water your tree as needed while it is indoors. Make its stay indoors as brief as circumstances permit—never longer than a week.

When duty as a Christmas tree has been fulfilled, plant the tree in the usual way. Include a heavy mulch to keep frost out of the ball and surrounding area. So treated, your tree has at least a fair chance. It's well, though, to view the whole thing with an open mind. Midwinter is a poor season for transplanting any evergreens. With reasonable precautions some hardy varieties commonly used for Christmas trees can take the move and proceed to grow and be healthy when spring comes.

If you really don't need another evergreen tree in your garden, buy a cut Christmas tree. Perhaps the most popular cut trees are the spruces, one of which is shown on page 221. The typical cone shape of the spruce tree lends itself to almost any style of trimming and lighting. The thick branches and dark green foliage appeal to the prospective buyer. But the purchaser should know that all spruces shed their needles after they have been in a warm room for a few days. Shedding can be checked somewhat, though, by selecting trees that have been freshly cut. It may be further reduced by standing the cut tree in a holder filled with water. These precautions help, but by no means eliminate, shedding. Don't buy a spruce if you expect your tree to last until Twelfth Night.

Balsam fir and Douglas fir have the sterling virtue of retaining their needles and their color when exposed to the dry, hot air in a house. While not as well branched as the spruces, they are attractive in form and color.

SEVERAL long needle pines have found their way into the Christmas tree market. Pines are rather sparsely branched but tend to make up for the scarcity of branches with an abundance of long, attractive needles. Pines retain their needles when dry. A cut tree keeps indoors for many days. Pines range in color from the dark green of Austrian pine through the blue-green of white pines to the bluish tints of Scotch pine.

Junipers are somewhat less popular as Christmas trees. They haven't the traditional form, and they are more difficult to light and trim. However, junipers do retain their needles fairly well and are increasing in popularity.

The cardinal points to keep in mind when selecting a Christmas tree are: First, decide whether you have need for a living tree in your garden and choose the kind of tree you need for that location. Second, if you want a living tree, buy it from a reliable nursery.

He Gardens to Relax

"Gardening is the best thing in the world to make you forget your troubles. Watch a plant respond to what you do for it. Watch the soil become alive in your hands," says Bruce Krasberg

Bruce Krasberg invents machine tools for making automobile and radio parts. Then, as owner and president of R. Krasberg & Sons, million dollar Chicago machine tool plant, he manufactures these parts for a number of big companies. But evenings he gardens to forget business worries—taxes, prices, shortages.

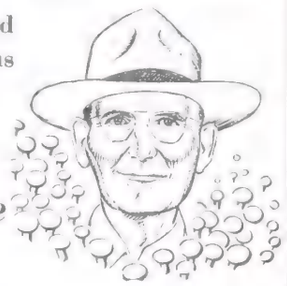
Krasberg is a soils man rather than a plantsman. To him, flowers and vegetables are just by-products to working with the soil. (He never wears gloves in the garden.) Manicured soil feels so good. He runs it through his hands as though it were gold.

Krasberg's ideal garden would have the manicured look to every inch of its soil. He doesn't care whether it's a flower or vegetable garden. (He has both.) But the soil must look alive. It even must feel alive when he touches it. Most gardeners don't cultivate enough, he says. The soil soon looks like concrete. He wants it fluffy.

Once a week is about right for cultivating. Krasberg believes. But don't dig deep. About 1½ inches is right. Krasberg uses a 4-tined cultivator. This is the speediest cultivator he's found. As far as plant growth is concerned, you can leave the small lumps left by this tool. Krasberg goes back over the bed to break them. He explains that he just likes to see soil without lumps. For him this is one of the big pleasures in gardening.

Krasberg removed all the clay from the top 6 inches of his flower beds for the same reason. Clay turns whitish when dry. He doesn't like this look to his garden. So he replaced the clay with a loam rich in humus. This stays black when dry—and so looks better to Krasberg. He emphasizes, though, that you can't remove the clay from the root zone—not if you want good plant growth.

Krasberg moved to Winnetka, Illinois, from Highland Park two years ago because he ran out of soil to manicure in his previous garden. It was only an 85-foot lot (now he has an acre). The soil has been worked into perfect condition for plants. This took much of the fun from gardening. There just wasn't enough left to do—and Krasberg prefers to spend an hour every day, 5 on Saturdays and Sundays, in gardening. He feels he needs this much to keep him mentally and physically fit. He enjoys golf, but finds it doesn't relax him as well as gardening. Neither does flying. So he sold his plane. He still plays an annual game of golf.



Krasberg brings his engineering interest in good design into his garden. It is not cluttered with plants. In fact, it has broad sweeps

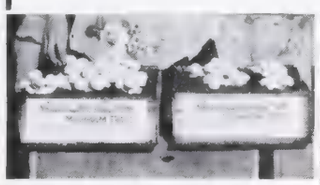
MUSHROOMS

Right in Your Own Home

You'll never know how delicious mushrooms can be 'til you've grown and served 'em fresh, right in your own home.

Pick some and fry 'em, broil 'em or just plain soup 'em; smell the appetizing aroma and taste all the mouth-watering flavor of plump, ripe mushrooms served fresh and delicious as they were meant to be.

It's a real thrill growing 'em too. All you gotta do is add a couple inches of soil and water 'em. My trays do the rest. I send you professionally prepared trays by expert mushroom growers. Nothing but healthy mushrooms can grow in these trays.



Just three weeks after you receive your trays your mushrooms will be coming up in spurts ready for picking every few days. Just 3 of my trays will keep your table supplied for about three months. All you need to grow 'em is a cool, dark place in your basement and the ambition to water 'em. It'll soon be mushroom pickin' time at your house.

I insist on guaranteeing satisfaction with my mushrooms. I know they're the purest, plumpest, tastiest ever and they'll grow big and fast if you follow my simple instructions. My trays weigh approximately 15 lbs. each, measure 15" x 17" and they're shipped F.O.B. Ashtabula, Ohio, by 2nd class express. Here's all I ask for 'em—3 big trays for $4.95 satisfaction guaranteed. So for immediate shipment, just send a check, cash or money order to Rube Sneller.

of lawn, and fewer beds of flowers than you'll find in many 50-foot lots. But the flower beds are perfect—every plant in full bloom, the soil a picture. Visitors are always impressed, especially by the abundance of bloom. They think they've discovered a gardener who never has any failures, who always has everything bloom for him on schedule. Krasberg laughs. He credits his success partially to his intensive work with the soil but more to his system. Grow the flowers in rows with the vegetables out back in a hidden garden, dig them in bloom and replant into the display beds. He can handle just about any flower this way. He suggests you try zinnia, marigold, chrysanthemum, shasta daisy, and sweet alyssum your first time.

Winter at present stops Krasberg from gardening but won't after this year. He plans to add a home greenhouse, probably a 10 by 16 affair attached to the house. He finds winter too long a stretch for him to be away from the soil. Business thoughts begin to follow him home. He needs to relax.

Roses are the specialty in the Krasberg garden. They give the most visible response to his fussing with the soil. Sure, roses survive without much care, but you should see what they do when they are treated to ideal soil conditions. He already has 200 roses in the new garden.

Krasberg is his own gardener except for planning and planting (a family project with wife Coe and teenagers Joan and Peggy) and routine jobs (two high school boys come in Saturdays). The boys also used to mow the grass. Last year Krasberg discovered he enjoyed running the power mower, so he does the grass cutting himself. He even surprises the family sometimes now by letting the boys do some soils work while he mows grass. Not for the roses, though. These get only the Krasberg touch.

Mulches aren't prominent in the Krasberg garden. This is because Krasberg likes to see the good earth—the most handsome sight in gardening, he'll tell you. So he mulches only plants that need the protection from sun heat or from rain-splashed mud. He recognizes, though, that mulches do save soil moisture. He'd use more of them if it wasn't for his fondness for bare soil. But they'd have to be something that looks like soil, so peat is his favorite mulch.

Count me among the compost-builders, he says. Already he has several piles in the process. The program is compost when the bed is first started, then regular applications of a complete plant food through the season. Roses, for example, each receive a small handful of "Vigoro" just before a rain two or three times during the year. The lawn is fed in March and September. Krasberg has tried the new water-soluble plant food sprays for leaves but can't see that the plants benefited. His guess is that his soils system already supplies everything his plants need.

Although it's really too new, the Krasberg garden was visited last year by 250 people. Many of these were fellow members in the Men's Garden Clubs of America. Kras-berg is First Vice President. He always attends the national conventions. He also belongs to three local Men's Garden Clubs—Highland Park, New Trier, and Chicago—plus the Chicago Horticultural Society.

Friends wonder why Krasberg devotes so much time to gardening. He says it's to keep him fit for business.

"If the day is particularly rough, I go home at 4. An hour in the soil gets me back in shape so I'm reasonable company for the family at dinner. Another hour outdoors after dinner and I'm ready to think better tomorrow."

Krasberg the Inventor seldom gets outdoors with Krasberg the Gardener, not for long anyhow. But his engineering skill does come in handy. Fighting the acre of crabgrass, for example, was one time. Reseeding the whole area by hand was out of the question. There are mechanical spreaders, of course, but the spreaders on the market didn't suit Krasberg—not precise enough controls. So he invented a spreader. It's small enough to carry and weighs only a pound. It works like the sand spreader a highway crew uses on icy roads. It's made for spreading seed, but it works equally well for plant food. Friends who saw it in action wanted copies. Today it's sold commercially.

Recently Krasberg got interested in bulbs in a big way. (He shifts interests often; says it makes gardening more fun for him. Last year it was tuberous begonias—100 of them.) Bulb planting quickly be came a chore. That's the time Kras berg stops. This time he inventec a bulb planter. No more stooping over. It has a long handle. Jus press your foot on a cutter. Ou comes a plug of soil three inche across and as much as seven inche deep. (You regulate cutter to sui particular kind of bulb you ar planting.) So far friends haven' discovered it. When they do, he'l probably have to produce these i quantity too.

KRASBERG gets lots of laugh from gardening. Friends loo serious when they ask what he ca see in soil that intrigues him s much. Neighbors wonder why h has to mow his own lawn. ("I jus happen to like running a powe mower.") Members of the Men' Garden Clubs think he's kiddin when he says he is an inventor fo a nuts and bolts company. ("I'v never met another fellow membe in the same business, I admit." Fellow amateur pilots can't ge over his selling his plane be cause it interfered with gardening ("Took me away from home to much," he says.)

His prize remark was: "M younger daughter, then a toddler once yanked up all 500 sweet alys sum plants one day just after had finished planting them. I def you to remember your busines worries—prices, taxes, shortages— under the circumstances! Garden ing—best thing in the world t make you forget the office."

There's no sight so enjoyable as well-tilled soil, says Krasberg. He manicures it to flower-show perfection.
